THE BOODLE INVESTIGATION.

guise of loans and concealed in various accounts. Everett disappears for nearly a year, and then bobs up again in the street-lighting contract, because, as you will remember, it was his suggestion to get it, and again corruption rears its ugly head."

Aid Stewart a Decoy.

Is it credible, asked Counsel Nesbitt, that Stewart was not inspired to furnish the decoy figures, which could only benefit the Street Railway Company? What possible motive can be ascribed to him for so doing, other than this?"

Ex-Mayor Fleming Acquitted.

Mr. Nesbitt referred to ex-Mayor Fleming as follows: I have examined into Mr. Fleming's affairs as he placed them before me, and have checked the statement of his assets and liabilities for the past four years, and traced the disposition which has been made of matters and the deposits made by him in cash and the present condition of his finances, and can find no trace of any matter which is not fully explained to my satisfaction, and, after my examination, have stated to Mr. Fleming that it is not desire his presence on the stand, as there was nothing in reference to which I would call upon him for any explanation. I mention his name because he was put upon the stand as a witness, and was left with a statement that I would look into his affairs, and if I found anything which indicated any suggestion of wrongdoing upon his part that I would recall him, and it is only therefore proper and right that I should make the statement which I now make in reference to the matter.

The Judgment Against Fleming.

I am also quite satisfied that the judgment which was purchased against him was intended to be used for the purpose of pressure, but that design was desisted from.

I have also had Mr. Fleming's explanation upon the subject of his private interview with Coleman in July, 1893, and I find that the matters which Mr. Fleming states were discussed existed, and were matters of an entirely personal character relating to pecuniary transactions with third parties, whom Coleman represented, and were bona fide, and in no way related to Mr. Fleming's public position, and are not pertinent to this enquiry.

In concluding his argument, Mr. Nesbitt thanked His Honor for the courtesy which he had extended towards him. "I desire also," he said, "to make clear to the public the fact that nothing that has been brought to my attention has been overlooked. I have carefully considered and weighed each of the various matters, and bearing in mind the large powers with which the tribunal is vested, I have been careful to avoid making any charge or dealing with any matter until I have satisfied myself that I had reasonably clear proof of guilt."

The Difficulty of Obtaining Evidence.

"I have not put all the aldermen on the stand and examined them, because no good purpose could be served unless there was something tangible against them, and I felt that such a proceeding would involve suspicion, and it would appear to me to be poor return to upright aldermen to even suggest such an imputation when there was no pretence for a foundation to the question.

"A difficulty in obtaining evidence of bribery at this investigation has been enhanced by the fact that one of the parties towards whom nearly all the circumstances point in each case has been able to obtain large sums in cash without the same appearing in his own account, and has been apparently 'trusted' by all parties to an almost incredible extent."

I desire a finding, continued counsel, against these gentlemen:

Ald. Bailey.

Ald. Bailey, who has pursued the course of paying no attention whatever to the evidence which was elicited, in which Coleman admitted that Bailey had corruptly received two sums of $800 and $200, the one in connection with the franchise and the other in connection with the change in the street railway agreement. I endeavored to subpena Mr. Bailey for some time, but found he was absent from the city and ungettatable; later I was informed that he was in the city; but I did not issue a subpena, because I came to the conclusion that if he saw fit to absent himself and thus practically admit his guilt, there was no object to be obtained in going further than the uncontradicted evidence.

Ald. Gowanlock.

With regard to Ald. Gowanlock, there is the evidence about the bet. I have not gone further with the evidence about him because I am informed that he has resigned from the council, and I have received his statement that he does not propose running again. It was understood that that would be used by me as an admission that certain further evidence which might have been given could only hope to be contradicted by him, which evidence I should have asked him to be found guilty upon; with that and the handing in of the resignation I have not deemed it in the public interest to further pursue that enquiry, because it would involve a large expense in obtaining evidence from a distance, and I do not think that I would be warranted in going to that expense under the circumstances. I ask, therefore, as to Ald. Gowanlock, that that, coupled with the evidence that was given, be taken as evidence of guilt against him.

