60,000 CURES ARE CREDITED TO NEW "ARTIFICIAL SUN"

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 6—Sixty thousand cases of hay fever, bronchial asthma, rickets, fractures, wounds and industrial injuries have been cured by American physicians and surgeons during the last two years with new instruments that furnish artificial light and heat many times more intense than natural sun light, Dr. A. J. Pacini, Chicago, told a meeting of the health section of the thirteenth annual safety congress of the National Safety Council in session here.

Dr. Pacini formerly was chief of the X-ray section of the United States Public Health Service.

One of the new instruments, the ultra-violet lamp, accomplishes in fifteen seconds what natural sunlight requires two days to complete, Dr. Pacini declared. Hay fever, one of the diseases we listed as susceptible to treatment by the new method, is a cause of industrial disability which is demanding more and more attention, it was stated.

Dr. Pacini described the sun as being in effect a huge broadcasting station that is perpetually sending out wave lengths of heat, light and ultra-violet rays. These waves are received by the human body which is supplied with different forms of receiving stations, each station being "tuned in" to the proper wave length.

The messages received at the surface of the body are transmitted along the nerve fibres to the various internal organs, and there they effect a balancing of the functions of the organs, thus bringing about a normal condition.

This modern scientific method of treating injuries and disease grew out of the vast experience with the rehabilitation of World War veterans, in which work Dr. Pacini has been an authority.
