Rippling Rhymes

THE IDLE RICH

The idle rich are showing their right to be on earth; to war we see them going, to scrap for all they're worth. Not sullenly or slowly, and not with feet congealed, but with a fervor holy the rich boys seek the field. They're fighting in the navy, and every morn they pray, "Oh, let us knock the gravy from some fat foe to-day!" They're training and they're drilling, with patriotic vim, they're full of pep and willing to sacrifice a limb. Their lives at home were sunny, it was their joy and pride to blow in all the money their fathers would provide. They rode in cushioned motors, regardless of the cost, and I and other voters considered them a frost. But now we see them moving where raging armies meet, and they are surely proving that they're as good at wheat. The gilded lads are building themselves a laurel wreath; they've shaken off the gilding, and shown the gold beneath. Their fathers pay the taxes, with smiles serene and high, and they swing their battle-axes, and make the Teuton fly. They are so deep in slaughter they heed not bulls and bears; on land, in air and water, you see the millionaires.

CLIMATE IS CHANGING.

New Orleans, June 15.— (Associated Press)—The climate of New Orleans is undergoing a change, already with an increase in temperature since 1900 of eight degrees in summer and a decrease of four degrees in winter. Dr. I. M. Cline, Weather Bureau District Forecaster, holds that the city of New Orleans, itself, is responsible because of the installation some years ago of the sub-surface drainage system.

The scientific explanation is that water absorbs heat more slowly than the earth during the day and loses it less rapidly at night.. New Orleans, entirely surrounded by water and with its soil saturated, formerly boasted of a more uniform climate. In late years, however, levees have prevented overflows, reclamation projects have effected the draining of swamps and, finally, sub-surface drainage in the city not only has eliminated surface water from the street drains but ground moisture has been lowered eight or ten feet.

Several street railways, including those of Liverpool and Manchester, have decided to adopt the American precedent of running "skip-stop" cars, which omit about half of the customary stops.
