DEATH OF POCAHONTAS.

In 1866, when Pocahontas made her record at Boston of 2,56¼, she was regarded as the greatest trotter alive, and Mr. Bonner bought her and placed her in his stable. The price paid was $35,000 in cash and Lady Drummond, for whom $5,000 had been refused. Lady Drummond was known as the Queen of Canada, and she had a record of 2.26. Mr. Bonner purchased her in 1863 and bred her to Rysdyk's Hambletonian, and got Ruth. In 1873 Ruth was bred to Edward Everett, then owned by Mr. Bonner, and the produce was Macey's Hambletonian, dropped on the farm at Tarrytown, and now owned in Europe. Macey's Hambletonian is the sire of Bosque Bonita, the champion trotter of Europe by virtue of her recent record of 2.19¾. Subsequent events show that Lady Drummond was not valued too highly when she was put in the trade at $5,000. Pocahontas was a handsome bay mare, foaled in 1859, and by Ethen Allen, 2.26¾ out of the famous pacer Pocahontas, 2.17¾ to waggon. She was perfectly gaited and one of the best roadsters ever seen in New York. She trotted a trial for Mr. Bonner in 2.17¾. Tom Rolfe, sire of Young Rolfe, 2.21¼, sire of Nelson, the champion stallion, 2.10¾, was out of pacing Pocahontas. Mr. Bonner's Pocohontas was not bred until quite old, and she never got in foal. She would have been a great brood mare if mated earlier in life. She died at Mr. Bonner's farm on Tuesday, January 13, aged 32. Her teeth were badly worn, and it was with difficulty that she could take enough food to sustain life. The sod which covers her poor remains hides an investment of $40,000.—Turf, Field and Farm.

WONDERFUL FITZSIMMONS.

Robert Fitzimmons will not join "Parson" Davis aggregation for three or four weeks. He is having a good time in New Orleans, and having a $6,000 belt made for him. The Parson says of Fitzsimmons: "He is a curious looking fellow. Imagine, if you can, a middle weight fighter six feet one inch in height, with enormously long arms and legs and a rather small head, and you have him. He hasn't knocked around the world like a good many of the other men in his business, and is a bit unsophisticated. He is sober, has a good deal of hard sense, although he can't be said to have any great amount of education. He is very anxious to please the people, and after the fight asked everybody he saw if he had done everything all right.

Dempsey, talking to a friend about his recent fight, said: "I was never stronger, more active or in better condition than I was Wednesday night. I could easily have defeated any man I ever met. But even at my best, as I was, I was only a toy in that man's hands. I could not hit him, and he hit me when and where he pleased. I tell you I was never in it. Agility and dodging did no good. If I dodged one of his fists he landed with the other. I would rather have been killed in the ring than to have met such a defeat My hands are not hurt. I never hit anything with them. I hit at him, but if I landed at all it was not hard enough to hurt either him or my hands."

On the Road.

The roads were black with teams on Saturday, and the Marsh was almost impassible to quiet-going teams, for the pacers, and trotters and flyers were there. The sleighing was not good and at the rolling mills, three miles out, a couple of feet of water crossed the road. On either side a deep, flowing ditch wound its way along, and here it was just deep enough to float four young men from the city whose horse shied violently and upset the turnout. It was a turnout, indeed, for the young men had to swim ashore, and start for home.

A sleighing party which left the city Saturday afternoon, had a rough experience out Golden Grove road, for the whole country had been flooded by the recent rains, and frequently the party had to get out and walk. Sometimes fences had to be climbed to avoid the roadside rivers, and it was an extremely late hour when some of the party returned—the others stayed out.

The St. David's Church Matter.

To the Editor of the GAZETTE.

A communication appeared in your issue of the 23rd inst. signed "T. R. S." which calls for some reply. The writer, while wishing to be believed an outsider who strolled into the meeting referred to, was so evidently inspired by ill will toward the "elder" who presumed to oppose adding such large sums to the church debt, (after the efforts which have been so successfully made to lessen the same) that we are forced to the conclusion that he is not a stranger but an evil-disposed fellow-member. If we are wrong in this inference, "T. R. S." can come out of the shelter of his initials and oblige the public with his full name.

