UNCLE SAM AND MEXICO

The Latest Statement of the Affairs of These Two Countries.

[Canadian Press Despatch]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—General Huerta plans to assemble the foreign diplomats in Mexico City today or to-morrow, according to latest state department advices, and make a statement on the present situation. No inkling of Huerta's purpose was contained in the dispatches. His statement will be received with the keenest interest, though administration officials doubt that it will alter the situation. Those closest to the administration policy believe dealings with Huerta are practically ended, and that peaceful measures to compose the situation will next be exerted in other directions. Speculation on the possibility and extent of dealings with the constitutionalist heads has been revived by the present situation but brings no definite statement from official quarters.

President Wilson has from time to time said he would welcome information as to the purpose of the constitutionalists, should they become successful by arms. There has been no direct communication, but the president is expected to be in receipt of information along these lines directly.

One difficulty is that the constitutionalist chiefs are in various parts of the republic, and communication is so slow that united action on any plan which might be submitted would take some time to formulate. In the meantime the administration regards Huerta's promises for a solution by an election as violated, and is said to feel free to hear other proposals.

The meeting of the diplomats, in Mexico City Wednesday was inconclusive and bound none of the participants to any definite course, according to other advices. Official despatches to-day reported that the meeting "called for a discussion of the situation in the republic reached no collective opinion as to a solution of the problem."

The meeting was held at the German legation, and representatives of Great Britain, Spain, Germany and Austria, France, Russia, Norway and

With the City Police

Armed with a warrant to search the premises of Soloman Savarian, 13 Seridan St., Chief of Police Slemin, accompanied by Constables Borthwick and Blanchard, paid a visit to that address last evening and as a result of the little surprise call, nine Armenians were placed under arrest on a charge of gambling and Savarian was taken into custody on a charge of running a common gambling house.

It was about 10 o'clock when the police officers crept silently up to the well known Sheridan home, and as one of the blinds did not exactly fit the window, an excellent opportunity was afforded, to see what was going on inside. According to the police, ten men were gathered around one table, four were playing cards, while the rest were looking on. A nice little pile of cash occupied a prominent place in the centre of the table.

After viewing the game from the outside for a few moments, the police decided that they would rather be on the inside looking out than on the outside looking in, and with the order, "hands up" the three officers dashed into the room, much to the sonsternation of all within. Tables and chairs were upset, cards and money flew in all directions. Somebody tried to turn out the lights, while one man made a beeline for the back door.

The officers were on the job, however, and Constable Borthwick made straight for the table and did his best to get the coin. Savarian was also looking for any cash that was to be given away and just as the Constable reached the table, he put out his fist and the money disappeared. The officer saw the move however and he followed the money to Savarian's pocket and immediately confiscated it.

In the meantime the other officers had also been busy and between putting the men under arrest and picking up cash which had been scattered over the floor, they had some job.

In police court this morning the following men were charged with gambling: Romeo Mamish, Harry Tom, Dick Pappaya, Solomon Savarian, Mar Megs, Avi Keil, Dipona Katchegian, Moses Mamilian, Mistapa Hasanga. In addition Savarian was charged with keeping the house.

Evidence was given by the police telling of the raid of the house, while most damaging evidence against the accused was given by Savarian's step-son, who stated that he had often seen men there, and that his father as owner of the house, was paid 10 cents out of every dollar won by those in attendance. He was closely cross-examined by Mr. Woodyatt, counsel for the defence, but he stuck to his story, going down into the court room and picking out the men whom he had seen pay over money to his father.

Several foreigners were called by the defence and they told the same old story, that they were simply playing to see who would pay for the coffee. They denied that they had been playing for gain.

The magistrate, however, stated emphatically that he did not believe the story of the defendant Savarian, who said he was simply paying back to one of those present an old debt, when the police entered, thereby attempting to account for the money on the table. In his opinion, he should be charged with perjury. The other defence witnesses, he thought, were not telling the truth.

Taking this into consideration he decided to find Savarian guilty of keeping a common gambling house, while in the other cases, the accused were allowed to go with a warning.

In the case of Savarian, a fine of $50 and costs or three months was imposed.

Club Should Be Named.

Last evening the young ladies of Mr. Joseph Ruddy's class at Park Baptist church and a number of other young ladies who have associated themselves together, met at the Childrens' Shelter. The young ladies are sewing for the talent tea to be held by the Childrens' Aid Society. The club, which thus far is without a name will take up other activities.

Found a Lost Boy

On their way to the golf links yesterday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Cockshutt and the Hon. Mr White, Minister of Finance, picked up a little lost boy who was crying bitterly by the roadside. Mr. Cockshutt took the boy, who was unable to tell his name, into his motor, and on his return from the links, left the little fellow with Chief Slemin, who subsequently found that the boy's parents were foreigners named Rodginski, living in the North ward, and they were delighted to get their son safely home again.

The huge steam shovel of Wright, Hazard and Cohen Company is showing no mercy to the land at the foot of the Jubilee Terrace, and already it has dug out a very large hole in the grounds leading to the approach of the Lorne Bridge. Activity is the bye-word at present in that vicinity. A large number of workmen and teams are busily engaged there in the construction work of the Lake Erie and Northern Railway. At the foot of Church street a large pile driver is in operation, and a great change will be noted along the river front by the time that "old Father Time" announces his 1913 halloween celebration.

Wm. Allan, a farmer, near Aylmer, Que., was gored to death by a bull.

Port Hope's new Carnegie library costing $10,000, and containing seven thousand volumes, was formally opened.