Ex-Ald. Small.

Ex-Ald. Small and the Ashbridge's Bay affair. This is a matter where you have Mr. Beavis practically contradicting Mr. Small, and were it not for the other bits of evidence which points towards Mr. Small being mixed up in the other matters, to say the least, particularly the Guelich matter, one would hesitate to ask, when it is oath against oath, for a conviction, but it is to be borne in mind that no motive can be attributed to Beavis for having come forward and told this story. Mr. Small, when asked about that, suggested that the motive was that he, Beavis, had been inspired by some people since August of 1893, in reference to the Sunday car matter, but Ald. Hollinshead, happening to be in court, I put him in the box to show that Beavis had reported this story to him as early as 1892, and I may say, in fact, acquainted it to others. Apparently Beavis was actuated by no positive motive, so we must deal with the question upon the demeanor of the witness and on the cross-examination.

Ald. Hewitt.

As to Hewitt. I do not think I need add anything further about him. I can best describe him in the words of a learned counsel in another matter as "one of the hangers-on of the edge of society, which society ought to be protected against," and perhaps will be.

Ex-Ald. Hall.

Ex-Ald. Hall. I am sorry to say, is in a worse position than that of Hewitt. He is a man who belongs to a learned profession whose teachings ought to have made him better, but who was engaged in a transaction that reflects, to say the least of it, on all the parties concerned. The document which we find signed by him is one of the most damnable documents that I have ever read. It is a document by which a man undertakes for hire, for filthy hire, to play the spy upon respectable business concerns, against whom he has no cause to play the spy, and it reveals a state of things that I must ask Your Honor to find that Everett was fully cognizant of, in face of the evidence against him. I do not believe that any person will believe that these people (Hall and Hewitt) were not speaking by the authority and the knowledge of Mr. Everett, who will not deny that he was closeted with them, and I hold that Everett is just as mixed up in the matter as the others. I do not think anyone would believe that Hall and Hewitt were not speaking by the book, that they could and would give secret information, and that, if necessary to saving the Edison people the contract, they would be ready to put in their tenders.

Ex-Ald. Verral.

With regard to ex-Ald. Verral I cannot say much more than I have already said. His attitude in the box certainly impresses one favorably, and were we able to get at a motive for Guelich and these other parties ascribing the facts to him, and were it not for the singular corroboration that we find in other matters of what Guelich stated, one would be inclined to say that this was a case where Mr. Verral, whose course in the Council, with this one exception, appears to have been a very straightforward one—that Mr. Verral was not guilty of the charge. Under all the circumstances, I cannot do more than put the matter in the way that I have to Your Honor.

With Ald. Maloney I have already dealt.

W Adamson Bell.

The only other person remaining is the unfortunate clerk, W. A. Bell. If Your Honor's view is that that man was used only on one occasion, and that then for some hidden reason, he was subject to Coleman's influence at that time, that knowing ex-Ald. Bell's financial embarrassments he handed him this money without reflection I should be inclined not to be too harsh with him.

The Judge: You must bear in mind that he communicated Ald. Bell's difficulties to Coleman.

Mr. Nesbitt: Yes, Your Honor, there is that. It is also extraordinary to believe that Coleman would have used this man upon this particular occasion unless there been some knowledge that Bell was a safe man to use as an agent.

Ald. Hallam

Ald. Hallam is the only other person against whom the evidence has pointed at all. That I leave entirely with your Honor. Ald. Hallam's course during 1891 was throughout against the Street Railway Company. There is undoubted evidence that he did approach Mr. Kiely and ask him to be let in on the ground floor to the extent of $50,000. Ald. Hallam says that if he had got the interest in the syndicate he would have resigned his seat in the Council. It was not a case where one can ask one way or the other, because the man admitted it, and everything therefore turns upon Your Honor's view as to whether Mr. Hallam would have resigned or not.

Ex-Ald. Bell Cleared.

