Splendid Address By Mrs. Kilgour

Last of the Literary Evenings This Season Last Night

The last of the Literary Evenin s this season took place yesterday in St. Paul's Bi le class room, when Mrs. Kilgour gave an exceptionally fine address on "Raphael," which was listened to with extreme interest. Nearly forty views were shown by radiopticae, representing pictures of the artist as well as frescoes in the Vatican.

Progress of Art

Wr. Kilgour, in her introduction, gave a sketch of the progress of art to the Renaissance, showing how Raphael had assimilated with those artists who had gone before. Many interesting details of his life were also given, and the three periods, Perugian, Florentine and Romak, were treated in an able manner. His pictures were also compared with those of his contemporaries, the two component parts—the form and the theme or idea—being also treated from the artistic point of view.

Rev. R. S. Laidlaw presided at the address, and Miss Mary McKenzie gave some instrumental selections.

Late Chief Berry Governor's Guest

Many Friends Gathered at Provincial Jail to Bid Farewell

About two dozen friends of Chief Berry met at the Provincial Jail last night as the guests of Governor and Mrs. Heathcote. This was to give them an opportunity to bid farewell to Mr. Berry and to wish him every success in his fu e career.

Amo those wh contributed to an excellen both vocal and instrumental, were the following: Magistrate Bates, G. F. Sykes, Sergt. Carter, Detective Phillips, Dennison Bros., J. Hines, O. L. Harwood, T. Bronson, Major Kirkcaldy, C. D. Bates, Whitby Kerr, W. J. McComb, Messrs. Robertson, Dayton, Witchelo, Green and Gazzana.

Mr. and Mrs. Berry will leave for Winnipeg in a day or two on Mrs. Berry's departure on a trip to the old country. Mr. Berry will then return and leave here for Regina where he hopes to be well settled down by the middle of the present month.

NOT ON THE COMMITTEE

The name of C. M. Maley in connection with the committee on the "banish the bar" campaign is a mistake; the name should be that of Mr. C. S. Maharg.

CURLERS MEET TOMORROW

The general meeting of the Brandon Curlers will be held at the Police Court tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, when the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place. All members are requested to be present.

AT THE POLICE COURT

But a short time was required at the Police Court this morning to get through the magistrate's docket. Two wage cases in which the defendant was a local builder named Cameron and the plaintiffs were two former employees named Jennings and Guild were adjourned. It was explained that Cameron was at Winnipeg in connection with another lawsuit with which he is concerned.

The story of a stormy scene between a Russian and Galician was told when Herman Shor appeared to give evidence against Joe Yuwashak. The manner in which defendant offended was by using violent and abusive language which was said to be vexatious and an incitement to a breach of the peace. His Worship decreed that the defendant should pay the costs of the court, the interpreter's fees and enter into a bond for $200 to keep the peace.

BOY BANDIT ON GUN BATTLE

Lad 15, Stands off 20 Policemen Until Wounded at Daylight

Terre Haute, April 1.—Earnest McWilliams, aged 15, was such a nice little fellow that when he was arraigned a week ago to stealing corn he impressed the probation officer and two detectives that he was truly good, and they procured his discharge.

This morning from 4 to 6 o'clock, he held at bay 20 policemen firing perhaps a hundred shots and being fired at through the glass door and windows of Ed-Retzel's gun shop, which he had entered to commit robbery. He did not surrender until after the officers had hit him six times, but the bullets happened to strike him in the legs and arms and none caused a ftaal wound.

Fortunately the policeman was hit; they had a wider range of safety than the young bandit, especially after daylight came and the officers could see into the store. McWilliams had been using three automatic pistols and a rifle. He had a pile of cartridge boxes at his side.

He says that last week he saw a moving picture that represented two robbers doing exactly what he did when the police came to arrest him.

BOYS VICTIMS OF MEAN TRICK

Carry Grips from Brooklyn to Arlington N.J.—Lose Reward

Arlington, N.J., Apr. 1.—Two boys from Brooklyn were picked up by the police here early this morning. They had walked themselves into a state of exhaustion for a man who promised them a dollar for carrying his grips.

