IS IT WORTH WHILE?

Is it worth while that we jostle a brother,
Bearing his load on the rough road of life?
Is it worth while that we jeer at each other
In blackness of heart?—that we war to the knife?
God pity us all in our pitiful strife.

God pity us all as we jostle each other;
God pardon us all for the triumphs we feel
When a fellow goes down neath his load on the heather,
Pierced to the heart, words are keener than steel,
And mightier far for woe or weal.

Were it not well in this brief little journey?
On over the isthmus, down into the tide,
We give them a fish instead of a serpent,
Erg folding his hands to be and abide
Forever and aye in the dust at his side?

Look at the roses saluting each other;
Look at the herds in all peace on the plain;
Man, and man only, make war on his brother,
And laughs in his heart at his peril and pain;
Shamed by the beasts that go down on the plain.

Is it worth while that we battle to humble
Some poor fellow soldier down into the dust?
God pity us all! Time it soon will tumble
All of us together, like leaves in gust,
Humbled indeed down in the dust.

SERMONS BY THE HOUR.—"After the Reformation," says a writer in All the year round, "long sermons came into fashion. The mediæval and pre-Reformation divines contented—themselves with a homily varying from ten to thirty minutes in length; but the Huguenots, Waldenses, Puritans, Covenanters, Independents, and other protesting bodies, conceiving it their duty to assert and maintain those relating to doctrines and discipline, made their sermons argumentative to an inordinate length. The hour glass literally corresponded with its name, for it ran for one hour before the sand had all passed through, and the preacher claimed his full sixty minutes. Sometimes he was provided with a half hour glass, which he used when a shorter sermon was to be preached. It was about the middle of the seventeenth century, when Puritan sermons occasionally reached the enormous length of two hours, that the hour glass limit was applied. Many pulpits were furnished with iron stands for the reception of the hour glass. One such is still existing at Comton Bassett Church, Wilts, with a fleur-de-lis handle for turning the glass when the sand had run out. Another, at Hurst, in Berkshire, has a fanciful wrought iron frame, with foliage of oak and ivy, and an inscription, "As this glass runneth so man's life passeth." At Cliffe, in Kent, is a stand for an hour glass on a bracket affixed to the pulpit. The parish accounts of St. Catherine, Alderate, contain an old entry, 'Paid for an hour glass that hangeth by the pulpit where the preacher doth make a sermon, that he may know how the hour passeth away one shilling,' and another relates to a behest of 'an hower glass, with a frame to stand in.' One preacher had exhausted his sand glass, turned it, and gone through three fourths of another running; the congregation had nearly all retired, and the clerk, tired out, audibly asked his reverend superior to lock up the church and put the key under the door when the sermon was done, as he (the clerk) and the few remaining auditors were going away. Hugh Peters, after preaching an hour, turned his hour glass and said, 'I know your are good fellows; so let's have another glass.' Daniel Burgess, an eloquent Noncomformist divine in the early part of the late century, let his hour glass run out while preaching vehemently against the sin of drunkenness. He reversed it, and exclaimed, 'Brethren, I have some what more to say on the nature and consequences of drunkenness; so let's have another glass, and and then ——,' which was a regular toper's phrase. A rector of Bibury used to preach two turns of the glass; after the giving out of the text the squire of the parish withdrew smoked his pipe and returned to the blessing.'"

Among the novel and useful fabrics exhibited at Vienna was kind of paper, very strong and tough, and yet perfectly soft and pliable, like cloth. This is embossed and printed on, and is prepared for the purpose of hangings, curtains &c., for which it is said to possess remarkable adaption as compared with what is commonly employed. It is simply applied to the walls, so that it can easily be removed at any time. The material is also described as handsome in appearance, durable, and by no means expensive.

Laws allowing married women to trade on their own account, and making them and their separate estate liable for the debts of the business, are, and must continue to be the source of a good deal of litigation. In Bangor, Me., the wife being in the millinery business, she and her husband were sued for goods charged and billed to the wife alone. The court charged that prima facie she alone was liable. But if the husband had a joint interest in the business, not merely an interest as a husband, but over and above that as a partner, or so held himself out, then he was liable; otherwise not. The jury found that the husband "never promised."

It may be regarded as one of the signs of the times that tailors who formerly exulted to trust and blushed to be paid are becoming far less accommodating. Several of the most prominent of the trade in Boston "have agreed to publish in two of the daily papers the names and residences of their customers who do not pay promptly." This gloomy catalogue is to appear before the 1st of November, and will add another to the depressing influences of that low-spirited month. It is hard to pay for pantaloons which have been worn out; it will be harder not to be able to buy any pantaloons at all.

The autumnal season has produced the usual amount of newspaper notices, both in prose and verse; but we have seen nothing to compare with the sad refrain of a journal printed in Pennsylvania, and appropriately called The Valley Spirit, which thus gives vent to its feelings: "The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year; it's a little too warm for whisky hot, and a little too cold for beer."

The most extensive family wedding on record occurred the other day in Cincinnati. A widowed mother, three sons, and two daughters were all married at once. The cost of the rites was put at wholesale rate. It is observed sagely by a local newspaper that perhaps this is the commencement of a system of domestic economy which will save many a dispence for a rainy day.

The blockade business of Minnesota is much affected by the depression.—Only 913 men go into the woods this winter, against 1,675 men sent last winter by the same number of firms.

Iron in the Blood

PERUVIAN AN IRON TONIC SYRUP

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Discases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.
