SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.

Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.

Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation.

Do You Love Railway Stations?

By RUTH CAMERON

THERE are some kinds of eavesdropping that are really quite excusable, don't you think so?

The crowd held me close behind two young people in the railway station the other night, so close that I couldn't help hearing all they said; and what is more I wouldn't have if I could. For that was the kind of eavesdropping that I call harmless.

He was tall and broad shouldered and fine looking, the kind of young man we like to call typically American. She was a little person, not at all pretty, but with a piquant, radiant face that fairly shone with the love of living. Just then it was tiptilted up to his, and she was saying with a voice as radiant as the face, "Oh, my dear, isn't this place lovely?"

He laughed—a hearty, infectious laugh that was also typically American.

"Well, I don't care," she protested. "It's so exciting and interesting. Everybody's going somewhere and it makes you feel kind of important and alive, and you wonder who everybody is and where they are going and if they are as happy as you are. I just love railway stations."

The crowd suddenly shifted and I was swept in another direction and rudely interrupted in my shameless eavesdropping, but not before I heard the man laugh again. Did you ever realize that a laugh can be as loving as a caress? It can.

The little person, as I said before, was not in the least pretty, while her big lover was tall and clean and handsome, the kind of man that all women just naturally fall in love with. And he had chosen her and was evidently about as much in love as a man can be. Do you want to know what I think was the charm in her that won him away from the prettier girls he might undoubtedly have had?

The fact that she loved railway stations.

You are laughing at that? Well, of course, I only meant it symbolically. That little speech of hers was symbolical of the zest that she evidently found in living. She was undoubtedly one of those blessed folks who are always full of a relish of life, who are so interested, so alive and awake, that even a railway station is an absorbingly interesting place to them. Consequently I did not wonder how the man happened to fall in love with her. I only wondered if he realized how fortunate he was.

A zest in living, such as that which made this little person's face and personality radiant is partly inborn; it also has something to do with one's supply of health and vitality; but again it is partly the result of deliberately refusing to grow up, of keeping the child heart always alive within one, and of opening wide the windows of one's heart and mind to the happiness and meaning of life.

No one who has even the least shade of this charm can fail to be attractive. No one, no matter how beautiful or brilliant, is complete without it.

Do you love railway stations? Is it too late for you to learn to?

REV. R. H. READ TO WEST

Interesting Matters at Meeting of Presbytery of St. John—Caring for Girls

At yesterday afternoon's session of the St. John Presbytery, at which Rev. W. W. Rainnie acted as moderator, a call was extended to Rev. Hibbert R. Read, now pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Carleton, to Moosejaw (Sask.), to ad minister to the congregation of the Minto avenue Presbyterian church there. The call was accepted by Mr. Read and the change of pulpits received the approbation of the Presbytery. Words of appreciation of Mr. Read's work in the St. John Presbytery, and good wishes for success in his western field were expressed by J. R. Cameron, James McLellan and Dr. Duval. Words of regret at Mr. Read's departure from the city were also spoken by Judge Forbes, Rev. L. A. McLean and Rev. J. H. Anderson.

It was decided that Mr. Read's work in Carleton should cease on July 7, and that Dr. McVicar be moderator of the session, and declare the pulpit vacant on July 14.

Judge Forbes then gave an interesting report of the sessions of the general assembly, held recently in Edmonton, and at which he was present.

Rev. George Barker presented a call from Sackville, to Rev. F. G. McIntosh. The call was sustained, and ordered to be transmitted to Truro.

A telegram was received announcing that a call from Aylwin (Que.), to Rev. John Lennox, of Norton, had been sustained by the Ottawa Presbytery. The session adjourned until July 17, when the matter of the last mentioned call will be dealt with.

The resignation of Rev. G. Farquhar, who is to leave for Scotland in the fall, was accepted, and Rev. J. A. McKeigan was appointed moderator of the session pro tem.

A committee was appointed to confer with a committee of the W. F. M. S. regarding the appointment of a deaconess to assist in the work among employed girls in the city. A grant of money for the purpose was also discussed.

A delegation requested that the Fort Kent and St. Francis Presbyterian Mission fields in Maine be turned over to the Congregational conference of Maine for supply. Rev. James Ross will investigate and if the people are willing a trial will be made for one year.

It was decided to confer with the other churches regarding the extension of church work in East St. John and to make application to the church building fund for this work.

Rev. James Calhoun, of the Presbyterian church of Ireland, who is here to attend the induction of his co-presbyter, Rev R. J. Miller in Richmond, conveyed the greetings of his presbytery.

Rev. Mr. Peacock was appointed a provisional supply for the committees during the summer months. The docket showed that four new ministers, Rev. Dr. MacVicar, Rev. J. A. McKeigan, Rev. E. Wylie, and Rev. R. G. Miller, had been added to the roll.

CURED OF DRINK BY SIMPLE REMEDY

A Devoted Wife Helps Her Husband to a Cure Through Samaria Prescription

Mrs. S. of Trenton was in despair. A loving father and a careful provider when sober—her husband had gradually fallen into drinking habits, which were ruining his home, health and happiness. Drink had inflamed his stomach and nerves and created that unnatural craving that kills conscience, love, honor and breaks all family ties.

