WINDING THE SKEIN.

Woman has wiles
Wherewith she beguiles
Our sensitive sex, whose resistance is vain;
But she's no better plan
For inveigling a man
Then to get him to help her in winding a skein.

His glance fondly lingers
On deft little fingers;
He gets into tangles again and again,
Which while she unravels,
His fond fancy travels
To tying a knot, and not winding a skein.

Why, Heaven preserve us,
'Tis fit to unnerve us,
To see with what ease in the snare we are ta'en:
And how slender the net
Into wh ch we all get,
But cannot escape from, in winding a skein.

Though you'd fain remain single,
Your fingers will tingle,
You've blood to the heart, and you've love on the brain,
If but once you consent
To the treachery meant
By the harmless employment of winding a skein.

A TALE OF ENGLISH MAIL COACH DAYS.

BY ROBERT DALE OWEN.

An English gentleman of true John Bull proportions—weighing some eighteen or twenty stone—had occasion to travel in summer by stage-coach from Oxford to London. The stage carried six inside; and our hero engaged two places (as in consideration of his size he usually did) for himself. The other four seats were taken by Oxford students.

These youths, being lighter than our modern Lambert, reached the stage before he did, and each snugly possessed himself of a corner seat, leaving a centre seat on each side vacant. The round, good-tempered face of John Bull soon after appeared at the carriage door; and, peering into the vehicle and observing the local arrangements, its owner said with a smile, "You see I am of a pretty comfortable size, gentlemen; so I have taken two seats. It will greatly oblige me if one of you will kindly move into the opposite seat, so that I may be able to enter."

"My good sir," said a pert young law student, "possession is nine-tenths of the law. You engaged two seats. There they are, one on each side. We engaged one each, came first, entered regularly into possession, and our titles to the seats we occupy are indisputable."

"I do not dispute your titles," said the other, "but I trust to your politeness, seeing how the case stands, to enable me to pursue my journey."

"Oh, hang politeness!" said a hopeful young scion of some noble house, "I have a horror of a middle seat, and would not take one to oblige my grandmother; it's ungraceful as well as uncomfortable; and, besides, one has no chance of looking at the pretty girls along the road. Good old gentleman, arrange your concerns as you please; I stick to my corner." And he leaned back, yawned, and settled himself with hopeless composure in his place.

Our corpulent friend, though a man not easily discomposed, was somewhat put out by this unmannerly obstinacy. He turned to a smart-looking youth with a simper on his face,—a clerical student who had hitherto sat in a revery, possibly thinking over his chances of a rich benefice in the future. "Will you accommodate me?" he asked; "this is the last stage that starts for London to-day, and business of urgent importance calls me to town."

"Some temporal affair, no doubt," said the graceless youth, with mock gravity; "some speculation with filthy lucre for its object. Good father, at your age your thoughts should turn heavenward, instead of being confined to the dull, heavy tabernacle of clay that chains us to earth." And his companions roared with laughter at the "d—d clever joke."

A glow of indignation just colored the stranger's cheek; but he mastered the feeling in a moment, and said, with much composure, to the fourth, "Are you also determined that I shall lose my place; or will you oblige me by taking a centre seat?"

"Ay, do, Tom," said his lordship to the person addressed; "he's something in the way of your profession, quite a physiological curiosity. You ought to accommodate him."

"May I be poisoned if I do!" replied the student of medicine. "In a dissecting room he'd make an excellent subject; but in a coach, and this warm weather, too. Old gentleman, if you'll put yourself under my care, I'll engage in the course of six weeks, by a judicious course of depletives, to save you hereafter the expense of a double seat. But, really, to take a middle seat in the month of July is contrary to all the rules of hygiene, and a practice to which I have a professional objection."

And the laugh was renewed at the old gentleman's expense.

By this time the patience of coachee, who had listened to the latter part of the dialogue was exhausted. "Harkee, gemmen," said he, "settle the business as you like; but it wants just three quarters of a minute of twelve, and with the first stroke of the University clock my horses must be off. I would not wait three seconds longer for the king, God bless him. 'T would be as much as my place is worth." And with that he mounted his box, took up the reins, bid the hostler shut the door, and sat with uprraised whip, listening for the expected stroke.

As it sounded from the venerable belfry the horses, as if they recognized the signal, shot off at a gallop with the four young rogues, to whom their own rudeness and our fat friend's dilemma afforded a prolific theme for merriment during the whole stage.

Meanwhile the subject of their mirth hired a post chaise, followed and overtook them at the second change of horses, where the passengers got out ten minutes for lunch. As the post chaise drove up to the inn door, two young chimney sweeps passed with their bags and brooms and their well known cry.

"Come hither, my lads," said the corpulent gentleman, "what say you to a ride?"

The whites of their eyes enlarged into still more striking contrast with the dark shades of the sooty cheeks. "Will you have a ride, my boys, in the stage coach?"

"Ees, zur, said the elder, scarcely daring to trust the evidence of his ears.

"Well, then, hostler, open the stage door. In with you. And, d'ye hear? be sure to take the two middle seats; so, one on each side."

The guard's horn sounded, and coachee's voice was heard: "Only one minute and a half more, gen'lmen; come on!"

They came, bowed laughingly to our friend of the corporation, and passed on to the coach. The young lord was the first to put his foot on the steps. "Why, how now, coachee? What confounded joke is this? Get out, you rascals, or I'll teach you how to play gentlemen such a trick again."

"Sit still, my lads; you're entitled to your places. My lord, the two middle seats, through your action and that of your young friends, are mine; they were regularly taken and duly paid for. I choose that two proteges of mine shall occupy them. An English stage coach is free to every one who behaves quietly, and I am answerable for their good conduct; so mind you behave, boys! Your lordship has a horror of a middle seat; pray take the corner one."

