ST. VITUS DANCE.

A MALADY THAT HAS LONG BAFFLED MEDICAL SKILL.

A Speedy Cure for the Trouble at Last Discovered — The Particulars of the Cure of a Little Girl Who Was a Severe Sufferer.

From The Ottawa Journal.

In a handsome brick residence on the 10th line of Goulborn Township, Carleton Co., lives Mr. Thomas Bradley, one of Goulborn's most successful farmers. In Mr. Bradley's family is a bright little daughter, 8 years of age, who had been a severe sufferer from St. Vitus dance, and who had been treated by physicians without any beneficial results. Having learned that the little one had been fully restored to health by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a correspondent of The Journal called at the family residence for the purpose of ascertaining the facts, and found the little girl a picture of brightness and good health. Mrs. Faulkner, a sister of the little one, gave the following information: "About 18 months ago Alvira was attacked by that terrible malady, St. Vitus dance, and became so bad that we called in two doctors, who held out no hope to us of her ultimate cure, and she was so badly affected with the 'dance' as to require almost constant watching. About this time we read in The Ottawa Journal of a similar case cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which gave us renewed hope. We procured a couple of boxes, and before these were all used there was a perceptible improvement. After using six boxes more she was entirely free from the disease, and as you can see is enjoying the best of health. Several months have passed since the use of the Pink Pills was discontinued, but there has been no return of the malady nor any symptoms of it. We are quite certain Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured her and strongly recommend them in similar cases."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexion, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., or Schenectady, N.Y.

PRITTIE CANNOT RECOVER.

Because the Mortgagees of the Property Had Also Insured and Compromised Their Claim.

The action of Mrs. Prittie against the Connecticut Fire Insurance Company of Hartford was begun on Monday afternoon and concluded early yesterday. The suit was to recover the amount of a policy of insurance taken out by the plaintiff in her own name in the defendant company. The premises were burnt on the 14th of May, 1894 (exactly a year ago). Payment of the policy was resisted for a number of reasons, but the action was ultimately dismissed on the ground that mortgagees of the property had also insured the premises and had compromised their claim of $15,600 for $6000. Notice had also been given to the insurance company that the mortgagees claimed any benefit that might arise under the Prittie policy. Mr. Justice Meredith held this prevented the plaintiff's right to recover. Only Mrs. Prittie was examined. Mr. E. B. Eyckman and Mr. Kirkpatrick appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. G. H. Watson, Q.C., for the company.

THE PAY OF JURORS.

Justice Meredith Explains the Law in the Case.

The jury assizes were brought to a conclusion yesterday forenoon. In reference to a memorial from some of the jurymen, Mr. Justice Meredith drew attention to the changes in the law made at the recent session of the Local Legislature for the benefit of those residing outside the county town. When jurymen are relieved from partial attendance during the assizes they are nevertheless entitled to two days' pay while so released or may return home and charge the usual mileage rate if a County Council passes a bylaw to bring the regulation into force (the deputy sheriff informed the judge that the York County Council has passed such a bylaw). Non-resident jurors attending on a Saturday and Monday following are now to be paid for the intervening Sunday.

Ocean Travel.

So great is the ocean travel this year, from both Montreal and New York, that some of the steamers sailing in June are absolutely full. Early reservation of berths in consequence cannot be impressed too strongly on those who contemplate a transatlantic trip, as it ensures a good choice.

New York, Boston and Philadelphia passengers, from their proximity to the New York offices, and Montrealers always keeps themselves informed how quickly the steamers are filling, and Toronto travelers can be served equally as well by telegraph. Any who have not yet arranged should make application to Barlow Cumberland, 72 Yonge-street, obtaining sailing lists, plans of steamers, rates and every information.

North Toronto School Board.

The board met at the Town Hall, Eglinton, on Monday evening, the 13th inst. All the members were present. Communications were read from Mr. D. Fotheringham, inspector, expressing his entire satisfaction with the efficiency of the schools at his recent visit; from the North Toronto Athletic Association, asking for permission to connect with the school water service and for the use of one of the Davisville school rooms for a committee meeting room. Both the latter requests were granted, under the supervision of committees appointed by the board. The annual children's picnic was discussed and laid over for disposal at their next regular meeting in June. Accounts were passed as follows: Water rate $25, T. Pinnegar, levelling, $3; insurance $12.25, taxes $7.78.

York Riding and Driving Club.