As to ex-Ald. Bell I can only say that he admits he got the money through the post and did not return it until the next morning; while this much is to be said to his credit, he did resist both that and the suggestion thrown out by C. A. B. Brown. Whether Mr. Brown did or did not mention money to him I think it would be well to warn citizens against holding out personal inducements of any sort to aldermen when canvassing for their vote. It is, I say, to Ald. Bell's credit that he did resist that influence, despite the fact that he was in the greatest pecuniary difficulties—the bailiff in the house, his wife and children almost without bread. We find him resisting a bribe of which no one would apparently have been the wiser, and resisting further approaches and honestly and frankly telling about it when he was pressed. I do not attach very great importance to the fact that he did not announce it at the time, because it would simply have been his word against others.

The Judge: The proper, the manly and the honest way of dealing with it would have been for him to have handed the money to the Mayor and expose the attempted corruption then and there.

A Remarkable Address.

The most entertaining and interesting feature of the day's proceedings was the speech delivered by Junior Counsel Grier. With but very brief notes Mr. Grier, who has been an indefatigable worker throughout the enquiry in obtaining and tracing evidence, delivered a most witty, humorous and eloquent harangue. He handled the various points of the investigation in a masterly manner, and when he sat down, the audience, which had listened throughout with unbroken attention, held muffled whispers, and showed an inclination to applaud.

So far as the Bell Telephone Co. franchise was concerned, they could not, said Mr. Grier, ask His Honor to find anything with reference to aldermen in connection with the transaction. Nor with respect to the charges against ex-Ald. Hill could they ask for any finding.

The Directing Influence.

With regard to the Guelich matter, everything pointed, said counsel, to one direct influence, the Street Railway Co. The evidence of ex-Ald. Bell alone was sufficient to prove that.

Secretary Grace, he believed, had given expression to the truth in the most candid form when he said: "We don't give contracts to men in order to make them hostile? That statement might be accepted without a grain of salt; it was absolutely true; it might have been placed in this form: "We do give contracts in order to render persons friendly to us." Coleman was not working accidentally, but as a component part of the whole machinery, which was interested in getting that for the Street Railway Company, which they desired to further their ends.

Regarding the $7000 loan to Coleman by Everett, Mr. Grier pointed out Everett's admission that he suspected that Coleman had desired the money in order to corrupt aldermen. Speaking of the Hall, Hewitt & Edison Company agreement counsel said it was impossible to fitly speak of the heniousness of Mr. Hall's connection with the transaction and his conduct in the box. There was nothing he said in the annals of our courts or any courts, any occurrence in which the denial of the truth was so specific as it was in the case of Mr. Hall's.

The Innocent Babes in the Wood by the Street Railway Company.

The payment of $4000 by the Street Railway Company to E. A. Macdonald to get him to stop his proceedings against the city pointed as everything pointed, to the corrupt influences and the power which was behind these men. Turning to the loan of $10,000 by Kiely to Hewitt, Mr. Grier asked if anything could be more weird phantastic and misleading than the evidence which had been given as to the transaction, and showed in a humorous manner the roundabout and complicated way in which the loan had been put through. "These keen business men belong to that class of babes in the wood, on whose detah the little robin redbreasts will cover their bodies with leaves," was counsel's shot at the street railway witnesses. "They had better look out," added he, "that they don't peep through teh leaves to see if there are detectives watching."

Exit the False, Enter the True.

What they had proved, continued Mr. Gree, was more tahn enough to have established the truth of the remarks that had been made that corruption did exist, and also the importance of holding an investigation. Mr. Grace's knowledge of the transactions in which Coleman was interested could not be bound by the limitations which he would place upon it. He knew far more about that particular transaction with reference to the $7000 than he had given them in the box, and he also knew more about the coal orders to Ex-Ald. Bell.

In conclusion, Mr. Greer said it perhaps would not be inappropriate at this season of the year to make use of the quotation: "Ring out the false, ring in the true."

A Specific Finding Against Grace.

Mr. Nesbitt: I must ask Your Honor for a specific finding against Mr. Grace upon the subject of his complicity in the bribing of Ex-Ald. Bell. He admits a request made by Coleman to him to give the order for coal, and I think his admission goes the full length that he is perfectly aware that the order was given to influence his vote.

