PARK PREACHING BYLAW.

KEPT IN THE LETTER, INFRINGED IN THE SPIRIT.

How Some Nondescript Street Preachers Tried to Get In Their Work—The Police Were on the Alert—Jumbo's Assistant Again Run Out of the Park—A Would-be Iconoclast.

There was no disturbance and very little disorder in Queen's Park yesterday afternoon. Not much interest appeared to be taken in the proceedings. At no time were there more than 2000 people present. The big thunderstorm in the forenoon no doubt was responsible for this. There was also a corresponding diminution in the number of police on duty. The services of the mounted men were dispensed with; the number of uniformed constables was considerably reduced. Nearly all of these were kept out of sight but were within easy call. The detectives were "all there," so were a large number of plain-clothes men.

Yesterday was an officers' day; the duties of the rank and file were a sinecure. Chief Grasett, on foot, took in the pacific aspect of affairs and early retired from the field. Deputy-Chief Stuart, Inspectors Archibald, Stephen, Johnston and Hall were the only five who publicly had to assert the supremacy of law and order. What led to their heroic efforts is shown in the sequel.

Appropriated the Agnes-Street Stand.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock the well-known, self-assertive and loquacious park habitues held their caucuses. They said nothing in particular and said it very poorly. There was the usual gush about the rights of free speech, "why don't the priests answer Jumbo?" "what's the good of Orangemen if they can't denounce Rome? and much more harmless, if irrational, buncombe. "The Rock" looked lonely, forsaken as it was by the cold water apostles. The Salvationists were non est; their ardor was being quenched by the pluvial downpour on Wells' Hill. The Agnes-street Methodists announced a band service, weather permitted. Only three of the bandsmen walked to the trysting-place and then somewhat crest-fallen they walked back again.

Thereupon a triumvirate of nondescript self-constituted preachers took possession of the Agnes-street stone rostrum. They are well-known in the city through their rantings and ravings at street corners, and for their coarse attacks on every "ism" save their own, which they dub "non-denominationalism." The World's ecclesiastical young man will not minister to their self-conceit and vanity by publishing their names. Personally they were—one tall in gray suit, two short in Sunday black, the three leather-lunged and illiterate.

Their Tricky Tactics.

The pious trio were acting in union and on a pre-arranged plan. This was to ostensibly keep within the pale of the law but, under disguise of repetition of hymns, addressing the people in so-called prayer, and running comments on Scripture readings, to manage to preach spite of the bylaw and the police. The tall man was a flagrant offender. He had sacrilegiously cut up a Bible and pasted the clippings in an old copybook, irrespective of their context, careless of anything save that when read they stood in lieu of a sermon. This went down as Bible reading with the uninformed, as were the majority of his audience. But the veil was too thin for even a smart schoolboy. A passage from the Psalms was sandwiched with one from the gospels, one from the Epistles with another from the Prophets, and wearisome and heterodox was the Biblical medley.

A colleague read Peter's sermon to the men of Jerusalem as contained in 42 verses of Acts v and was allowed to add his (the little man's) statement of what is "the gospel." Later he was not so fortunate. He essayed to read Isaiah liii, but he freely interlarded his own comments, and kept repeating his favorite verses several times. For this he was cautioned by Inspector Stephen, who in return received applause and hisses.

The Town Run By Popery and Wine.

The next diversion was a self-assertive, loud-voiced, stout man, a prominent member of the Richmond Hall Cottage Meeting, who addressing God under the guise of prayer attacked the Park bylaw and the City Hall regime. Shouted he, "They have tried to close our mouths by this bylaw. The town is run by Popery and wine. We can see the ruin of this city coming on——" This was enough—more than enough; and the tall form of Staff-Inspector Archibald bounded into the ring. Laying his hand on the pretended intercessor he bade him desist. Then there arose cheers and cries of "Go on!" "Shame" and hisses from a section of the crowd. "All right," said the interrupted one. "This bylaw is not going to last long. Our mouths will soon be unmuzzled." Then changing his tone he said: "God save the police! God bless the chief! If it were not for the police we could not live! God bless everybody and chain the devil!" [Applause and laughter.] Then he sang a solo about "The Pearly Gates."

The tall, grey-suited man then prayed for the police amidst amens and jeers; a colleague read Romans viii., and many of his interpolations passed unnoticed; another "brother" from Dixon's Cottage Meeting sang a teetotal song, "Brother, Come Home."

The Deputy Has to Remonstrate.

The most parsonic-looking of the triumvirate first named then began to make running comments on the Parable of the Prodigal Son. Boldly the deputy chief stepped up and in commanding tones said: "As long as you confine yourself to reading the Scriptures you will not be interfered with; but when you begin to comment as you are doing now you will be stopped. That is only right and fair in view of the bylaw prohibiting preaching. I say this in the presence of everybody." [Cheers and hisses.]

