In Jackson Park.

Attractive Features of the Forestry Building.

Choice Specimens of Trees and Timber From All Parts of the Globe.

Gladstone's Axe in a Glass Case—An Inkling of Ontario's Splendid Forest Resources—Exhibits From the Dominion at Large.

(Special Correspondence of the Advertiser.)

World's Fair, Jackson Park, Chicago, Aug. 9.—The coolest corner I have been able to find in the White City is the forestry building. Close to the ceaseless lapping of the waves on the shore of lake Michigan, in the extreme southeastern part of the park, there is always a grateful breeze playing through its piney portals. Beautifully situated, it is one of the most unique and interesting buildings of the World's Fair, both for its style of architecture and the highly attractive exhibits it contains.

Rustic in design and detail, the forestry building is probably the most expensive of that particular kind ever erected in America. It cost $100,000. The sides are made of slabs with the bark removed. There is a wide veranda encircling the whole building, the columns of which, supporting the roof, are all of varied tree trunks. They are bunched in groups of three, one of which will be from 16 to 20 inches in diameter and the other two companions smaller. They are all 25 feet in height and neatly labeled. The dimensions of the building are 528 by 208 feet. Inside are all sorts of wood, both in the rough and manufactured state, from every clime—plain, mountain, seashore, river bottom, swamp and jungle have all contributed to the display.

The central exhibit in the building is a grand pyramid built of specimens of wood from all over the world. Verily it is a universal congress of blocks. California's contribution, a cutting fourteen feet in diameter of red wood, 475 years old when Columbus landed under the scant shade of the palm trees of San Salvador, forms the base of the pyramid. Around and upon it are grouped ching-chang from Siam, bamboo from Japan, teak wood from India, birch wood from Ontario, and specimens from all other countries.

And there is a real, sure enough axe in a glass case that figures as a sort of frontispiece to this wonderful wood-grouping in the central exhibit. It is Gladstone's axe, the very axe the Grand Old Man used in cutting out the undergrowth at Hawarden when in training to knock out Salisbury in the political arena. Some of the specimens in the exhibits attract special attention. There is a mammoth red wood plank 16 feet 5 inches wide, 12 feet 9 inches long and 5 inches thick, cut from a California tree 35 feet in diameter, and supposed to be 1,500 years old. A beautiful carved door, made of teak wood from British India, is much admired; and a very large birch knot from Peterboro county, Ontario, attracts no end of attention. There are collections of wood from 25 of the States, representing numberless varieties of forest growth. Sixteen foreign nations and 31 individual exhibitors, domestic and foreign, and among them the Province of Ontario, make a very creditable showing, and withal a very practical one.

The Ontario section is on the main aisle, south of the Dominion court, and occupies a floor space of 1,000 square feet. It is fronted by a handsome Corinthian archway, over which is the sign "Ontario" in large gold letters. The whole is surmounted by Canadian flags and emblems. The Ontario exhibit tends to show the splendid forest resources of the Province in a manner that arouses the greatest interest, especially among practical lumbermen, builders, wood and cabinet workers.

There are 66 exhibits in the log and squared blocks, comprising all the valuable woods, such as red pine, spruce, oak, ash, beech, maple, birch, etc., all neatly arranged, and relieved at intervals with sample boards, beautifully polished.

An attractive feature is a case of polished wood specimens sent by the Hon. A. S. Hardy, Commissioner of Crown Lands, some 30 different kinds of wood being represented. A pyramid of blocks ornamented with carved Indian hunting scenes from D. S. Hill of the Six Nations Indians, also attracts much attention. There are particularly fine specimens of black cherry and white pine.

Mr. Geo. Harte, of Saltfleet, Ont., is the very efficient and courteous superintendent of this section. Mr. Mathew Gaetz, who is here to meet and interest German visitors in the exposition, is a valuable acquisition to the staff of the Ontario commission.

The other 2,000 feet of space allotted to Canada is divided between Quebec, British Columbia and the Northwest Territories. The Dominion has a large collection of photography of living trees, contributed by the Geological Survey Museum, Ottawa. The photographs are shown in frames made of the wood represented in the picture.

Chief Buchanan is said to have expressed the opinion that the exhibit of commercial timber made by Ontario is the best in the building. However that may be as regards the fir woods, the birch, beech, cherry and other fine hard woods capable of brilliant polish cause great admiration.

No less than 600 inquiries by letter have already been received as the first fruits of this wonderful display of Canadian woods. The value to the Dominion of this advertisement of its forest wealth will presently be appreciated at its true worth.

This week has witnessed the death of a distinguished citizen of the White City in Senator McNaughton, the executive commissioner for New York State, who succumbed to dysentery last Sunday. This is notable as the first break in the ranks of commissioners resident in Jackson Park. His last public address at the Buchanan banquet was a most apt and admirable one. The memorial services Tuesday in the magnificent banquet hall of the New York building, attended by members of all the commission, were touchingly simple and sincere.
