The Chronicle.

NEW VESSELS.—A new ship called the Revenue, was launched on Saturday last from the building yard of Messrs. F. Ruddock and Brothers, at the Straight Shore, and we need scarcely to inform our readers that she is as fine a specimen of a New Brunswick ship as ever was built in the Colony, both as regards her model and construction. She was built of the best materials, under the inspection of Lloyd's Surveyors, to class seven years; is partially iron kneed, having twenty on each side between decks, and measures 1210 tons register and 1260 tons old or carpenter's measurement.

Another equally superior ship called the Sir W. F. Williams, was launched on Monday last from the building yard of Messrs. McLachlan and Stackhouse and Carleton. She was also built in the most substantial and expensive manner, under the inspection of Lloyd's Surveyors, to class seven years; and measures 1216 tons old or carpenter's measurement. She has been named after that gallant Nova Scotian, General Williams, the Hero of Kars; and is owned by her enterprising builders, who are well known in the Liverpool market for the superior class of vessels they have already built.

A new ship of handsome model and proportions called the "Oceanica," was launched on the 23d instant from the building yard of Messrs. Guss, Stewart & Co., at Courtenay Bay, which premises were formerly occupied by Messrs. W. & R. Wright, the celebrated builders. She has been built of the best materials that could be procured, under the inspection of Lloyd's surveyors, to class seven years, and we believe will bear a very favorable comparison with any ship that has ever been built on the same ground. Messrs. G. S. & Co., have been formerly employed in Messrs. Wright's establishment, and have now succeeded to the business, and as this is the first vessel they have built on their own account, we have much pleasure in wishing them success in their new undertaking. She measures 1320 tons register, and 1265 tons late register, and is owned by her builders who have called her Oceanica, which is the name which has been recently adopted to designate all the countries which are considered as formerly the fifth grand division of the globe, including Malaysia, Australia, and Polynesia. Captain Paschel will have command of this vessel.

A new brig called the Rapid was launched on the 22d instant, from the building yard of Messrs. Thompson & Stackhouse, at Carleton. She was built to class seven years, under the inspection of Lloyd's surveyors, and measures 142 tons register and 190 old or carpenters' measurement. She is one of a small fleet now building at this port for Messrs. R. & R. Allen, of Wexford.

A very superior built vessel, called the Kings of Algerine, in compliment to the infant son of the Emperor of the French, was launched a few days ago from the Building Yard of Messrs. Nevins & Irvine, at the Marsh Bridge. She was built of the best materials, under the inspection of Lloyd's Surveyors, to class seven years, and is considered to be of fine model. She measures, per register, 1336 tons, and 1460 tons late register.—Courier of Saturday.

GOOD FOR THE SICK.

What shall I eat? How often this question is asked by the sick, or those with delicate appetites. Nature demands food, but the appetite does not crave it, and the mind of the feeble invalid cannot fix upon any thing that he will relish.

It may relieve such sufferers to point out a few suitable articles of food such as are easily prepared, and usually tempt delicate appetites.

Here is one peculiarly New England dish:

"Cut some codfish to bits the size of a pen, and boil it a minute in water to freshen it. Pour off all the water, and add some cream and a little pepper.

"Split and toast a Boston cracker, and put the above upon it. Milk and a little butter may be used instead of cream.

"Ham or smoked beef may be prepared in the same way. For a variety, beat up an egg and stir it in, instead of cream, or with the cream.

"Those preparations are also good for a relish for a family for breakfast or tea."

Another excellent dish for sick or well, and economical withal, is made by taking a few cakes of pilot bread and soaking them till partially soft, after breaking them into mouthfuls; in just water enough to be all absorbed; then a cut slice of fat salt pork into very small pieces, fry it crisp, pour it over the bread, and heat the whole in stove or oven, or in a spider.

Another plan is to pour over the bread a sweetened butter gravy, or wine sauce, or the juice of stewed fruit or preserves. All are good.

A very excellent food for delicate stomachs may be made by sweetening water cold or hot, with refined sugar, and crumbling into it stale bread.

Bread and cider used to be a favorite food in Yankee land, in old times. Sweeten the cider, and crumb into it toasted bread.

Beef tea is very nourishing, if rightly prepared. Take perfectly lean parts of fat beef, cut it into cubes half an inch square, and soak it some hours in cold water, and then boil all together for an hour. You may improve this by adding a toasted cracker to each bowl full.

Mutton or chicken tea should be made in the same way, and rice may be added to either, to make it feed as well as drink.

Sometimes a piece of codfish or a slice of fat salt pork, roasted upon live coals, will tempt a convalescent appetite when nothing else will answer.

In making porridge of corn or oatmeal, be careful to cook it well. Don't think it done till it has boiled an hour.

Rice gruel does not need so much cooking. It should not be given to a person of constipated habits.

Simple boiled rice is a delicate food for the sick.

Arrowroot, tapioca, farina, and corn starch, are all of the same character—highly concentrated food. A good gruel may be made of either, and flavored with sugar, nutmeg, lemon, etc. Stale bread, very dry, crumbed and made into a gruel, is perhaps the most digestible. Stale bread toasted very dry and brown, and then steeped in water a long time, makes a good drink for the sick, and furnishes considerable nourishment.

In all cases of sickness, when the appetite craves fruit we would give it, ripe and fresh in its season, or preserved and cooked in the most simple manner. Apples for the sick should always be roasted. So should potatoes.

If the friends of the sick persons, a little skill and neatness in the preparation of dishes, the patient need never say, "what shall I eat?"

WOMAN'S HALF-STATE.—If a woman was more intimately acquainted with the nice, duty, hopes, and fears of man, with his business, his education, his strong temptations and trials and temptations, she would be of much more service to him, intellectually, morally, and socially. I do not believe the apparent isolation of woman from man's business, pleasures, and hope.

The aggregate tonnage of the United States vessels built in 1855, was 22,024.