The question of granting a hotel license to the above for their premises at Moore Park, Deer Park, came up before the adjourned meeting of the license commissioners at the Clyde Hotel on Saturday last. Mr. Raney represented the club and Mr. J. Gibson of Deer Park opposed the application. The application was not decided at the meeting on Saturday, but it has since been learned that the license has been granted.

There is danger in neglecting a cold. Many who have died of consumption dated their troubles from exposure, followed by a cold which settled on their lungs, and in a short time they were beyond the skill of the best physician. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been spared. This medicine has no equal for curing coughs, colds and all affections of the throat and lungs.

Recital for Charity.

To-morrow night a recital will be given by pupils of Signor Tesseman at the Pavilion in aid of the King's Daughters' work, and assisted by Mrs. Lee, Misses Sullivan, Mara, Massie and 'cello quartette, a full house is anticipated, and a liberal collection should be given. The proceeds are used for charitable purposes.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR THE CITY

Contractor Neelon Fails in His Action Against the Council and Architect Lennox Re the Court House.

The Court of Appeal yesterday delivered judgment in the long-standing case of the City of Toronto and Sylvester Neelon. The judgment was in the favor of the city. The chief points in the finding were:

That the New Brunswick brown-stone furnished by Mr. Neelon for the new municipal buildings was not what the contract called for.

That Architect Lennox was not biased in his judgment that the stone was not.

That he did not act with a malicious motive in dismissing Mr. Neelon.

That the contract gave him the power to dismiss.

Stages of the Case.

The case has been before the courts since the summer of 1892.

Mr. Neelon wishes to be allowed to offer at the trial of his yet untried suit against the city evidence of bias and bad faith on the part of Architect Lennox, through whom Mr. Neelon was deposed. Such evidence Mr. Justice Rose at the trial of the action declined to receive until it appeared that Mr. Neelon had suffered an injustice as the result of the architect's action. The Chancery Divisional Court confirmed the judgment of Mr. Justice Rose in this, and his further judgment that the architect had the power to dismiss without the consent of the Court House Committee of the Council, which Mr. Neelon contended was absolutely necessary. This appeal to the Court of Appeal was then taken, and yesterday Mr. Neelon again failed on both the question of the submission of evidence and as to the power of the architect.

The costs of this yet untried suit now amount to over $20,000.

The appeal to this court lasted three days, Blake, Lash & Cassels appearing for Mr. Neelon, D'Alton McCarthy, Q.C., for the city, and Beatty, Blackstock & Co. for Mr. Lennox.

HENRY IRVING.

A Career of Unremitting Toil Rewarded by Success and the Applause of a Nation.

There is always a peculiar glamour of fascination inseparably connected with histrionic life that commends itself more or less forcibly to the imaginative, non-professional mind. Brilliant vistas of intoxicating triumphs, of applauding audiences, of success easily won, are the enchanting visions of many a young, would-be-actor, who little dreams of the hard, practical work, of the days and nights of unremitting toil, that, even when there is real genius, constitute the life of the true artist. There is no royal road to this more than to any other profession; and, as Henry Irving is always the first to proclaim, he who would ascend the heights must climb step by step from the lowest rung of the ladder with patience and with courage; happy, indeed, if he can also bring to bear the equable temperament and the strength of will that can neither be unduly cast down by failure or injured by success.

Well for art is it that Irving discovered in early life that the dry details of commerce, to which he had been destined, possessed no charms for the soul, full of genius, that longed to spread its wings, and be free to soar into the world of art! Strange, too, that his first appearance on any stage should actually have taken place at the theatre in Sunderland bearing the same name as the one in the great metropolis which is the scene of his continuous triumphs, and where he has so long endeared himself to the public.

Looking back through a heap of old diaries of the last score of years, it appears that your first meeting with the great tragedian occurred during an early revival of "Hamlet," on a never-to-be-forgotten occasion. It was at a brilliant social gathering at the house of an immediate relative—the late William Spottiswoode, President of the Royal Society—a man of profound learning, of grand and noble character, withal of singular modesty. Royalty was present and listened with rapt attention as the great scientist spoke on a favorite topic, and explained his researches into and his theories of the "polarization of light." Presently, when the group dispersed, the passing stream of guests brought you into the near vicinity of your host, who was conversing with Mr. Irving about "Hamlet." While you stood listening an introduction took place. Faithful diary! It also records the fact that when the next evening came, you were privileged to be admitted behind the scenes, and received the promised welcome from Hamlet himself.

