SUGGESTS KELVIN'S NAME.

Proposed New Term for an Electrical Unit.

A suggestion of much interest comes from England. It is that the name "kelvin" be adopted for the kilowatt-hour or (in England) Board of Trade unit. The kilowatt-hour being a measure of practical electrical work, is one of the most frequently used of all the electrical units and one with which the general public is perhaps as familiar as any other. The proposal that the memory of Lord Kelvin be honored by applying his name to this unit is now derived, for it was originally made a number of years ago, during the great man's lifetime.

American electrical engineers will be sure to give this proposal a cordial welcome and careful consideration, says the Western Electrician. Aside from honoring a man whom all delight to honor, the word "kelvin," with two syllables, is shorter and more euphonious than "killowatt-hour," with four.

The subject is one of considerable importance, for the word "kelvin," if it should be finally sanctioned by international agreement, will be in daily use among practical electrical men. Such objections as there may be to the word should therefore be carefully considered at the present time, before the recommendation is finally adopted by the commission.

important a thing to jump at. We are still considering it." It is believed that the company will submit a counter-proposition to-day a little more favorable to it than the one suggested by the city.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission has received applications for power from Galt, Berlin, Guelph, Hamilton, Woodstock, St. Thomas, Preston and New Hamburg, for an amount aggregating 10,700 horse power. The municipalities that have not yet taken final action are London, Brantford, Stratford, Waterloo and Hespeler.

The report of Engineer McFarlane, of the Beach pumping plant, shows an increase of one and a half per cent. in water pumped last month over February, 1907. This being leap year and an extra day in February, the increase is not considered large, the daily average being less than in February, 1907.

The health report for the week shows three cases of scarlet fever, two of chickenjox, three of mumps and one each of measles and whooping cough.

John O'Connor, Harriet street, a smallpox patient, who was quarantined in the isolation hospital, was released yesterday.

Engineer Sothman, who prepared the specifications for the electric pumps at the Beach, sent in his bill to-day. It amounts to about $400.

The Court of Revision will meet at 2 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon.

Assessment Commissioner Macleod has been successful in securing another industry for Hamilton. The Bell Thread Company, of Montreal, manufacturers of sewing thread for manufacturing purposes, has leased the premises formerly occupied by the Ontario Canning Company on Ferguson avenue south, and will begin operations on April 1. Although beginning on a small scale, the industry will be enlarged as soon as the business justifies it.

At a meeting last evening of the House of Refuge Committee, John Mahoney was awarded the contract for ice at 12 cents per hundred pounds, and William Lees the bread contract at $2.49 for plain and $2.59 for fancy bread per hundred pounds. John Gathercole secured the milk contract at 17 cents a gallon. Chadwick Brothers' tender of $312.50 for gas fixtures and alterations to the present fixtures was accepted. The Hospital Board will have the privilege of getting its supply of bread from Lees & Son at the same price if it desires to do so.

END OF FAMOUS WRITERS.

Literary Geniuses Who Died Miserably Poor and Destitute.

That Ouida should have died as she did in poverty and loneliness, an exile, though a voluntary one, from the land of her birth, was an undoubtedly pitiful ending to an exceptionally brilliant career. Equally sad has been the fate reserved for some literary geniuses in the past, says Tit-Bits.

For instance, Richard Savage, the gifted poet, died in a debtor's prison at Bristol, after enduring the pangs of semi-starvation for years. Chatterton, driven desperate through hunger, poisoned himself at the age of 18 Swift died mad, as he had all along predicted he would.

Dr. Dodd, whose "Beauties of Shakespeare" is well known, was hanged for forgery. George Gissing, after suffering hardships that embittered his whole existence, died just as fame was beginning to be assured to him.

Stow, the famous antiquarian, author of the "Survey of London," became in his old age a licensed beggar, asking alms from door to door "through thirty-six counties." Wycherley, from being the spoiled idol of society, fell to the lowest depths of destitution, and was eventually consigned to the Fleet Prison for debt, where he spent many years in a debtor's prison, and eventually died there by his own hand.

Robert Burns, writing only 14 days before his death, implored his friend Cunningham to use his influence with the Commissioners of Excise in order to get his salary raised from £35 a year to £50, "otherwise, if I die not of disease, I must perish with hunger."

Llorente, the learned and talented historiographer of the Inquisition, was glad during the close of his brilliant but unfortunate career to hire himself out of a few sous a night to keep watch over the dead bodies at the Paris morgue, and died eventually of starvation. Cameons begged his bread from door to door until compelled to take refuge in an almshouse, where he died.

It is told of Ben Johnson that when in his last illness King Charles sent him a small sum of money he returned it. "He sends me so miserable a donation," cried the dying poet, "because I am poor and live in an alley. Go and tell him his soul lives in an alley."

Very sad was the fate of Ulrich von Hutten, one of the greatest writers Germany has ever produced. Unable to earn a living he was reduced to tramping through the country, begging food and shelter from the peasants. One bitter winter's night he was refused both, and next morning was found frozen stiff and cold in the drifting snow outside the village. "The only thing he died possessed of besides the rags he wore," says his biographer, Zuinglin, "was a pen."

Saint-Simon, the celebrated French author, who wrote "The Reorganization of European Society," was twice driven by want to attempt his own life, and, although he died a natural death in the end, it was among the most lamentable surroundings. "For fifteen days," he says, writing to a friend just before the end came, "I have lived upon bread and water, without a fire; I have even sold my clothes."

To Put a Faucet in a Barrel.

It is no easy task to place a barrel in position after the faucet has been inserted. The following simple expedient will make it easier: First, stand the barrel on end. Bore the hole for the faucet in the usual way and then plug it with a cork. Shave the cork off close to the barrel. Having placed the barrel in position, put the end of the faucet squarely and firmly on the cork. Drive it into the barrel, forcing the cork ahead. A turn or two of the faucet makes it tight.

Not Slang, But Isn't Pretty.

The word "masher" is not really slang; it is derived from a Gaelic word meaning "fine," "handsome" or "elegant."

Breakers" and in ten years he has written sixty-seven plays. That would seem almost a record, but an analysis proves even more interesting. During seven months Mr. Davis wrote thirteen plays! This means about two weeks to each play! Four days are devoted to thinking it over and eight or nine days to the writing.