Spite of this remonstrance the unabashed one whose prayer had been interrupted made an announcement about the singing and told the crowd: "If you don't sing better I'll have to bring my piano next Sunday." And he added other remarks intended to be funny.

Old Man Ross of North Toronto, who has preached in the Park for many years, was stirred by the spirit of the scene. The fire burned and soon it found a tongue. He prayed till he wept; then he read Acts xiii., Paul's sermon at Antioch. During his reading his eyeglasses fell off, and falling back on memory he began citing other passages and commenting thereon.

The deputy once again interposed and bade the white-bearded sear read the Word and the Word only. This in his excitement the old gentleman was evidently unable to do. He made a brief Gospel appeal and concluded: "May God bless His own dear, soul-converting words for Christ's sake. Amen."

Jumbo's Factotum Again Run Out.

The sinister-looking individual who attempted to speak last Sunday and who avows himself as one of Jumbo's converts from Romanism was busy during the above proceedings in announcing to the crowd as he edged his way amongst them that Jumbo would lecture at the Auditorium and would be glad if they would all come and the police as well. After the close of the summonizing the factotum gathered a crowd round him, spoke for freedom, defended Campbell and producing some pieces of cloth, said: "I will burn a Popish idol." For this he was cheered, but before he could carry out his promise he was seized by Inspectors Johnston and Hall and marched out of the park. A lot of youngsters followed the unabashed one into Elizabeth-street.

With the above exceptions nothing occurred to prevent quietness and order for the visitors to the people's park.

Baby Was Sick.

My baby was very sick with diarrhœa and after everything else had failed I tried Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry; the first dose gave relief, and a perfect cure soon resulted."—Mrs. John Clark, Bloomfield, Ont.

Forward, Mr. Willis.

Editor World: Where is the inspector of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, that they don't look into the condition of King-street east, between the Cathedral and St. Lawrence Market? There is not a day passed by, that two or three street car horses do not fall down and the cars run over the poor brutes. Cannot something be done to prevent this state of affairs?

FRIEND OF DUMB ANIMALS.

NEW ATLANTIC ALLAN LINER.

Detailed Description of the New Ocean Greyhound, State of California.

The Allans have put a new steamer on the Atlantic route. She is called the State of California, and her description quite befits the golden state from which she takes her name. It is as follows:

The State of California is built of mild steel and is classed A 1 in Lloyd's under special survey, with additional strengthening over Lloyd's requirements and is built to comply with requirements of admiralty for transport service. She is 400 feet long over all, 46 feet beam and 32 feet 8 inches moulded depth, and will have a gross register tonnage of about 4500 tons, while the dead weight she is designed to carry on Lloyd's freeboard is 5300 tons. The vessel is divided into eight water tight compartments, the bulk heads of which are all carried to the upper deck, so as to ensure the greatest amount of safety in case of accident, and has also water ballast tanks in cellular double bottom fore and aft, which can be filled or emptied expeditiously. The State of California is the first high-class passenger steamer added to the Glasgow and New York trade for a number of years, and she is designed to attain the highest speed possible, with capacity for sufficient cargo to ensure good earnings from freight even with few or no passengers and thus be able to convey passengers at very moderate rates. She has sufficient engine power to ensure the greatest regularity by the maintenance of a good rate of speed in any weather. The vessel in her general arrangement resembles to some extent the type of vessel generally adopted for Atlantic passenger ships of late years, with the addition of a number of novel arrangements to specially suit the Glasgow trade. The saloon accommodation is situated all at the middle of the vessel, where there is least motion, and is capable of accommodating 260 passengers. From main deck the saloon accommodation is entered by doors on each side of the deck-house, arranged with vestibules and inner-vestibule doors, which admit into a spacious well-lighted entrance hall, from which on the after side the grand staircase leads down to the main saloon and staterooms, and on the forward side a double staircase leads up to promenade deck, smoking room, etc., while folding doors on each side lead into music and writing room, which is situated immediately over main saloon. The saloon skylight is placed over music room on promenade deck, and lights both main saloon and music room. Saloon passengers by this arrangement have the best part of the vessel reserved entirely for themselves, and have access to all saloon accommodation without going on deck. The decoration of saloon and other public apartments is in polished hardwoods, and the different combinations are exceedingly chaste and effective. The music room is panelled in satin wood, birch and sycamore, and upholstered in Gobelin tapestry. The main saloon is in figured walnut and birch, with upholstery in Moquette. The ladies cabin is in Tynecastle tapestry panelling, and silk tapestry upholstery, and the smoking room staircases and entrance hall are in different combinations of mahogany, oak and walnut. The main saloon has tables running fore and aft, and small tables on each side placed athwartships, to suit parties travelling in company, families, etc. Revolving eccentric chairs are placed at all tables. The staterooms are all in white enamel, and upholstered in red velvet, the berths and sofas being fitted with spring mattresses, and the washbasins are on the tipping principle in mahogany cases. Steerages are fitted for about 700 to 800 passengers forward and also aft of saloons on both the main and lower decks, and have very large entrances from deck to each, in which are placed the lavatories and other accommodation, so as to be easily reached without going on deck.

