James McIntyre's New Poem.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

During a heated term like the present it is well to reflect on shady bowers, and of rich milk, curds and cream.

I observe with pleasure that the 70 pounds of the mammoth cheese which was returned to this country has been pronounced by the chief chemist of the Dominion experimental farms to be fully equal to the best English Stilton cheese. I was delighted with its success, as I had for a long time previous predicted its advent and triumph.

The Greek poets in the ancient times would have feigned that—

Great Jove, on high Olympus' height,
Would have feasted on it with delight,
Or, as a bolt, would it have hurled
And overwhelmed the heathen world:
Or on this globe conferred fresh boon—
A bright, refulgent, radiant moon.

Canadian poets have lost a generous patron by the death of Mr. Duncan McIntyre, of Montreal.

The Province of Ontario
Doth much unto the dairy owe;
And she may yet still fondly dream
Of good milk, cows, curds, cheese and cream.

Though we have sung much of the charms of dairy farms, yet we are afraid we have not done justice to the dutiful and beautiful dairymaid, of whom we now sing:

No one can help but love Mary,
Sweet girl who takes care of the dairy;
She milks the cows in grassy leas,
'Neath the cool, umbrageous trees.

She seems graceful as a fairy,
Such winning ways has dear Mary;
So charming she on bended knees,
Draws brooks of milk for to make cheese.

Through pasture fields flows a pure stream,
No wonder cows give sweetest cream,
Of lacteal loads if given them ease,
When Mary's gentle hand doth squeeze;

And draws off their flowing udders,
From which springs fine-flavored cheddars.
Sweet is the scent of blooming peas,
And clover bloom with cows agrees.

With riches from the flow of milk,
Mary oftimes does dress in silk;
How pleasant is the sound of bees
When they the sweetest blossoms seize.

For poet's theme what is fitter
Than to sing of golden butter?
The kindly cows, it doth them please,
When Mary sings them songs and glees.

A cow ill-tempered and contrary
Soon is soothed by voice of Mary.
Stroke of hand doth her appease,
And doth calm her reveries.

And from causes such as these
Canada did win with ease
High honor with her mammoth cheese,
Which sailed with triumph o'er the seas.

How to Cure a Corn.

It is one of the easiest things in the world to cure a corn. Do not use acids or other caustic preparations, and don't cut a hole in your boot. It is simply to apply Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, and in three days the corn can be removed without pain. Sure, safe, painless. Take only Putnam's Corn Extractor.

Cincinnati was formerly called Porkopolis from the prominence of its packing industries. It is no longer entitled to the name.

It is generally understood that two feet and two hands are necessary for the proper enjoyment of bicycling. Two legs and one hand, or one leg and two hands, have been known to do admirable service in cases of necessity, but London has a bicycle rider who is minus both hands and yet enjoys wheeling as well as the worst crank that ever lowered his handle bars to inveigle an unsuspecting public into the belief that he is a racer. In fact, from the nature of this particular man's calling a wheel has become a matter of absolute necessity to him. Several years ago when the C. P. R. was slowly eating its way through a cut near Komoka an unfortunate workman lost both his hands by means of one of the enormous steam scoops used for excavating. Time passed and the man recovered his health but he was helpless and worse than penniless. Notwithstanding the fact that corporations are alleged to have no souls the railroad company gave him a position as messenger. His legs were sound and in time he got a pair of imitation steel hands. Covered with dark gloves this hid the deformity, and no one would suspect unless they knew the story that the young man had anything wrong with him. I saw him making a purchase once and the clerk nearly took a fit when this able-bodied young man asked her to place the purchase in his pocket and help herself to the change. Of course if she had been a married woman she would have felt quite at home as soon as her hand touched the change in his pocket. Being single she blushed slightly and took her first lesson at securing change out of a convenient vest pocket. The young man prospered and became possessed of a cushion-tired safety, and now he rides a pneumatic machine. The only difference between it and any other machine is in the handles, which turn up and back, and allow of the steel hands being set on them and held in position by the handles passing through between the thumb and fingers. In this manner he rides and dismounts without the slightest inconvenience.