But read her letter:—

I feel it my duty to say a few words about your Tablets. As you are aware I sent and got a bottle, thinking I would try them in secret. My husband had only taken them a week when he told me he was going to Port Arthur for the summer, so I had to tell him all about the tablets. He said he would take them just the same, so I sent and got the second bottle for fear one would not be enough. He writes me saying he has taken the contents of both bottles and he feels splendid, does not care for drink. In fact, he has not taken any liquor from the first of my giving it to him. I feel I cannot say too much in favor of your wonderful remedy.

Mrs. S. — — —Trenton, Ontario.

Samaria Prescription stops the craving for drink. It restores the shaking nerves, improves the appetite and general health, and makes drink distasteful and even nauseous. It is used regularly by physicians, and hospitals, and is tasteless and odorless, dissolving instantly in tea, coffee or food.

Now, if you know any home on which the curse of drink has fallen, tell them of Samaria Prescription. If you have a husband, father, brother or friend on whom the habit is getting its hold, help him yourself. Write today.

A FREE TRIAL PACKAGE of Samaria Prescription, with booklet giving full particulars, testimonials, price, etc., will be sent absolutely free and postpaid in plain sealed package to anyone asking for it and mentioning this paper. Correspondence sacredly confidential. Write today.

AT BEULAH CAMP

The camp meetings and conference, under the auspices of the Alliance of the Reformed Baptist church, are now in session at Brown's Flats. The business part of the programme was run off yesterday morning, and in the afternoon licentiate L. P. Sabin, of York county, was ordained. The ordination sermon was preached by Rev. M. S. Trafton, of Fort Fairfield.

The camp meetings proper were started last evening and the tabernacle was well filled. Rev. C. H. Babcock, of Portsmouth (Va.), preached. Mrs. Babcock is also in attendance at the camp meetings and has under her supervision the work among young people. Rev. C. N. Fogg, of Haverhill (Mass.), has charge of the singing. The meetings will be continued until July 14.

The weather up to yesterday has been cool but a change has taken place and much warmer weather is expected.

The boats are crowded with visitors to the meetings.

Browns Flats, July 2—The Reformed Baptist Alliance will conclude its sessions today as the camp meeting begins this evening.

Last evening a memorial service in reference to the departure from this life of Rev. John Gravinor one of the oldest ministers of the denomination took place. The service was led by the president of the alliance, Rev. A. H. Trafton, and a number of short addresses were given by those who were personally acquainted with the late minister. It was a beautiful and solemn service interspersed with appropriate songs. The widow, Mrs. Gravinor, was present.

The report of the committee on social reform this morning occasioned considerable discussion; and the various amusements and fashions of the day, as hobble skirts, low neck and short sleeves dresses, as also the white slave traffic were strongly condemned.

Revs. Wiggins and Baker have been appointed collectors of funds from the various churches of the denomination during the coming year, to pay off the indebtedness on Beulah camp grounds. And they hope to succeed.

Sometimes a woman enjoys having her husband stay away from church on Sunday so she can throw it up to him all the rest of the week.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

General Weyler Now Captain General of Spanish Army—A Story of Alfonso

(Copyright, 1912, by the Brentwood Company)

It may seem timely, since just at present Cuba is once more the scene of insurrectionary troubles, to make known that General Valerian Weyler, Marquis of Teneriffe, who played so important a role in the recent history of the island, has just been promoted to the very highest rank in the Spanish army, that of captin general. This is the Spanish equivalent for field marshal in Great Britain, Germany, Austria and Russia, and in these countries and in Spain, as well as everywhere else, the insignia of office consists of a golden baton. Weyler is one of the pillars of the Spanish monarchy, although on his return to Europe from the Antilles in 1898, he was so bitter against the government for the poor support which he had received that he was suspected of Carlism.

Today, in spite of his brusquerie and soldier-like bluntness, he is the most popular commander among the rank and file of the army, is honored for his straightforwardness, loyalty and incorruptibility and is known to have the soldiers' welfare at heart. There is little danger, as long as he lives, of either Carlists or republicans ever being able to organize one of those military "pronunciamentos" against the government and crown which, throughout the greater part of the nineteenth century, were the blight of Spain.

Save for his official duties and his constant intercourse with King Alfonso, Captain-General Weyler leads a very quiet life. He is but rarely seen at the opera, at theatres, or in society. He is devoted to his family. By the way, his marriage was something in the nature of a romance, for the Marquise de Teneriffe is the daughter of highly dignified and honest hard-working peasants, on one of the islands of the Balearic group, where beautiful women are the rule, instead of the amazing exception, and of which he himself is a native.