The entire cabin and steerage accommodation is heated by steam and also thoroughly ventilated, and the vessel throughout is fitted up with a double installment of electric light. The machinery consists of a set of triple-expansion engines of the latest design, having cylinders 24 inches, 55 inches and 88 inches, with a stroke of 54 inches, supplied with steam by three steel boilers at 160 pounds pressure.

The State of California has a very handsome appearance, and there is little doubt that when she is put on her station this vessel will fulfil the best expectations of all concerned and be a great favorite with the traveling public.

The State of California sails from Glasgow on Aug. 14, and from New York on Sept. 3, 1891.

Not a Miracle, Now.

Until recently Consumption was considered incurable, but now people are beginning to realize that the disease is not incurable. The cure of Consumption is not a miracle, now. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure it, if taken in time and given a fair trial. This world-renowned remedy will not make new lungs, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy state when other means have failed. Thousands gratefully testify to this. It is the most potent tonic, or strength-restorer, alterative, or blood-cleanser, and nutritive, or flesh-builder, known to medical science. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, "Liver Complaint," and Dyspepsia, or indigestion, it is an unequaled remedy.

Mr. John Blackwell of the Bank of Commerce, Toronto, writes: "Having suffered for over four years from dyspepsia and weak stomach, and having tried numerous remedies with but little effect, I was at last advised to give Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery a trial. I did so, with a happy result, receiving great benefit from one bottle. I then tried a second and a third bottle, and now I find my appetite so much restored and stomach strengthened that I can partake of a hearty meal without any of the unpleasantness I formerly experienced."

Nicolet Notes.

"I suffered continual pain from canker of the stomach and my face and body were almost covered with pimples. I tried Burdock Blood Bitters, the first dose occasioned slight pain, but I soon found relief, and after taking five bottles I became completely cured. I think B.B.B. the most powerful remedy known to science."—Stephen Edge, Nicolet, P.Q.

Can Not Compete.

Miss Maud Grant of Mountain, Ont., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for summer complaints and diarrhœa. There is nothing to compete with it, as it succeeds even in the severest cases."

There Are Five Prime Conditions of Happiness.

The fifth is bodily health. This is promoted by the proper use of health-giving fluids. For breakfast drink the Royal Dandelion Coffee, which contains a proportion of German dandelion root and fine coffee as a basis. It combines the medicinal virtues of this well-known plant with the refreshing and dietetic properties of coffee. Prepared by Ellis & Keighley, Toronto. 1

LAW SCHOOL'S NEW HOME.

The Schrive of Legal Lore at Osgoode Hall.

Attached to the eastern wing of Osgoode Hall where formerly stood buildings for the accommodation of fuel and heating apparatus, there now rises a handsome white brick structure with artistic stone trimmings, three stories high, the new home of the Law school.

In the basement will be situated the heating appliances, occupying a room constructed and fitted up for that purpose. Contiguous to the furnace-room is a large lavatory, to the south of which are situated commodious hat and cloak room.

On the first floor, on either side of a well-lighted hall, are two lecture-rooms, both 40 x 32, capable of accommodating 132 students each. Opening off these are two smaller compartments for the accommodation of the various lecturers.

The second flat is taken up by two students' reading-rooms, the one 40 x 32-6 and the other 32 x 22. A room which will be used for the storage of books, dignified by the appellation "library," also graces this portion of the building.

The third flat will be fitted up for the present until additional lecture room accommodation is required as a hall and concert hall. The dimensions of the main portion will be 41x58. At the end of the auditorium will be a circular raised platform, and immediately in rear of this will be three dressing rooms.

The Law Society was established on its present basis in 1889, since which time two sessions have been held, those of 1889-90 and 1890-91. Last year there were 161 students on the roll, and it is expected that large additions will be made next session. The term commences on the fourth Monday in September and concludes at the same period in the month of May. Two weeks vacation is allowed at Christmas.

Previous to 1889 on the old basis, 20 lectures were delivered each year by four examiners and the practice of attending them was optional with the student; now a person cannot be called to the bar without presenting himself at five-sixths of those delivered, and passing the examination prescribed by the directorate.

