A WAY TO KEEP COOL.

Crooks Lock a Barkeeper in His Refrigerator and Steal His Greenbacks.

NEW YORK, July 19.—A liquor-store keeper at No. 22 Watts street, who rejoices in the absolutely unpronounceable name of Fptelgeder, was the only person in the city yesterday who took pleasure in the heat. Most people would envy his happy lot, but in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday Frederick Fptelgeder declared, with great emphasis, that he should be an object of pity rather than of jealousy. It all came about in this wise:

Saturday afternoon Patrick Coyle, alias Clark, 22 years old, of No. 333 West Seventeenth street, went with two companions to Frederick's shop and demanded soda. Frederick stepped inside his big ice-cooler to get the soda, when the three benevolent customers locked him in. Then they took $67 from his waistcoat, which was hanging on a convenient hook. By the time help came to the comfortable barkeeper he was almost frozen, and he will be hardly more than comfortable during the rest of the heated term. Yet he showed so little appreciation as to make a complaint against Coyle, who was held.

THE WHEEL.

AN EX-LONDONER'S VICTORY.

Mr. J. R. Taylor, of the Standard Oil Company, New York, son of Mr. William Taylor, G. T. R. conductor, this city, has suddenly developed into a cycling wonder. Mr. Taylor has been riding over a year, and at the recent Press Cycling Club meet in New York surprised everybody, including himself, as he says, by defeating Mr. Windle, the "Milbury Wonder," in the one mile open race. "I came in third on the second heat," he writes to relatives here, "which was just what I wanted, as it allowed me to run in the final heat without anybody thinking I was extra speedy. In the final I let myself out for all I was worth and won first prize, which was an "A" Raleigh racer, weighing only 26 pounds. It is as fine a machine as I ever saw, and is worth $180. In the one-mile invitation race afterwards I was in even better form than in the first, and did my mile in very fast form. There was nothing too good for me at the club when I got home."

Mr. Taylor is an old London boy, and his friends here will be pleased to hear of his success in this field.

A Mother's Sad Mistak.

DETROIT, July 19.—Mabel Emmons, the 7-year-old daughter of Mertin Emmons, Clinton street, met with an awful death yesterday morning through the mistake of her mother. The girl complained of not feeling well and Mrs. Emmons gave her a dose of what she supposed was some castor oil in some coffee. Soon after Mabel was seized with violent cramps and pains in the stomach, and it was found she had taken carbolic acid by mistake. Dr. Jacob gave her an emetic, but the girl died inless than an hour.