Weyler had attained the rank of colonel, and was in command of a crack regiment stationed in Mallorca, when he fell in love with Teresa Santacana. Weyler notoriously abhorred Don Juanesque methods of laying siege to the feminine heart, and as soon as he was sure his affection was reciprocated, he resolved to make the lovely "paysana" his wife, though she was ignorant—as the Spanish proverb says—"whether the sun went round the earth or the earth round the sun," and had not even been taught to read or write. He did not disclose his matrimonial projects to his family and friends, but made preparations for carrying them into execution. Twenty-four hours before the time fixed for the celebration of the wedding, the officers of his regiment received requests to meet him at a certain church door early the next morning.

He was then, as now, extremely popular with his subordinates, whatever their rank, though the strictest disciplinarian, and thus the regimental corps of officers accepted the invitation unanimously.

At the hour indicated they found him awaiting them at the main entrance, and when they gathered about him, he addressed them as follows: "Brother officers; none of my people know that I am to be married this morning. I did not tell them, for reasons of my own, mainly because I detest useless discussion. But I do not want to go to the altar without my comrades. So I asked you to attend by me as witnesses and friends, and I want you to note what I shall do when the officiating priest shall have united me to my dear young fiancee." This terse speech was hailed with heartfelt acclamations, and the military cortege filed into the church at the heels of their beloved colonel, only too eager to give him their full support and countenance on so momentous an occasion, besides not a little curious as to the denouement.

At the conclusion of the religious ceremony, and after all the military witnesses had signed the register, the colonel left the church with his wife leaning on his arm, followed by his officers, marched her off to a neighboring convent, where he delivered her into the charge of the lady abbess, and took leave of the beautiful girl he had just married, without any appearance of emotion whatever.

Then turning to his comrades he said quietly: "Queredos hermanos: I have married this maiden because I love her and she loves me. She has had no education, and threfore is not at present fit to associate on equal terms with your mothers, wives and sisters, or to figure in society as the wife of your colonel. So I have arranged that she shall remain for two years under the care of these worthy nuns, who will teach her all she ought to learn, and eventually turn her out a credit to our flag. During the interval I shall not disturb her studies by my visits, though she is mine and I am hers. Have I not done right?" (The answer may be taken for granted.) "Then come along and let us all go to breakfast."

The sequel of the story was all that Weyler could have wished it to be. When his wife quitted the convent she was as perfectly "turned out"—to use Weyler's own expression—as she was beautiful, which is indeed saying a good deal, and the union has been an ideally happy one. Their two daughters have inherited much of their mother's loveliness and charm, while the three sons take after their father, who, as every one knows, is not particularly good looking perhaps, though he has a rugged, soldierly, bull-dog sort of a face which pleases and attracts.

The death of old Gen. Lopez Dominguez in Madrid—he was nephew of Marshall Serrano, President of the Spanish Republic—serves to recall an amusing incident that occurred during the last of his several premierships. King Alfonso and his consort, who had been staying at La Granja, had arranged to make their trip to the summer resort of San Sebastian by motor instead of by train. The cabinet was horror-struck at the king's intention, and dispatched the premier to La Granja to insist that the royal trip be made by train. On reaching the palace, Lopez Dominguez took the king to task, and declared that neither he nor the other ministers could be responsible to the nation for the safety of Their Majesties during a four days' motor trip over a series of ill-policed, badly constructed roads. He was just about to add that he would resign unless the king yielded, when Alfonso, without permitting the veteran to finish his sentence, seized him by the arm, raced him downstairs into the courtyard and called out to the queen, who chanced to be there: "Here, Inez, the general objects to our motoring to San Sebastian. I don't want to accept any responsibility in the matter. We will leave the decision in the hands of Providence. You stand at the other end of the courtyard, I at this. Then we shall both call Sancho." (His white horse, then being led up and down by a groom.) "If he comes to me, we will do what the general says. If he goes to you, we will go to San Sebastian by motor."

The horse, set free by the groom, hesitated a moment, and then with a neigh, trotted to the young queen, who had been accustomed to feed him sugar. Patting the premier on the back, the king exclaimed: "You see, Providence wills it. Neither you nor I can afford to fly in the face of Providence." And the old general, who could not help laughing, was compelled to give way, since Heaven, the throne, and brute creation, were all arrayed against him.

A WEAK, ACHING BACK CAUSED HER MUCH MISERY

Could Not Work and Had No Ambition For Anything.

Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble do not know the suffering and misery which those afflicted undergo.

Weak, lame or aching back comes from the kidneys, and when the kidneys are out of order the whole system becomes deranged.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a specific for all kidney troubles.

Mrs. W. R. Hodge, Fielding, Sask., writes:—"A few lines highly recommending Doan's Kidney Pills. For this last year I have been troubled very much with nasty sick headaches, and a weak, aching back which caused me much misery, for I could not work and had no ambition for anything. My kidneys were very badly out of order, and kept me from sleeping at nights, I tried many kinds of pills and medicines but it seemed almost in vain. I began to give up in despair of ever being well and strong again, when a kind neighbor advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and am thankful for the relief I obtained from them, for now I am never in trouble with a sore back or sick headaches. I will always say Doan's Kidney Pills for mine, and can highly recommend them to any sufferers."