"Overreached us, by Jove!" said the law student. We give up the cause, and cry you mercy, Mr. Bull."

"Blythe is my name."

"We cry quits, worthy Mr. Blythe."

"You forget that possession is nine-tenths of the law, my good sir, and that the title of these lads to their seats is indisputable. I have installed them as my locum tenents, if that be good law Latin. It would be highly unjust to dislodge the poor youths, and I cannot permit it. You have your corner."

"Heaven preserve us!" exclaimed the clerical student."

"You are surely not afraid of a black coat," retorted the other. "Besides, we ought not to suffer our thoughts to dwell on petty earthly concerns, but to turn them heavenward."

"I'd rather go through my examination a second time than to sit by these dirty devils," groaned the medical student.

"Soot is perfectly wholesome, my young friend; and you will not be compelled to violate a single hygienic rule. The corner you selected is vacant. Pray get in."

At these words coachee, who had stood grinning behind, actually cheated into forgetfulness of time by the excellence of the joke, came forward. "Gentlemen, you have lost me a minute and a quarter already. I must drive on without ye, if so be ye don't like your company."

The students cast rueful glances at each other, and then crept wearily into their respective corners. As the hostler shut the door he found it impossible to control his features. "I'll give you something to change your cheer, you grinning rascal!" said the disciple of Æsculapius, stretching out of the window; but the hostler nimbly evaded the blow.

"My white pantaloons!" cries the lord.

"My beautiful drab surtout!" exclaimed the lawyer expectant. "The filthy rascals!"

The noise of the carriage wheels and the unrestrained laughter of the spectators drowned the sequel of their lamentations.

At the next stage a bargain was struck. The sweeps were liberated and dismissed with a gratuity; the seats shaken and brushed; the worthy sons of the university made up, among themselves, the expenses of the postchaise; the young doctor violated, for once, the rules of hygiene, by taking a middle seat; and all journeyed on together, without further quarrel or grumbling, except from coachee, who declared that "to be kept over time a minute and a quarter at one stage, and only three seconds less than three minutes at the next, was enough to try the patience of a saint: that was it."

Election Cards.

To the Electors of the City and County of St. John.

GENTLEMEN:—

At the request of a number of you, I hereby announce that I will be a Candidate at the approaching election, to represent you in the Dominion Parliament. I am sorry that the lately formed Government have not, previous to bringing on this election, announced any policy, so that I could state to you whether I could approve of it or not, but, if elected, I will continue my exertions in endeavoring to get justice for this Province, and endeavor to procure grants for the building of a Marine Hospital, and to preserve and improve the harbor. Also, I will use my best endeavors to put the employes of the Government, of all grades in this Province, on the same footing and pay as in the other Provinces. I will support the present or any other Government in all measures that I consider good, and oppose them in all that I consider bad, but you must not expect me to give them any factious opposition, or any at all, if they give this Province her rights and promote good measures. I will again enter Parliament with a determination to act independently; and, as I cannot in the space of this card, state fully as I could wish my views on some matters that I consider important, I will do this in a communication that I will address to you through the City papers. Respectfully soliciting your support,

I am your obed't. serv't.,
jan 12 city pap A. L. PALMER.

To the Electors of King's County.

GENTLEMEN:—

Parliament having been dissolved and Writs issued for a General Election, it becomes necessary for you to select a representative for this County for the House of Commons at Ottawa.

Having been requested by a large number of influential Gentlemen to offer myself for re-election, it affords me great pleasure to do so. And if I have again the honor to represent you at Ottawa, I shall, as in the past, vote for all measures that may be conducive to the welfare of the Dominion, stand up for the rights of this Province, and endeavor to obtain equal privileges for King's County.

Thanking you for the generous support you gave me on the last occasion, and asking the favor of your influence at the coming Election,

I am, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant, &c.,
jan 5 dw JAMES DOMVILLE.

To the Electors of the City and County St. John.

GENTLEMEN:—

Parliament having been dissolved, and you having been called upon to elect representatives for this City and County, I, at the request of a large number of the Electors, have decided to be a candidate for your suffrages.

The disclosures lately made in Canadian politics called, in my opinion, for a condemnation of the Administration then in power; and believing, as I do, that the present Government has been formed on principles which, if adhered to, must tend to elevate the moral tone of politics in the Dominion and advance its general interests, I shall, if elected, accord to them a liberal support.

Assuring you that, if elected, I shall devote myself earnestly to promoting the wellfare of the Dominion in general, and particularly of this City and County, and respectfully soliciting your support,

I remain, gentlemen,
your obedient servant,
G. R. PUGSLEY.
St. John, Jan. 5th, 1874. jan 5 dw

To the Electors of the City and County of St. John.

GENTLEMEN:—

Having been nominated at a meeting called to select candidates for the coming election of representatives for this City and County in Parliament, (although I have no desire to enter public life), on a full consideration of the matter, I have concluded to accept the nomination, and accede to the wishes of many of the electors expressed to me, and put my services at your disposal.

If I should be elected, I will, to the best of my judgement, act upon all public questions for the benefit of this Province, of the City and County, and the Dominion generally.

I have no reason to suppose but that Parliament will at all times mete out even-handed justice to the Maritime Provinces, but if I should find it otherwise, I shall determinedly contend for their rights.

I shall, if elected, support the present Government in their efforts to purify Parliament; in the introduction and carrying through of all measures that have in view the elevation of the people, the development of the resources of the country; with a due regard to the interests of the Dominion generally.

I remain,
Your obedient servant,