During his first ten years, or thereabouts, of stage life, Mr. Irving had his ups and downs, in common with many another young actor, who has since become distinguished, for not by a single bound did he leap into fame. He fulfilled many engagements in the provinces, and for two or more years was engaged at the theatre in Edinburgh, playing with Miss Helen Faucit, Miss Cushman, Robson, and other stars of that time. To this day Edinburgh prides herself on having been his training school, and when it is known that Mr. Irving proposes to repair thither on one of his tours, the dignified old city becomes excited, and he is received with more than an ordinary ovation. And a severe training school it was, for during the two years or so he impersonated between two and three hundred different characters, thus laying in an enormous stock of experience for future use. These parts, as may be supposed, embraced a wide range, and varied considerably; now it was in pantomime, then in tragedy, and not infrequently did it happen that he was called upon to play in three separate roles on the same evening.

There were early struggles at Manchester, too; but they were all part of the training, not only in the young actor's art, but in the formation of his mind character, and were leading him ever upward to his ultimate reward. Hamlet had apparently always an attraction for him, and he played in that part for the first time in Manchester. It, perhaps, may not have been exactly his grand and finished Hamlet of these later days. The illustrious actor has already the proud satisfaction of looking back and feeling that his life's work of instructing, of elevating, and of refining the public taste, will leave an undying record.

There is but little need to make more than a passing mention of Mr. Irving in private life, kindly, genial, courteous—ever considerate and full of tact, his good works are countless and unobtrusive. His strict justice commands respect, while his tender heart and nobility of nature call forth something more, and that is the affection and devotion of his legion of friends.—Lloyd's Weekly.

THE HYAMS MURDER TRIAL

fish and justices of the peace," a combination which convulsed the court.

There Were Few Customers.

Witness explained the construction of the office. "Who attended to the customers?" asked Mr. Osler.

"I never noticed any customers, except once or twice, whether before or after the tragedy, I cannot say, and I sent them up to 11 King-street."

Miss Lattimer then told of the visit of Harry Hyams to her house in Richmond-street near Peter about 5 o'clock on the Saturday night and of his leaving with her three letters to be delivered before coming to the warehouse Monday at Deer Park, north of the city, at some number over 300 in Wellesley-street, at the east end, and in Yonge-street. She had once or twice previously delivered letters.

Dallas Let the Weight Slip.

Then the witness told of her arrival at the warehouse about 11.45 and of seeing Harry Hyams. The latter said: "Poor Willie is killed, he was killed by the weight." He said that his brother was upstairs fixing the weight when it slipped. He had sent his brother home in a cab, as he was running around like a crazy man. Harry said that he was not there at the time.

Harry Hyams then told her to go to her lunch. When she returned some person who was there told her that it was no place for her and she had better go home. She went up to Martha Wells' place and on Thursday morning resumed work. She continued working for the Hyams until the month of May, when they told her that they were going to close up the warehouse and had consequently no further use for her, and she left. She continued addressing envelopes after the tragedy, but so far as she was aware none had ever been sent out., Apart from addressing the envelopes she did nothing, and she was paid $6 per week.

Little Business Done.

Mabel said that little use was made of the elevator in the Colborne-street warehouse.

To Mr. Lount witness stated that she entered the employ of the prisoners in December, 1892. She would not swear that all the envelopes she had addressed were in the boxes produced, but a great many of them were there. She did not think there could have been many more addressed than those produced, however. Miss Lattimer said that Willie Wells secured her the situation in the warehouse.

Mabel said she had seen Tailor White the day of the tragedy after returning from dinner, but she denied that she said she did not know how it occurred. She admitted seeing Paling at 11 King-street west, the same day, but failed to remember speaking to Paling, although he probably heard the conversation she had with White, as he was present. She did not recollect having said to Phelan Willie was killed by the elevator and that no person was there at the time.

Miss Lattimer said no blood was on Harry Hyams' shirt bosom or cuffs.

Witness admitted that she frequently visited Aylesworth's house in Close-avenue and was on friendly terms with the family. She had occasionally talked over the evidence with Aylesworth and his wife.

The cross-examination with respect to the "work" done by Miss Lattimer brought out the fact that she didn't hurry over the work. "No, of course not," said counsel, "You were working by the week." Miss Lattimer did not think she would address them at the rate of one a minute. She frequently did nothing for a day at a time awaiting instructions from Mr. Hyams as to which section of the directory she should next devote her attention.

