A table showing how to connect the sound "l" as in "pipe" with any preceding or following consonant.

This table will be found very useful, because the words figured in this table are of frequent occurrence. Beginners are apt to make more angles than is necessary, especially in words similar to those in this table. The table shows the way to avoid angles whenever possible. See then that you write all the monograms of this table exactly as they are printed.