Hon. S. C. Biggs then addressed the judge on behalf of Ex-Ald. Verral. He argued that Guelich's evidence was to be discredited, and submitted that Mr. Verral could not be found guilty upon his evidence.

The Investigation Not Yet Closed.

The Judge then said: With reference to closing this investigation entirely, it strikes me that, in view of several matters that have transpired, it would be hardly prudent for me at this stage to hand back my authority to the City Council. I propose, therefore, to keep the investigation open so far as the resolution is concerned, and to make up my report in the meantime upon the matters upon which evidence has been tendered, and unless something transpires within a brief period we will have a formal meeting and bring the mattert o a conclusion. In the meantime, I understand, there will be no further evidence offered until the day to be named, and then only in case of evidence of a material character and dealing with further charges or some other matter within the scope of the resolution.

The proceedings then closed.

AN ARMY OF COUNTERFEITERS.

280 Makers of Bogus Coins Under Arrest in Mexico.

New York, Dec. 26.—A Recorder special from the City of Mexico says: The authorities who are conducting an investigation into the work that is being done in this city by counterfeiters have made some startling discoveries. It is evident there is an organized colony of several hundred persons scattered about the city employed in making and circulating spurious coin.

Thousands of dollars of the stuff have been successfully passed within a few weeks. Arrests of members of the band have been made daily, and now 208 of them are in prison awaiting trial. But the industry still flourishes.

A SOLID SENTENCE.

Captain Stephenson of the New York Police Convicted of Taking Bribes.

New York, Dec. 26.—Ex-Police Captain John T. Stephenson, the first of the police officials tried and convicted as an outcome of the exposure brought about by the Lexow Committee, was sentenced by Judge Ingraham in the Court of Oyer and Terminer to-day to three years and nine months in Sing Sing and to pay a fine of $1000.

Mr. J. L. Hughes and the Aqueduct.

Editor World: I have always refrained from taking part in municipal politics, but as I have the honor to be connected with the Georgian Bay Ship Canal and Power Aqueduct Company, and as the efforts of the Mayor and certain aldermen during the past year have been directed chiefly to opposing the company, greatly to the injury of Toronto, I feel that it would be unjust both to the company and the city if the questions at issue were not discussed now.

The leaders in opposing the granting of fair terms to the company were Ald. Shaw and Mayor Kennedy. They appeared without instructions from the Council before the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature, and did all in their power to prevent the granting of a charter to the company, and in every possible way obstructed us, although we asked no bonus, no guaranteeing of bonds, no monopoly, no favors of any kind, no privileges whatever except the right to sell cheaper power, light and heat to the people of Toronto on precisely the same conditions granted to other similar companies by the city.

There is no other question to be dealt with by the new council of such importance to the city as the aqueduct question. No other question involves so much of immediate advantage to the workingmen who can get no work to do or so great an ultimate advantage to the city by providing the cheapest power in the world, and thus helping to make Toronto one of the greatest manufacturing centres of America.

I therefore invite Ald. Shaw or Mayor Kennedy, or both of them, to meet me in a public discussion of the aqueduct question. I would like to meet one or both of them in each of the six wards of the city, to let the people hear both sides of this question. If they cannot afford to have six meetings, let us at least have three meetings.

Anarchists in Lancashire.

London, Dec. 26.—A bomb was exploded opposite the Town Hall in Oldham, seven miles northeast of Manchester, this morning, but no damage was done, the bomb having been placed too far away from the building to do it any harm.

A Dinner Pill — Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomach, and instead of being a healthy nutriment it becomes a poison to the system. Dr. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such trouble. They correct acidity, open the secretions and convert the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medicine to take if troubled with indigestion or dyspepsia.

The State of California this superior accommodation for first and second cabin and steerage passengers. Steerage fare still reduced; everything found.

Mrs. L. Squire, Ontario Steam Dye Works, Toronto, says: "For about 30 years I have doctored for Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia without getting any cure. I then tried Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and the benefits I have received from this medicine are such that I cannot withhold this expression of my gratitude. It acts immediately on the liver. As a Dyspepsia remedy I don't think it can be equalled."