The boys said they were Henry Mars, 14 years old, of 234 Palmetto street, and Charles Sonnenberg, 12 years old, of 303 Central avenue, Brooklyn, and that a man in Brooklyn asked them to help carry three grips. He promised them a dollar for their trouble.

They reached Jersey City with the grips and the man told them to go on to the next station and he would meet them and pay them the money. The boys walked on the Erie tracks across the Kearny meadows to Arlington.

FIGHT DISAPPOINTS BRYAN

Secretary Hoped Villa Would Capture Torreon

Washington, Apr. 1.—There was disappointment in Secretary Bryan's office when it became known that the morning reports to the fall of Torreon had not been confirmed. It is no secret that the Secretary had for months been hoping that Carranza would solve the Mexican situation for the United States by milita successes.

The State Department is wholly without direct information regarding the fighting at Torreon though its special representative George C. Carothers is with the Villa forces.

Throughout the fighting military advisers have advised that the reports received over Villa's censored wires be read most conservatively. Today's total absence of press reports from the correspondents was pointed to as proof that Villa was in trouble and not willing that his situation be known to the outside world just yet. Villa's position will become more dangerous as each day passes without taking Torreon.

KILLED BY JOBLESS ARMY WORK

Sacramento, Cal., April 1.—David Ahern, sheriff of Sacrametno county, who suffered a nervous collapse recently while supervising the army of unempolyed, fell dead in his home here early today.

Physicians said death was from heart disease caused by worry and overexertion.

PEERLESS AND ON GRAPE JUICE

House Stentor Lauds Bryan as Greatest Living Statesman

Washington, Apr. 1.—Representative Gray of Indiana, who prides himself on having the loudest voice in the House shouted a tribute to Secretary State Bryan in the debate on the pending prison bill. This was the tribute:

"I now take the opportunity of saying a few words for that greatest of living statesmen, William Jennings Bryan, our noble Secretary of State. He has done more for the peace of the world, for the composition of international difficulties, for the good of humanity on grape juice than any of the other fellows who preceded him were able to accomplish with either cocktail or highballs."

TRICKS IN MOTION PICTURES; "MOVIE" SECRETS EXPLAINED

The secret of most "parlor magic" is rapid motion. That is why the trick photograph" although not unknown be fore the days of the "movies" has been flourishing like a green bay-tree since the motion of the image on the screen gave it additional opportunities to get in its amusing work. We see daily in the moving-picture shows dozens of things that we know did not happen, and could not happen; but how they came to be so realistically portrayed passes the knowledge of most of us. Some of the secrets are betrayed by the writer of an article in Popular Electricity (Chicago, March.) He warns us that other secrets still are so carefully guarded that none may know them, so that no reader need fear that all illusion will be stripped from the picture-play by the explanations that we shall now proceed to quote:

"In a general way there are three methods of obtaining illusions by means of the camera; first, by periodically starting and stopping the camera in such a way that certain acts are performed by the players of the objects being filmed, during day time that the camera is stopped; secondly, by reversing the routine on certain portions of the film in relation to the remaining portioned of the same film; and thirdly, by making two or more superimposed impressions on a single film.

"To be sure, every film-manufacturer has his own peculiar methods of taking trick-pictures, and almost every director in the employ of every manufacturer, but practically all of them depend primarily upon one of the three methods mentioned above, or upon the use of faked scenery and dummy figures.

"Films in which toy animals, tiny jointed dolls, or animated cartoons are shown furnish the best examples of the first class of trick-work mentioned, for in these view 'stop' pictures are used almost exclusively. Tools are made to perform their functions apparently without human aid, and the toy animals go through a regular circus performance, the position of whatever tool or animal is used being changed a fraction of an inch while the shutter of the camera is closed, so that in the succeeding picture it is clearly observed of the camera is closed, so that in the succeeding picture it is clearly observed to have moved. Combining a whole series of such views one obtains action of a most surprising sort.

"A film called 'The Magic Coffee-pot,' popular some years ago, is an excellent example of the method used. Cords or strings of infinite fineness were attached to the coffee-pot, and the man shown in the illustration with elaborate carefulness moved the pot a fraction of an inch at a time, a picture being taken between each minute movement of the strings. In the finished picture the magic coffee-pot appeared to raise itself slowly from an upright position on the table and tip itself over the coffee pot, when a stream of coffee ran from its mouth into the cup. Once the cup was filled the pot slowly righted itself and sank back into its original position. Lumps of sugar then chased themselves across the table, climed up the side of the coffee-cup and tumbled in. The sugar was operated in a similar manner and each minute movement was filmed one picture at a time.