The Suppressed Telegram.

Then the Crown once more reverted to the telegram to Jones announcing that Willie would be down at Pickering the day of the tragedy and which Harry Hyams is alleged to have suppressed.

Thomas Allen, telegraph operator, the assistant in Curry's drug store, in January, 1893, did not recollect sending a telegram to Pickering addressed to Jones, and signed Willie. Had he sent one it would have appeared on the record sheet produced.

Mrs. Hyams Again in the Box.

Then the wife of Harry Hyams once more entered the box, and her examination was resumed by Mr. Osler. She testified that Willie Wells was buying the farm at Pickering to rent and not to live upon. Shortly after she met Harry Hyams, the prisoner enquired of her how much money her brothers and herself would have and she was unable to say.

Then Mr. Lount took charge of the witness. She again went over the story of the first meeting of the two families when the prisoners and their mother came to reside with them in Spadina-avenue. The relationship between herself and Harry Hyams did not become more than friendly until the September of 1889, shortly after her sister's wedding, when she became engaged to the prisoner. Some disagreement arose between them and the engagement was broken off and Mrs. Hyams went to Oshawa, returning about January, 1890. She went to live at 98 Gould-street, and resided there until January of 1891. Dallas and his wife had gone to Montreal and Harry and his mother lived at 57 Gould-street, a few doors from where deceased lived. Betwen January of 1890 and January, 1891, Harry Hyams called on her nearly every day, but the engagement was not resumed until January of 1892. "There were no engagements made and broken during 1891, as in that year I was in the States, but I corresponded with Mr. Hyams," she added with a faint smile.

"What business were you in in the States?" said Mr. Lount. "You were a book-agent at one time, were you not?"

"I certainly was not," said the witness. "Oh, well, there is nothing objectionable in that!" said Mr. Lount.

Witness said she was in Toledo for a time, and for two or three months was engaged in circulating a book.

When she returned Harry Hyams again visited her, and at New Year's she again became engaged to him, and this engagement continued until January of 1893.

Mrs. Aylesworth, it will be recollected, swore that Martha was only engaged a few weeks before the tragedy.

At the time of her eldest brother's death she went to Oshawa, returning in February of 1892. Before her brother Harry died the prisoners were arranging that the three should go into the brokerage business together.

Witness here detailed the agreement subsequently made whereby she, her sister and Willie loaned the prisoners $3000.

Mrs. Hyams said she had heard Willie speak about the $30,000 policy being a good investment, as he was not going to pay the premiums and would get $2500 in three years.

"I heard Harry Hyams say that the policy was more than my brother could carry or that the premiums were more than he could pay out of his salary," said the witness.

"Well, that is my recollection of what you said when you were here the other day," said Mr. Lount.

The judge's notes were turned up and it was shown that what she did swear was that Harry Hyams said it would be cheaper to take it out on Willie's life, because he was younger than Mr. Hyams.

The Age of the Twins.

Witness said her brother was 22 years of age at the time of the tragedy, and Harry Hyams was 38.

"So that there was 16 years difference between the ages. The policy was an endowment one, and of course it would be cheaper to take out the policy on Willie's life.

"And if the policy wasn't assigned to Mr. Hyams and your brother lived 20 years, your brother would receive an annuity, wouldn't he? Wasn't that discussed?"—A. No; that was not discussed.

The arrangement was that when at the end of five years, Hyams paid your brother $2500, he was to assign the policy to Hyams?—A. Yes.

And in the meantime you were to be the beneficiary?—A. Yes.

And your brother thought it a fairly good venture, getting his life insured and not having to pay the premiums, and at the end of five years he was to get the $2500 for the use of his name?—A. Yes.

Witness heard the arrangement whereby Aylesworth was to receive the percentage on the commission. It was originally proposed that Dallas should get it, but Harry said that perhaps Aylesworth needed it more than Dallas.

And you knew all the time that the Hyams were living in an extravagant, let us say generous, manner?—A They were not living in an extravagant manner then.

But their house was lavishly furnished with some $8000 worth of furniture, was it not?—A. No: the furniture was not all there then.

Continuing witness said she did not visit the Hyams residence very often and consequently was not able to speak as to their extravagant mode of living.

Didn't Wish Mother to Know.