But speaking of pockets. I have always been imbued with the idea that jokes relative to the position of women's pockets were without foundation in fact. This I now attribute to the fact that I was never commissioned at an impressionable time of my life to find one. I would probably have not yet been disillusionized had I not witnessed an amusing case of "lost pocket" in a street car the other day. And this was a case where a woman—not a man—could not discover the whereabouts for the time being of her own particular pocket. A stout woman got on a down town car near William street. The other passengers were another lady and myself. After a while, and after the rule of all good drivers the man at the dashboard commenced to look at the fare box, and then to look inquiringly at the passengers. This is the Delsartean mode of saying, "Fare, please." I noticed that a stout lady had become quite red in the face by this time, and then she stood straight up and turned her head in the direction where her pocket usually reposed. In this manner she strained her neck and turned completely around. Then she sat down exhausted. She closed her eyes despairingly, but suddenly opened them again, as a bright idea struck her. She became all smiles, and arose and stepped over to where the other lady was. Then she bent over and whispered something in her ear. "Certainly," answered the lady addressed. The stout one turned around and, after a moment of painful suspension, her companion handed her the purse. The fare was paid at once, and the two women became quite chummy. Had she ever had such an experience?

"Oh, no," replied the little woman, "I always carry my purse in my hand."

"I think I will myself," answered the stout woman.

At last I had found the reason why women carry their purses in their hands.

I heard of a queer instance of horse sense the other day. A young man living in the outskirts of the city had been ill for more than a year and had grown quite low and weak from lung trouble. Although so ill that when the weather was favorable the sick boy could not take a carriage ride without pillows and overcoat and muffler, he lately evinced an ardent longing to see Port Stanley before he died. As his Sunday school picnic was to come off about this time it was arranged that he should be taken down with it. The day was a trifle cool, but the young man was well wrapped up and lifted into the carriage to be taken to the station. Everything was ready and the word was given to go ahead. But the horse absolutely refused to move. It was useless to urge, and of no more use to beat. The faithful animal had never acted so before, but the journey had to be abandoned and the horse returned to the stable. The friends at the station waited in vain, and at last went alone. Since then they have been wondering what came over the horse. I don't profess to explain its action. Do you?

Cutting Acquaintances.

There are some acquaintances we would be glad to cut. They do us no credit and draw too largely upon our kindness and our cash. Other acquaintances there are that drain our life's blood and sap our vitality. Dyspepsia and its accompanying evils, impure blood, mental depression, night-mares, fear and nervousness are acquaintances to be disposed of with all celerity. Heed this, ye sufferers! Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and your unpleasant acquaintances will soon be gone, for this sovereign remedy drives out all the impurities from the system. The only blood-purifier so certain in curative action that it can be sold on trial. See guarantee of cure with bottle.

One of the new rifles used by the Italian soldiers sends a ball with force enough to go through five inches of solid oak at a distance of 4,000 feet.

A Boon to Horsemen.—One bottleo English Spavin Liniment completely removed a curb from my horse. I take pleasure in recommending the remedy, as it acts with mysterious promptness in the removal from horses of hard, soft or calloused lumps, blood spavin, splints, curbs, sweeny, stifles and sprains. A GLASGOW MIRACLE.

A Scotch Lassie Rescued by a Canadian.

Her Life was Despaired of—Subject to Fainting Spells and Heart Trouble—Doctors Said Recovery was Impossible—A Wonderful Story.

(From the Glasgow Echo.)

The case of "Little Nell," whose miraculous cure was reported in the newspapers, with a subsequent letter from the Rev. Samuel Harding, is but one in a series of similar cases in Glasgow. The latest is that of Miss Lizzie Duncan, a young woman who has been snatched back to life. She was in what is termed a "decline"—wasting away by inches before the eyes of her parents, and her sad condition seems to have been known to a number of people. Consequently when she was found to have escaped the threatened death, and to be, apparently, as well as anyone in Glasgow, a tremendous impetus was given to the prevalent talk, and an Echo reporter was directed to make a searching investigation, with the result that the strange story was entirely confirmed.

Arriving at 208 Sterling road, the reporter was conducted into the presence of Mrs. Duncan by a rosy-cheeked young woman, who proved to be Miss Duncan, who looked in no way like an invalid.

