The Lumber Trade.

Minneapolis Despatch to The St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

The lumber trade has been fairly active during the week, with a slight falling off in the receipts and shipments compared with one year ago, attributable to the reduction in the railroad demand, amounting to between 100 and 150 cars in St. Paul and Minneapolis. Local stocks are being steadily reduced, but lumber sales are not as profitable as they should be to the manufacturers. The demand for building purposes is steadily improving, with indications of a heavy fall trade. Some of the log owners have decided to manufacture their winter's cut, which will increase the number of lumber dealers before the close of the season, but they will generally be strong firms and abundantly able to handle whatever stock may come into the market. The total number of cars of lumber received at Minneapolis during the week was 88 against 83 for the week previous, while the shipments were 281 cars against 300 for the previous week. For the corresponding week last year the receipts were 139 cars, or 56 more than in 1888, and the shipments were 370, showing an excess of 94 cars over the present year.

The Iron Trade.

From The Wall-Street News.

No remarkable or important change has occurred to the iron market during the past week. The reduction in contract prices by the Thomas Iron Company a few days ago has left behind a feeling of doubt and uncertainty, which is likely to continue for some time to come, even if it does not materialize into a decidedly weaker condition of affairs. But the trouble with the market is no more a matter of price than it is a paucity of business, and as we have before remarked, current precarious values are partially the outcome of endeavors made by each company to wrest enough business from the others to keep things going without entailing any actual loss. Still, the outlook is by no means of an encouraging nature, so far as consumption is concerned, and the promise for the next ninety days in that regard is far from assuring. A feeling of lethargy is reported everywhere.
