SPECIAL FEATURE, GEM, NEXT WEEK

Variety of Productions With Good Stories and Successful Players—Chapter 11 "Pauline" Today

Today will close the 11th Episode of "The Perils of Pauline" at the Gem Theatre. It gave much satisfaction yesterday. For the opening on Monday and Tuesday a fine three part story "Rods of Wrath" has been selected, a tale of adventure on the sea and on land, while the latest Pathe News Weekly will be shown containing many features of current interest, relating to daily events in various parts, as well as to scenes pertaining to the war.

A special four-part production, in colors, entitled "More Than" will be presented on Wednesday and Thursday, a story of intrigue, adventure and romance. The Friday and Saturday bill next week will, of course, contain another installment in the now famous "Perils of Pauline" series, chapter 12, showing Pearl White in the leading role a prisoner of Gypsies. At each change of bill next week, bright up-to-date comedies, of the kind for which the Gem has become noted, will be given.

RICH PROGRAMME FOR NEXT WEEK

Mack's Musical Revue Promises Very Enjoyable Entertainment

If you have not yet seen the second show given by Mack's Musical Revue, make it a point to do so at either the matinee or evening performance today.

Commencing Monday an entire new programme will be presented, consisting of some of the latest novelty songs from popular New York successes. Among them will be a Greek Fantasy sung by Eleanor Ott and danced by the Misses Reading, Miller, Sands and chorus. The 'Ginger Girl," Rose Reading, will show some new dances and Nat Farnum has a new comedy monologue. Miss Akerstrom will be seen in a new laugh producing sketch. Bud Shephard will be heard in a pianologue, while Winstanly, Reading and Shephard will present a startling new novelty song and dance.

A number that will be whistled by everybody after the performance will be The Lilac Domino, the reigning song sensation of New York. Miss Sands will sing this, assisted by the company. Miss Evans, assisted by Bud Shephard will surprise her admirers with selections from Il Trovatore. Other features will be presented, completing a delightful evening's entertainment. The programme wil be in two parts with a ten minutes intermission. Get the habit, and enjoy yourself.

NIHILISM DEAD IN RUSSIA, SAYS TORONTO BROKER

Stories Exaggerated by Germans to Prejudice British Against Their Allies

London, April 17—Nihilism does not exist in Russia today, and at all times has been exaggerated, declared Aemilius Jarvis, a Toronto broker and capitalist, who has returned to London after a trip to Petrograd and Moscow. He added that the Russian officials attributed the highly colored stories of the Nihilistic type to German sources, the underlying desire being to create prejudice among the liberty-loving British against their present Allies. Mr. Jarvis was profoundly impressed with the far-reaching and beneficial results of the prohibition of vodka, and cited figures showing the striking increase in savings bank deposits, and the decreased mortality returns since the national vice was banned.

As president of the Canadian Locomotive Works, Mr. Jarvis went to Russia on the lookout for business, but he found that the Russian government wheels revolved very slowly. The locomotives which he wished to make for the government were badly needed, and had been requisitioned for, but the orders had a tendency to stick at the treasury department. The journey to Russia via Bergen and Finland, brings travelers within sixty miles of the Arctic circle.

FINDS LORD'S DAY ACT VIOLATED

clude that what took place on Sunday night in the defendant's store—fronting on a public street—was a work either of necessity or mercy, neither do I think, even admitting that one might procure a meal there, that the defendant can carry on and transact business openly as he was doing on the Sunday night in question, when the police constables bought and paid for goods.

For the defence, the Queen vs. Albertie has been cited. That was a case under the Provincial Lord's Day Act of Ontario. Albertie was the keeper of a victualing house, or eating house. The judgement says Albertie's place was kept open on Sunday only "to supply meals." In the Toronto case under the Ontario act, Albertie held a license from the city of Toronto for the carrying on of a victualing house. The Ontario act is in this and other respects dissimiar from the Canadian act.

In the English act inns, cookshops or victualing houses are excepted; in our Lord's day act there is an absence of any such provision as there is contained in the English act. The two matters before me are not similar to either the Ontario or English cases. In the case Irens before Lord Coleridge, Irens was an inn keeper. There is no pretence in either of the cases here pending that either is an inn keeper. Then again in the Dominion Lord's Day act neither an inn keeper nor any eating house keeper is specified in the twenty four exceptions set forth in section 18.

If the letter and the spirit of the law be observed, if on Sunday no work be done, no business be transacted, then the youth of our town will not be scandalized, the Christian people will be gratified and the stranger within our gates will be edified at the due observance of the Lord's Day.

"Nothing contained in sections 15 and 16 of this act shall prevent druggists, confectioners, grocers and fruit dealers, keepers of restaurants with accommodation for not less than ten guests where meals are regularly served from selling soda water and all temperance drinks during such prohibited hours except on Sunday."

According to our law and under the evidence and after having given the matter full consideration, I have come to the conclusion that the defendants are guilty of the offence charged, to wit: that they did in the city of St. John in their respective stores carry on and transact business of their ordinary calling contrary to section 5, of Chapter 153.

I therefore adjudge them guilty and sentence them to a fine of $40 in default of payment they shall spend one month in jail.

Leonard A. Conlon appeared for the defendants and said the cases would be appealed.

The Best Quality at a Reasonable Price

Buy Diamonds Now

For a number of years to come you will probably be able to buy Diamond Rings at Sharpe's for $25 to $400, or upwards, but you will not be able to secure as fine quality stones as these prices now buy, because Diamond production, especially fine quality, decreases annually, the cost of mining increases, and dealers are forced to pay higher prices, and consequently to ask higher prices.

These figures show how expensive it is to delay Diamond purchases:—In the last 10 years the value of fine quality Diamonds has advanced at the rate of 17 per cent. a year; the value of good quality stones at the rate of 11 per cent. a year.

See Sharpe's April display of Diamonds. You will not be asked to buy.

JEWISH LAW LORD URGES HIS PEOPLE TO JOIN COLORS

London, April 17.—Lord Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, speaking at a Jewish recruiting meeting in London said:

"England's appeal for men has not been made in vain. To you members of our own community, I say that we Jews have enjoyed in England the security of freedom not always known, unfortunately, everywhere. England has given us priceless liberty, and we should be mean if we did not recognize our present duty.

"Jews are good citizens of this country, but England is in need of our assistance. Let us render here the greatest service that we can by responding to her call for men. There already are 11,000 Jews serving in the army and navy. That is a good record for so comparatively small a community, but now is the occasion for us to seize the luxury, of proving our loyalty and devotion to this country.

"The imbued qualities of our race go to the making of good soldiers. Self-sacrifice, tolerance, tenacity, courage and enthusiasm, the old Maccabean spirit, is still there. I repeat that England deserves well of the Jews. The help that we give her in her need must be good in numbers, in quality, and in achievements on the field of battle. Let it be forever said that the Jews of England worthily led the response for the appeal made by the king and Lord Kitchener, to crush the spirit that idolizes might and scorns right."

MORE ABOUT STORY OF KAISER OWNING LARGE TRACTS IN CANADA

The London Evening Standery says:

It has not only been reported for a long time that the German Emperor is a large land owner in Canada, but it has been asserted that he is the actual, though not the nominal, proprietor of more acres in that British possession than he ever had in all the former German colonies put together. His Canadian possessions are said to be held in the name of his friend and factotum, Count Alvensleben. The Canadian government is understood to have been aware of the real ownership of the areas in question, which include some lands of great richness, and, according to Reuter's New York correspondent, is making a thorough investigation into the validity of the transfer of certain of these holdings to American citizens friendly to Germany.

Count Alvensleben was in British Columbia before the war broke out, but then crossed the frontier into the United States, and has since been visiting Seattle. In British Columbia he owns some hundreds of thousands of acres of an estimated value running into millions of dollars.

The question of the validity of the transfer rests on the alternative whether the holdings are to be regarded as belonging to a private individual, or whether the Kaiser is to be considered as the representative of an enemy state. If the former interpretation holds the dominion officials are powerless to interfere, even though the individual concerned be the sovereign of a hostile nation.

The Emperor William is also said to have a large interest in the Hohenzollern block of the New York City loan, the interest on which is payable through London.

BURIED TODAY

The funeral of deBlaviere Carritte took place this afternoon from his late residence, 76 Coburg street. Burial services were conducted by Ven. Archdeacon Raymond, and interment took place in Fernhill. The pall-bearers were: J. D. Brown, George McAvity, George Ketchum, J. S. Gregory, Frank Flewelling and C. S. Hanington. The funeral cortege was large and impressive, and testified to the esteem in which Mr. Carritte was held.

The funeral of Mrs. Frank M. Shannon took place this afternoon from her late residence, 64 Wright street. Burial services were conducted by Rev. Gordon Dickie and Rev. R. P. McKim, and interment took place in Fernhill.

Chicago's Great Strike

Chicago, April 17—The lockout of 16,000 union carpenters assumed serious proportions today. There are thrown out of employment 125,000 wage earners, thousands of whom had no connection with the building industry itself.

The contractors have withdrawn their previous offer of a partial wage increase.

The county jail at Georgetown, Del., is without a prisoner, the turnkey is on his vacation, chickens are roosting in the cells and the jail yard probably will be planted to early corn unless another application for imprisonment appears.