The faculty of the school consist of five lecturers and three examiners. The latter are, Frank Joseph, LL.B., A. W. Aylsworth-Finlay, B.A., and M. G. Cameron. The principal is W. A. Reeve, M.A., Q.C., who is also lecturer in Criminal Law, Contracts and Private International Law. Lecturers: E. D. Armour, Q.C., Real Property and Constitutional Law; A. H. Marsh, B.C., LL.B., Q.C., Equity and Practice; R. E. Kingsford, M.A., LL.B., Commercial Law, Evidence and Practice; P. H. Drayton, Common Law, Canadian Constitutional History and Personal Property.

With such an able and efficient staff of instructors and attended by such a large number of students, the success of the past two years will be turned into unqualified success in the future.

Tapers in St. Thomas' Church, Huron-street, Toronto.

We published the other day notices taken from the Church press of the practice of the Rev Prof. Roper as to candles in the Anglican St. Thomas Church in this city. We now publish the origin of the usage. It is from the Pagans.

Sabinian (A.D. 604), successor to Gregory (Bishop of Rome) is said by Platina to have ordered that lamps should be kept perpetually burning in church edifices. This is still enjoined by the Roman ritual. The Egyptians, according to Herodotus, were the inventors of the custom. The pagan Romans afterward adopted it, the office of the Vestal Virgins being to keep these lamps perpetually trimmed and burning. Apuleius describes the pagan Roman processions as being attended by priests in surplices, the people in white linen vestments singing hymns and carrying wax candles in their hands.* This ceremony is practised to this day in Romish countries where Romanism predominates over all other religions. Lactantius often refers to the custom as a ridiculous superstition, deriding the Romans "for lighting up candles for God, as if He lived in the dark."†

There is supposed to be a hidden mystery in the use of these lighted tapers. Among the modern Romans, as well as among the modern heathen, to whose religions the practice is common, it has reference to some evil spirits which are supposed to be present. Among the Tungusians, near the Lake Baikal in Siberia, wax tapers are placed before the gods or idols of that country (See Asiatic Journal, vol. xvii., pp. 595-599). In the Mulucca Islands wax tapers are used in the worship of Nito, or devil, whom these islanders adore.‡ "In Ceylon," says the same author, "some devotees, who are not priests, erect chapels for themselves, but in each of them they are obliged to have an image of Budhin, and light up tapers or wax candles before it, and adorn it with flowers." Behold how closely High Churchism, Romanism, and paganism resemble each other!

From Nickeldon.

LARCHWOOD, Aug. 8.—Work has been vigorously pushed forward in the large quartz vein recently discovered in the township of Fairbank so far with excellent results. It has been known for some months that the geological formation in Fairbank, Trill and Creighton were favorable to the existence of gold bearing quartz, but until quite recently the enormous extent and richness of the ore bodies have not been known. Two of the experts who have examined the district have pointed out the remarkable resemblance of the vein to that operated by the Consolidated Virginia and California Company of the United States. That successful company on an investment of $108,000 has already paid dividends amounting to $3,466,000, according to official statistics. In the townships of Trill, Fairbank and Creighton are several very promising locations. As both the hanging and foot walls are well defined the veins are pronounced to be true fissure veins. The country rock is a schist conglomerate, but at a depth of about 75 feet changes into a dark talcose formation, in which the richest gold deposits of Nevada, California and Australia are found. A large quantity of ore has already been extracted. Assays made by Prof. Thomas Heys of Toronto show that the ore very much exceeds in richness the best paying gold mines of Colorado, Alaska or Michigan.

Although the nickle deposits are of great importance, both to this district and to the province, the interest in them is already much exceeded by the increasing interest in the gold properties of Creighton and Fairbank. The Canada Copper Company, composed exclusively of Yankee capitalists, have already mined a considerable portion of the township of Creighton, and unless Canadians are much wider awake than hitherto the rich treasures of this district and the enormous profits to be derived from their development will pass into the hands of enterprising Americans. What Algoma requires is a vigorous and well considered mining policy calculated to promote the speedy development of the enormous mineral resources of the district.

Great advantages to the province will accrue from the working of these properties by Americans, but Canadians should endeavor to secure and retain control of a large proportion of these properties, which will afford unlimited opportunities for lucrative enterprises.

Advanced taste and criticisms have been shedding much light on the styles in dressmaking and their scope and weight of influence. Follow the conclusions—unanimous conclusions—arrived at and you'll have to patronize this store. If our Costume Department doesn't please you none other can. Style, fit, finish and price considered, of course.

"Then," as the orator would say, "here's the point." Where dressmaking is right the material for the dress must be right. Just a mention of Silks to-day.

The first consignment of New Silks has just got here—undoubtedly the handsomest to be had. There are evening Silks, Failles, Pen de Joi, and hosts of other weaves. Some of these goods are very scarce.

SILK CREPON in mauve, pink, pale blue, green, heliotrope and other shades—a new soft make specially desirable for its draping qualities, 65c a yard.

Pon-Ginois or Bengaline in all the latest colorings—nothing more effective for evening costumes—45c and 50c a yard.