Should we be correct in our surmise your readers will agree that one honest woman in or out of St. David's is worth not only nine but ninety-nine such men as "T. R. S.," who drags church differences before the public, and anonymously slanders a brother member.

St. John, Jan. 26. JUSTICE.

Male Flirts

Mr. Editor: What do you think of young men so vain of their form and position, who go after young ladies, just to make them think they are admiring, when they are only amusing themselves, and say so? One has been after me. He has walked, driven, skated, and in the most marked fashion paid attention and now it turns out he was only amusing himself—flirting. A female flirt is bad enough, for she knows what she is doing. A male flirt is detestable, because he is playing havoc with a poor girl's warm young heart. Such fellows should be horsewhipped, or made to pay for their (fun?) in a court of law. Give us your view s, for you are a barrister as well as an editor and oblige

PLIMSOLL'S MOVES.

The Deckload and Load-Line Questions.

The deckload and loadline questions which are to be subjects of investigation and discussion at the public meeting to be held at the Board of Trade rooms tomorrow afternoon are matters of much concern to all who are interested in shipping. The Board of Trade has extended an invitation to all who are interested in shipping to attend the meeting and to give expression of their views on the probable effect upon our shipping which the Primsoll load line law and the proposed deckload law would have if applied in Canada. Deputy Minister of Marine Smith will be present for the purpose of investigating these matters.

A GAZETTE reporter interviewed several prominent shipping men upon the loadline and deckload subjects today, and they are all of the opinion that if either of these measures are allowed to go into effect in Canada her shipping interests would be ruined.

Mr. Joseph H. Scammell of the firm of Scammell Bros., who was one of the gentlemen interviewed said that the proposal to abolish the carrying of deckloads on vessels seemed absurd. The percentage of deckloads lost and of damage resulting from their being carried was too small to make any argument in favor of their being abolished. "In fact" said Mr. Scammell for my own part, I would much rather go to sea in a vessel having a deckload level with the top of the rail than if she has no deckload at all for my contention is that the vessel would be more seaworthy with such a deckload than without it."

Mr. Scammell held that even the law which was passed in 1874 restricting the amount of deckload which vessels were allowed to carry to the West Indies between the 15th of November and the 1st of March of each year, had worked considerable injury to our trade with those islands, for no such restrictions existed in the United States and American vessels could load lumber in Maine and take as much deckload as it was thought it safe to carry on such voyages. His opinion was that if the carrying of deckloads was abolished altogether it would be disasterous to Canadian shipping interests.

Mr. George F. Baird, M. P., when asked to express his opinion in regard to the load line and deckload question, said that if either of these measures talked of were allowed to go into effect here and to apply to coasting vessels it would mean the annihilation of our coasting trade and also to a considerable extent of our trade in lumber with the United States and the West Indies. To deprive the coasting vessels of the privilege of carrying deckloads would he contended make it necessary that freights should go up about 40 per cent. to make the vessels pay expenses. He held that owing to the build and shape of our Canadian vessels, both coasters and deep water craft, they were more seaworthy with a deckload level with the tops of the rail than without one or with only a partial deckload that did not come as high as the rail. A deckload level with the top of the rail gave a sea no chance to break on deck and made a clean wash over. Temporary stanchions and rails are always set up in such cases for the protection of the men,

The restrictions as to the carrying of deckloads to the West Indies which had existed for a number of years had been very absurd as vessels were allowed to carry all the deckload they wanted to South America and more distant ports. Owing to representations made by Mr. Baird and others these restrictions with regard to vessels going to the West Indies had been removed by the government and now the only voyage on which a vessel was under any restriction as to the amount of deckload she should carry was in going across the ocean or to the Canary Islands between the 1st. of October and the 1st. of March. He believed that a most vigorous protest should be made against the Plimsoll measures being allowed to affect Canadian vessels and was of the opinion that the proper thing for Canada to do was to take control of her own shipping, so that she could make such regulations as would be most advantageous and suitable to the wooden shipping interests.

Mr. G. T. Fulford, of the well-known firm of Fulford & Co., of Brockville, whose Nasal Balm, is known and used from one end of the Dominion to the other, was in town today. Mr. Fulford says the success of Nasal Balm has been phenomenal. This, of course, is largely due to its rare merits, but after all printer's ink is also entitled to a share of the success, as without its aid the merit of this preparation could never have been made fully known. Mr. Fulford recognizes the merits of the GAZETTE as an advertising medium, and has again renewed the firm's contract.

