At the Great Agricultural Banquet in 1847 held at Hamilton, on Lake Ontario, at which from Eight hundred to One Thousand Agriculturists sat down, The Earl of Elgin, the Governor General in returning thanks upon his health being drank said—"You can understand with what perfect sincerity I speak when I assure you, that it gives me the highest gratification to find myself among you this Evening, lending whatever influence attaches to my position, to the promotion of those great and worthy objects on behalf of which you are assembled together. And gentlemen what are these objects?—What does the promotion of agricultural improvement in Canada involve? I need not remind you that in all countries, and in all conditions of society, agriculture ranks high as an honor-