"This is the lassie," said the mother. "Heaven knows that a miracle has been wrought upon her. Eighteen months ago Lizzie began to pine away. The color left her entirely, and she appeared to be as weak as water. One Sunday morning she said, "Oh, mother, I canna rise today," and before she had got out the words her whiteness became like that of a corpse, and she fell away into a faint. I sent for the doctor, who said she had heart disease. When he saw her again she had grown worse, and the doctor said, "The poor lassie is very far through." We expected that poor Lizzie would not live long. There was no color in her face. She was wasting away, her cheek bones sticking through as if they would break the skin. Her arms and legs were just bones. The doctor said, "Lizzie may stand all winter, but if she does, that will be all." One day, however, I chanced to read of several cases in which dying persons had been restored to life by a new scientific method—some pills, not like other medicine — but altogether of extraordinary virtue, called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I said to my husband, "In the name of God let's try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Well, before the first box was empty there was an improvement. She persevered and when she had finished her fifth box she was perfectly well, and there is not now a stronger young woman in the townhead of Glasgow, though at one time she was a living skeleton. You can ask any of the neighbors," said Mrs. Duncan in conclusion, "or any person in the street and they will confirm my story."

"I am stronger than ever I was in my life," added the daughter, "yet I can hardly describe how ill I was. I was certainly dying. I could neither go up nor down stairs; I was afraid to walk on account of the fluttering sensation at my heart. I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as my mother has described, and feel that they saved my life."

Miss Wood, the lady who drew the reporter's attention to the case, said that the parents had their daughter's photograph taken, for they thought that she would soon be sleeping in her grave. Lizzie once visited her, and was so weak that she had to carry her back to her house. "The change," said Miss Wood in conclusion, has been wonderful. She is now a sonsie lass, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been an instrument in God's own hands."

AFTER THE BALL.

The School Demonstration Committee Windup—The Cost of the Affair.

The final business meeting of the demonstration committee of the Board of Education was held last night, when accounts amounting to $579 were passed for payment. W. Sanders, who has acted as chairman of the committee for 1894, on motion of Mr. Murphy, seconded by Mr. Wilkins, was tendered a hearty vote of thanks for his untiring labors from start to finish. Mr. Sanders returned thanks to the members of the committee, who appeared to be actuated with but one idea, and that was to make the demonstration a success — and it was a grand success. The business had been conducted pleasantly and promptly, and nothing more could be desired. Votes of thanks were also passed to the London Street Railway Company for their hearty co-operation and for the handsome banner presented for a prize; to the Western Fair Association for the use of the ring and grand stand; to Caretaker Burdick for his valuable services throughout the entire affair; to Mr. T. A. Browne for acting as starter in the games, and to the W. C. T. U. for taking charge of the refreshments. Several gentlemen referred to the different members of the board who had taken a deep interest in the affair, particular mention being made of Messrs. Griffin, Murphy, Wilkins, MacRobert, Alexander, Powell, Stephenson, Turner, Logan, Craig, Dr. Campbell and others.

The Coming Western Fair Promises to Excel All Others.

Intending exhibitors at the great agricultural exhibition should bear in mind that they cannot wait until the closing dates for making entries and then expect to get as complete accommodation as those who make their entries early. It is the rule, and a good one, that the first to come shall receive choice in regard to location so far as possible, and many entries have been received by the secretary already. There is no competitive fair on the dates of the Western Fair this year, and everything indicates a large increase of exhibitors. Should you have been overlooked in the mailing of prize lists a postal card addressed to Mr. Thos. A. Browne will secure one by return mail. The special attractions committee is at work arranging for the best attractions that can be procured. Getting exhibitions is the secretary's first care; the visitors will be attended to later on.

INCONTESTABILITY.

The policies of this company are incontestable after two years, from any cause, excepting the non-payment of premiums.

DIVIDENDS

are declared, either quinquennially or at the end of twenty years, or the Survivorship Distribution plan, as may be elected. To survivors of the twenty years distribution classes, seven different modes of settlement are offered, any one of which may be selected at the end of the period.

LOANS ON POLICIES.

Not infrequently a policyholder finds it impossible to meet a premium when due; or he may desire to borrow a sum of money for other purposes. This company makes advances on its policies as soon as they have a cash surrender value on very liberal terms. No charge is made for executing the loans, and it is not necessary to produce the policy. This is a valuable privilege and an easy method of raising money, while it is a safe and inexpensive investment for the company. The general rule is to oan 90 per cent of the cash surrender value of the policy.

REINSTATEMENT OF POLICIES.

Lapsed policies may be revived at any time within six months of the non-payment of premium by furnishing the company with a "warranty" of the continued good health of the insured. A new medical examination may in some cases be required, but generally a personal statement of the condition of health is accepted.
