HOMAGE PAID TO "VICTORY"

Modern War Vessels Salute Nelson's Old Flagship At Portsmouth

("Jackstaff" in London Daily Mail.)

Like an empress holding court, Nelson's flagship the Victory swings proudly at her moorings in Portsmouth harbor and receives with stately dignity the homage of all modern fighting craft as they pass deferentially by.

An appealing sight, one that stirs the blood and sets the mind to weaving visions, this of the newest men-of-war paying their respectful salutations to the oldest warship afloat.

But it is not the showy aspect alone that attracts the spectator. A certain something in the atmosphere, possibly the romantic contrast between then and now, stimulates the imagination and sets one conjuring up mental pictures, fanciful, if you will, though so full of charm that one could wish with some assurance that they were real. As an illustration, if it be that the mighty dead have power to come among us, all seeing, yet unseen, and walk with shadowy footsteps again the ways along which they once trod an earthly path that led them to undying glory, may we not imagine the shade of gallant Nelson pacing the Victory's quarter-deck and gazing with astonished eyes upon the procession of strange keels which pay honor to his memory as with swift-gliding obeisance they steam past his grand old flagship? A motly throng often these fighters of to-day, with such oddly shapen hulls among them as to impart a touch of the fantastic to the contrast between past and present.

First to move out, a huge super-Dreadnought swings down on the tide. While she is in the distance the call of a bugle winds along her decks and one notices the crew mustering at her sides. Marine guards are mounted on bridges and quarter-deck. When opposite the Victory the bugles sing a chant of salutation while the men come to attention and remain rigidly thus while the great battleship "doffs her cap," as it were, to the famous old three-decker, then with dignified mien goes her way to sea. Maybe cruisers big and little follow her example in giving ceremonious greeting to the Victory as they pass her by.

An interval, and then the destroyers begin to slip past, appearing, as always, to be in a vast hurry; yet they, too, "Fell in all hands on deck" for the act of homage to the navy's pride that may under no circumstances be omitted. Along waddles a monitor, misshapen of build, awkward of gait and "makes her bow" after the fashion of one unused to courtly usages, then lurches onward again, anxious to get where there is plenty of sea room.

Well in her wake are the old craft —very old, some of them so far as looks go. Quainter fitures than they have never conformed to the rules of naval etiquette during the long and changeful period in which the Victory has queened it in this picturesque way over all others of our fighting ships.

Each One Salutes.

Each of them salutes her punctiliously. Even the fussy motor launches, though often manned by those who are new to the ways of the sea, scrupulously make conge to the noble old ship. So also do the submarines which pass her. Occasionally one views a striking object lesson in naval development when a seaplane is droning waspishly above the Victory's towering masts, while a submarine slides gently through the water just under the beam.

From her high place as senior flagship the Victory has seen our navy remodelled more than once, and never in a state of more remarkable transformation than now. Still, as the only visible embodiment of the senior service's great traditions, this Used-to-Be" daily claims her meed of homage from the "Navy-That-Is," as in days to come she will exact it from "The Navy-That-is-Yet-to-Be." And who among us is there that has prescience enough to forecast just what that navy will be like?

COLD STORAGE MEN STILL HOARD FOOD

Stocks Still Being Accumulated While Legislature Fights H. C. of L.

AN O'CONNOR REPORT

Some significant figures were made public to-day by Mr. W. F. O'Connor, Acting Commissioner on the cost of living. In his monthly statement as to the quantity of food held in cold-storage on August 1st, he says: "There is evidence of accumulation of butter, eggs, cheese and beef. The quantity of butter now in storage exceeds by forty per cent., the quantity of eggs by thirty-one per cent., the quantity of cheese by twenty-nine per cent. and the quantity of beef by fifty per cent., that reported as held on August 1st, 1916. The returns for 1917 cover a few more firms than those of 1916, but this fact merely detracts from the proportion of the increase in accumulation. It is stated that the accumulaion is to respond to orders for the export trade. The quantity of pork held is normal as compared with the August 1st, 1916, figure. There is a forty per cent. decrease in the holdings of bacon as compared with August, 1916.

Foodstuffs on Hand

Mr. O'Connor's statement compiled from returns made by 96 per cent. of all cold-storage companies in Canada shows that the quantities on hand at the first of this month were:

Eggs, 13,001,751 dozen; butter 12,250,124 pounds; cheese, 19,919,693 pounds; pork, 13,867,331 pounds; bacon, 6,062,983 pounds; ham, 2,301,799 pounds; smoked meats, 218,963 pounds; beef, 6,015,772 pounds mutton and lamb, 604,101 pounds; pickled beef, 1,896,913 pounds; pickled pork, 19,549,533 pounds; fowl, all kinds, 3,468,854 pounds; fish, all kinds, 13,993,170 pounds.

Mr. O'Connor adds that ten per cent. should be added to these figures to represent the quantities held by firms whose reports have been delayed and to cover goods in transit within Canada.

Ontario has proportionately far the largest amount held in cold-storage. More than half of all the ham is held in Ontario. About three million pounds of bacon are held in Quebec, one and a half million pounds in Manitoba, and one million pounds in Alberta. Eleven million pounds of pickled pork are held in Ontario, six million pounds in Alberta and one a half million pounds in British Columbia and the Yukon. About five and one-half million pounds of butter are held in Quebec and four million pounds in Ontario. Fifteen million pounds of cheese are held in Quebec and three million pounds in Ontario.

Of the three million pounds of fowl held in cold-storage, over one million pounds are in Manitoba and nearly one million in Alberta. Ontario and Quebec hold about 400,000 pounds each. Of fish, Quebec province holds three million pounds, British Columbia nine million pounds, Alberta one million pounds and the Maritime Provinces over one million pounds.
