THE IRISH PAWNBROKERS

An entertainment replete with originality and headed by comedians who are well known as creators is promised next Monday evening, when Murphy and Mack, the popular Irish farceurs, will appear at the Opera House with their company in Joe Spears' famous farce The Irish Pawnbrokers. The Irish Pawnbrokers, while a farce comedy, cannot be classed with the average entertainment that is travelling under the guise, as it has a well defined plot, and there is rhyme and reason for all the funny mishaps and incidents, which being understood by the audience, makes the fun more enjoyable. Of course the three acts are lightened and brightened by an abundance of music and concerted and individual specialties, but they are introduced with a view of fitting and not dragged in pell-mell just to fill up time as is very often the case. The company numbers among its roster many artists of known repute.

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

Two phases of the Tudor temper are contrasted in Paul Kester's dramatization of Major's clever novel When Knighthood was in Flower, one of the masculine phases exhibited by that famous and much married monarch, King Henry the Eighth, and the other a more lovely feminine phase imputed by the lively fancy of the novelist to Henry's sister, Mary. This Mary—aunt of "Bloody Mary," who reigned later, and progenitress of the unfortunate Lady Jane Grey, who reached the block instead of the throne—does not loom large in the history of the time. But the main facts in her career—her marriage to Louis Twelfth of France and later secret marriage to Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk—have been made the pivots around which the Major romance and the play concocted from it revolve. They will appear at the Opera House on Thursday next.

Butter is selling for 20 to 22c. in rolls and 18 to 20c. in tubs. Sweet potatoes, 6c. lb.

THE CONNORS STOCK CO.

A fair sized audience greeted the Connors Stock Company at the Opera House last evening on their second production of the "Little Heiress," and, as on the previous night, the members of the cast were enthusiastically applauded and the specialties were accorded a hearty reception, most of them being obliged to respond to encores.

The bill for this evening will be "The Country Girl."

COUNTRY DEALERS WILL MOVE DOWN

Vendors of Country Produce Will be Found at the Lower end of the Market Tomorrow

A new procedure will be taken in the "market muddle" as it is now called when tomorrow morning eight sellers of country produce who formerly had stands in the section which Wm. Daley now holds, will offer their gods for sale in the first section at the lower end of the market. will offer their goods for sale in the first found that the upper section which has been about the only available space for the countrymen, was not equal to the demands for space, so it has been decided to clear away the meat from the lower section at the Germain street entrance for the use of those who come in regularly every Saturday and cannot get room enough for their goods, since Mr. Daley has bought control of the section which he holds.

Those who have arranged for stands in the new space are:-the Messrs. Prince, Oscar Wetmore, A. Langstroth, Thos Fraser, Mosher Smith and Bonnie, eight in all and it is possible that others may be accommodated there.

It appears now that Mr. Daley may have the stands which he bought on his hands for the year as there seems to be no frantic effort being made to secure places there.

The advent of the country people at the lower end of the big building will look odd for a while, but no doubt the buyers will find it quite as handy to go there as to their old stands. This move will provide more room at the head of the market and relieve the congestion.

FABIO ROMANI

One of the foremost of romantic dramatic hits, in fact, what may be termed a permanent success, will be presented at the York Theatre on next Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, when "Fabio Romani," which is a splendid and intelligent dramatization of Marie Corelli's widely discussed and extensively read novel, "The Vendetta," will be the attraction, and judging from interest aroused in theatre goers of the city, it is safe to predict a big house, being, as it is, just the style of performance adapted to please the masses and all classes. It is equally interesting, whether the auditor has read the famous novel or not, being at once a most beautiful blend of sublime language, brilliant and absorbing story, and interesting as well as human characters. It will receive a splendid scenic production, while the cast includes none but the highest grade of players of repute, including that superb romantic star, John B. Arthur.