Dummies Substituted

"The method by which dummies are substituted for real players in some hair-raising scenes is practically the same. The players carry out the action called for by the scenario until the climax is reached, when the director calls 'Hold it!' and all the players stand rigidly in position without moving a muscle. Then a dummy, constructed to resemble exactly some leader player, is substituted for the living man, and when the camera is again started the audience is fooled into thinking that it is still looking at the living player. The dummy is then thrown over the cliff, drops from a lofty height, or is run over by an automobile, and the instant the apparently impossible feat is accomplished the director again calls 'Hold it!' and the real player again takes the place in the picture, arranging his body to correspond exactly with the position of the dummy. The camera is then started again and the action proceeds as usual, though probably three out of every four persons in the audience are astonished at the death-defying deeds of the photo-player.

"It must not be imagined that players never take their lives in their hands, or never perform the feats they are supposed to accomplish in the pictures, for almost every day one reads of some player being really hurt while attempting some unusually hazardous piece of 'business.' But as a rule, when one sees an apparently impossible action on the screen it is pretty safe to assume that you have been fooled by a dummy, for so cleverly are these dummies constructed and so quick is the substitution that even the man who looks at pictures several hours each day is often deceived into thinking that a real player has risked his life to make a sensation.

"The second type of picture mentioned—that in which the usual routine of things is reversed—is best illustrated by the films in which smoke floats down a chimney, divers coming flying out of the surf and land on a dock, running backward out of the picture, or objects leap from the floor onto a table. This type of picture is usually made by either a reversing crank on the camera being used, or by turning the camera upside down, though in some studios it is accomplished by a special printing machine, which feeds the negative film in a direction opposite to that of the positive during the provess of printing, so that the relation of one portion of the film is reversed in regard to the portion which immediately precedes it."

A Trick Picture

In the third type of trick picture, superimposed impressions are made on the same strip of film, as in the so-called "ghost" or "vision" scenes, in which a character seats himself before a fireplace and dreams of some incident in his past life. Such pictures are obtained, as a rule, by printing with two negatives on a single strip of positive film:

"Two separate scenes are really taken, the camera, one being the large scene in which the characters are appearing when they see the ghost or vision, and the other showing only the ghost or vision itself. When the last scene is printed against the dark background of the first scene, it appears on the screen as a thin, vaporous impression that strongly suggests the ordinary idea of a "ghost" and owing to the fact that the furniture or furnishings of the room shown in the first scene, or the outdoor background against which it was taken, shows dimly through the outlines of the ghost, as if it were transparent, is the illustion heightened.

"Substituion of small scale models for the actual subject has been followed in ordinary photography and in the making of novelty postcards, etc., for so long that its application to the motion-picture need scarcely be discussed.

"Here again it is well to day that more and more frequently the real thing is being shown instead of the small scale substitute, for the film-manufacturer is becoming a realist in every sense of the word."

DISEASE FROM WIRELESS

The latest in the list of occupational maladies is "wireless operator's disease". A German authority reports that the men who send the C.Q.D. signals suffer often from impoverished blood, headaches and other untoward symptoms. That these are directly due to the powerful electric waves sent out by their machines has not been directly proved, but incidents are cited that make this appear at least probable. Other conditions only indirectly connected with wireless telegraphy may, of course, add to the effect. We translate the following from a German scientific journal:

"Wireless telegraphers are subject to anaemia, in which the number of red blood globules, as well as their content of hemoglobin, is diminished. This malady has certainly various causes: in the first place, the defective samity conditions of the stations, especially on board ship. It is equally probably that the strong ozonization of the air, due to the use of alternating currents of high frequency to send the messages, plays an important part. Similar troubles, such as paleness, headache, loss of appetite, and bad digestion, have often been noted among the electrical workers employed in high tension plants, such as those at Niagara.

"The future will show us whether electric waves have any physiologic effects. A Viennese physician Dr. Beer, has noted the production of subjective glows when a powerful electri-magnet is brought near the head."