Referring to the remark of Harry that he did not wish his mother to know, Mrs. Hyams stated that her husband gave as a reason that she was very old and subject to heart trouble, and he did not wish to give her a shock that might cause her death.

Witness knew that in August of 1892 Harry Hyams was ill and had an operation performed, and for four months in 1891 he was also ill. She did not understand from Harry Hyams, however, when the insurance on Willie's life was placed, that the prisoner's condition was such as to prevent him getting a policy upon his life. She thought her memory was strong enough to warrant her in saying that no such reason was given—the only thing that was said was that at Willie's age the policy would be cheaper.

Worked in Prisoners' Office.

In February and March of 1892 Mrs. Hyams worked in prisoners' office. From early in 1892 until January 1893 there appeared to be no change in the manner of Harry towards witness. His manner was natural and occasioned no suspicion in her mind. There was dissatisfaction with Willie, however, because he was not getting his $1000.

Witness admitted that if Harry Hyams had been engaged to marry her at the time, her brother's death would necessarily have postponed the wedding day.

After the Telegraph Offices Were Closed.

Mr. Lount's next question had reference to the alleged suppression of the telegram to Jones.

"On the night before the tragedy what time did Harry Hyams leave?" he asked.

"It was after 11 o'clock," was the answer.

"Yes," said Mr. Lount, "after the telegraph offices were closed?"

Mrs. Hyams said she could not be mistaken in saying that Harry Hyams had the money for Willie in the Express office. She was positive he said Express office.

THE SESSIONS OPENED.

There Are No Serious Cases for the Grand Jury's Consideration.

The General Sessions opened yesterday before Judge Morgan. The grand jury personnel is: Charles Caldwell, Edgar Chrysler, Joseph P. Clougher, George B. Crown, John G. Gibson, Seneca Baker, George Charlton, John Crone, William Edward, John Elliott, James A. Fisher, George Murray and William Roundtree. The first-named five are residents of the city, the others belonging to different parts of the county. His Honor's address to the grand jury was short, complimenting them upon the absence of any charges of a serious nature.

Her Majesty's Veterans.

The regular monthly meeting of Her Majesty's Army and Navy Veterans took place last evening at Occident Hall, President S. Griggs in the chair. One candidate, J. Foley, was proposed, and two were initiated. The church parade, which should take place next Sunday, was obliged to be postponed, owing to the Euclid-ave. Methodist Church being renovated. Their picnic will take place at Hanlan's Point and not at Victoria Park as announced, as the old soldiers declare they will not go where they cannot get their beer. A letter was read from Capt. Fahy of the Veterans of '66, asking for their presence at the decoration of the Volunteers' memorial in Queen's Park on June 2. A movement is on foot among the wives and daughters of the Veterans to present the Order with a flag in honor of the Battle of Alma. The flag will be made in Toronto.

Long Branch.

This delightful resort with the opening of the spring is looking more attractive than upon any previous season, and hundreds are visiting it daily.

The improvements made in the grounds last year are now showing to advantage in the broad greensward which will be the delight of the many Sunday school and other picnics who so appreciate the beauties of this charming spot.

The new carousal building is nearing completion. The water supply and sanitary conveniences are being much improved, a complete set of new swings are being erected on the play grounds, and many attractive touches of effect and color added to the park and buildings.

Already a large number of cottages have been leased for the season, and several newcomers have made purchases.

The G.T. Railway summer time-table will be issued in a few days. The regular boat service begins about June 10, and the Toronto and Mimico Electric Railway, it is stated, will be complete and in service to Long Branch within 30 days.

Mrs. Wilkie is again the hostess at Hotel Long Branch, with Mr. E. Smily, the popular manager in charge. Many of last season's guests have re-engaged their apartments, and no doubt a flourishing and prosperous season is looked forward to for this choicest of summering places.

I couldn't slape; an' if it was thot harrd on me hands, how harrd it must be on the durrt!"

This is the way a good old Irish woman praises some washing-powder or other which she prefers to Pearline. As it was proven she had never tried Pearline, the compliment would appear to be in favor of Pearline.

Whoever heard of any one claiming that Pearline hurt the hands? But there's the trouble—Pearline is the original washing compound; its popularity has drawn out thousands of imitations—so popular that to many it indicates any powdered washing material. If you are using Pearline, you are satisfied; if you are dissatisfied, try Pearline. If you are using something with which you are satisfied and it is not Pearline, try Pearline—you will wonder you were satisfied before. Pearline is economical and absolutely harmless.