Mr. W. Malcolm Mackay left by train last evening for New York, where he will take the steamer Germanic on Wednesday for Liverpool.

MURDER STRANGELY FIXED.

A Shred of the Murderer's Skin Found Between the Dead Girl's Teeth.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—A curious murder case and mystery, whose gruesome details would have done honor to the imagination of Edgar A. Poe, has just found its denouement in the place where the crime was committed namely, in Switzerland, near Berne.

Late in the autumn a fair was held in that city which attracted a large concourse of people from the neighboring villages. Among these was a young country girl, one Anna Hachinger, who came with a party of her friends and neighbors to partake of the festivities of the occasion. Late in the evening they all started for their homes in a little hamlet not far from Berne. It was not till they reached their destination that they discovered that Anna was missing. Had she lagged behind, or, as was more probable, had she failed to set off at the same time with her comrades with the intent to follow them and to catch up with them later?

This last solution appears the more likely as her corpse, frightfully mutilated and in an indescribable and shocking manner was found a day or two afterwards in a field not far from the main road. Search was at once made for the assassin, but without avail. He was not to be discovered, and after the first hue and cry was over, the affair seemed to have settled down into one of those mysterious crimes whose perpetrators are destined to remain forever unknown.

The police authorities held in their possession a solitary scrap of evidence against the murderer. The victim was a vigorous and healthy country girl. She had fought hard, though vainly to preserve her honor and her life. From between her clinched teeth the physician entrusted with the post-mortem examination had disengaged a fragment of human flesh, torn off in her struggles, from the face or the hands of her assailant. This ghastly morsel, preserved in alcohol, was put carefully away so as to be ready to be produced in case of need.

Time went on and the baffled detectives failed to find even the slightest trace of the mysterious criminal. But the other day a young medical student in the University of Berne was in the act of laying aside his street coat to put on his working jacket, when his shirt sleeve became disarranged, revealing on his wrist a strange-looking wound which apparently had been caused by a terrible bite. His comrades crowded around him, overwhelming him with questions concerning the origin of this singular injury. He stammered, became confused, gave incoherent and contradictory answers, and finally, breaking away from the crowd, he hurried back to his home, seized a loaded pistol and shot himself through the head.

The police authorities of Berne being informed of this catastrophe, caused the piece of flesh to be produced and applied to the wound on the young man's arm, it fitted exactly, and further investigations with the microscope proved the identity of the suicide's skin with that upon the fragment. Thus strangely, and through the working of the assassin's guilty conscience was poor Anne Hachinger avenged. As one of the lawyers interested in the case remarked, "She has convicted her murderer out of her own mouth."

This Evening.

Trinity preceptory, No. 507, R. B. K., will meet in the Orange hall, King street, at 8 o'clock.

The Costliest St. Bernard.

It was thought that when Mr. J. K. Emmet gave Mr. Sidney Smith of Leeds, England the sum of $5,000 for the St. Bernard Plinliommon that a record had been made for anything outside of a coursing greyhound that would stand for many years. Hardly had Plinlimmon left for America, however, ere a new star appeared in Sir Bedivere, also a St. Bernard, who has since carried all before him in the way of prizes. Offers were at once made his owner, Mr. T. H. Green, but not even a blank check to fill up to suit himself would tempt him. Mr. Henry Halsey, who made the bid, subsequently offered $7,500, but still no transfer was made.

Now, however, Mr. Green has agreed to sell Sir Bedivere, and to Mr. E. B. Sears of Boston, for the sum of $6,500. The reduced price is accepted for the reason that Mr. Halsey, who offered the $7,500, has left England for an African trip, and Mr. Green's brother, who has always had charge of the dog, also going abroad, leaves a white elephant on the hands of the Wallasey druggist. Mr. Sears, getting an inkling of this, made an offer of $6,000 for Sir Bedivere, which brought about the following laconic cablegram: "Six thousand five hundred buys the dog." "Done, my man starts tomorrow."

As for the latter despatch, Mr. Sears's representative is already half way across the Atlantic, and is expected to be back on Jan. 25. Sir Bedivere will be the great attraction at the New York dog show of Feb. 24 to 27.
