Say No Demand For Union from Rank and File of Methodism

London, April 21.—(Canadian Press)—Opponents of the present scheme to bring about Methodist reunion feel so strongly upon the subject that they are emboldened to start a new weekly journal specially to advocate their views.

It is understood some of the finest thinkers and writers in Methodism will support the new venture for the anti-union minority is admittedly very influential.

The general objection to the scheme is that unity ought to come before union and that so far there has been no real demand for union from the rank and file of Methodism. It is maintained that in the circuits the voting on the issue is adverse.

Rome Celebrates 2,676th Birthday

Mussolini Acclaimed — Fascisti Oath Administered to National Militia.

Rome, April 21.—The celebration of Rome's 2,676th birthday yesterday was perhaps the most solemn in the long history of the Eternal City. Premier Mussolini promulgated a decree establishing April 21 as Labor Day instead of May 1, and thus the traditional date of the city's foundation becomes a national holiday.

A leading feature of the ceremony was the administration of the Fascisti oath to the notional militia, as the troops in 100 Italian cities were reviewed by the black shirt leaders and by the chief of the army and navy. In this city the Premier and Gen. De Bono reviewed the Phalanxes.

Enthusiasm was without bounds. Hundreds of thousands of people crowded the streets or found positions in windows and on balconies. Some took up their stations on the housetops while others climbed trees to see the procession.

The appearance of the Premier was the signal for a tumultuous outburst. As the detachments of militia passed before him, with standards flying and bugles sounding, the men took a solemn oath of absolute loyalty to the nation and to the iron discipline of Fascismo. Later there was a patriotic ceremony at the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Snakes Do Bidding Of Egyptian Guide Amid Luxor Ruins

Reptiles Struggle, But Incantations Prove Too Powerful for Scorpions and Corbras in Wilderness.

London, April 1.—(By Mail)—"The charmer's name is Moussa" writes a correspondent from Luxor to "The London Times." He drove with us from Luxor, sitting on the box seat of one of the carriages with a basket in his hand, which, he sufficiently satisfied, was empty; a little man and swarthy, with a bristling, untrimmed mustach, lean-faced and quick of movement, as, perhaps, you have to be in dealing with cobras and scorpions and such. Dressed in black, with a white turban on his head, he led the way—we five English following—amid the rubbish heaps and piles of broken masonry and old mud bricks which litter the dusty plain about the Temple of Karnak. As he walked he harrangued the world at large, chanting in high-pitched montone texts, we were told, from the Koran, and powerful incantations taught him by his grandfather. A great man must his grandfather have been. He learned all his lore from Hakim Syed Suleiman himself, a sheik so potent that every snake and scorpion in Egypt knows and trembles at his name today.

"Calling our attention to a particular hole among heaped bits of masonry the little man attacked the orifice from afar with the point of his stick, thrusting at it angrily, chipping the sides, stirring the dust before it. Then advancing gingerly and with his flowing sleeves pushed back to leave his lean arms bare, reaching out he picked out of that dust by the extreme tip of its tail a wiggling scorpion.

"It was not a large one, but large enough—some four or five inches long over all, a greenish-yellow, semi-translucent, horrid thing. Fora while Moussa played with it for our benefit, letting it do its best to sting the calloused tip of his thumb and making it sit motionless at the word of command in Suleiman's dreaded name. Then he placed it on a stone. More scorpions followed, with the same pantomime in every case. Along the old mud-brick wall of the Romans, full on the face of which the sun was beating, the snakes came. First a thin, grey snake, perhaps three and a half feet long, hauled struggling out of a hole in the old wall and flung upon the sand at our feet. We were assured that it was abominably poisonous, but from the shape of its head it looked as harmless as a grass snake at home.

"Again he smelled something; smelled it from afar—something big—perhaps a oobra! And presently before a group of three holes close together in the wall he stopped in a very fury of exhortation. Every charm that his grandfather ever knew must surely have been invoked as the little man threatened and commanded and thrashed at the wall with his stick.

"After thrusting his stick into one hole after another, he conveyed to us that the three were connected inside the wall, and the snake, he gave us to understand, was dodging him from one to another. At last he seemed to have cornered his prey and, reaching in his bare arm almost to the shoulder deep into one of the black openings, he drew out, the reptile doing its best to resist, a struggling cobra getting on for five feet long. It was certainly a formidable looking thing as it slid this way and that over the sand or stopped to rear its head and expand its hood like a uraeus of one of the old Egyptian kings come to life.

"To the creature, thus unprepared, its black tongue flickering in and out of its narrow slit of a mouth, Moussa, stooping down before it, slowly reached out his hand. Very gradually, almost imperceptibly, he brought it nearer and near to that wicked-looking head until it was but six inches away, plainly within striking distance. Then gently, as if in exhausted surrender, the serpent reached forward and softly laid its head in the upturned palm. It was an extraordinary dramatic climax to the play."

Ottawa, April 21.—In the House of Commons yesterday, first and second readings were given to a bill to reduce the compensation paid by the Government for animals slaughtered under the Animals Contagious Diseases Act.

A bill to enable the Canadian National Railways to insure their own property received first reading.

The House of Commons concurred in a senate amendment to the Northwest Territories Act, providing that persons not British subjects should be ineligible as jurors.

A bill was passed changing the name of the Penny Bank of Toronto to the Penny Bank of Ontario.

Continuation of pensions to returned officers of the late war now in the public service was provided for in a bill which received second reading.

Divorce Publicity.

The evening was devoted to consideration of an act to amend and consolidate existing act relating to patents of invention.

Cold Storage Matter.

When a bill to amend the cold storage act was before the House, L. H. Martell, (Liberal, Hants) moved an amendment which would include incorporated companies among these organizations which receive the benefit of grants. To this Hon. W. R. Motherwell objected.

An amount had been placed in the estimate for the purpose of providing the grants, he said, but the object was to develop co-operative marketing and not for the encouragement of private concerns who were engaged in the business for a profit. The amount provided was entirely too small to distribute among incorporated cold storage companies.

Mr. Martell replied that if Nova Scotia had to rely on co-operative cold storage organization she would have no cold storage plants.

Mr. Martell's amendment was declared lost, and the bill reported from committee. On the request of Mr. Martell third reading was held over until a later date.

Monday in Parliament.

In the House of Commons on Monday, Government bills remaining on the order paper will come up for second reading, and when disposed of the House will go into supply on estimates of the Department of Indian Affairs.

The Senate stands adjourned until Wednesday evening.

PRESENTATIONS AT LUDLOW STREET

Last evening was Sunday school night in connection with the revival services in Ludlow street Baptist church, West End. A large number attended. A rousing song service was conducted by Emery Cosman. J. Stewart Smith sang two solos nicely. Rev. W. Alvin Robbins conducted the service and delivered a practical address on courage in the Christian life. Several more promised to start the Christian life. The superintendent of the Sunday school, R. H. Parsons, was called upon by the pastor to make presentations of Bibles to some who had won them. In a short address he first presented Bibles, suitably inscribed, to the girls of Mrs. Mitchell's class for largest average attendance during the three weeks' services. The girls receiving them were Elsie Wills, Laura Rupert, Rhona Belyea, Nellie Perkins, Mary Copeland and Mae Mitchell. For the best essay written on the history of the banner, "Keep Right With God," by a junior scholar, Ruth Lester was given a scholar's Bible. Ethel Rupert was the winner for the older scholars. An essay written by Muriel Murray, while exceeding the number of words, received special mention for excellence, and she was given a Testament. Miss H. M. Thompson judged the essays, and the Bibles were inscribed by R. J. Rupert. The services are reported a wonderful success. They will be continued on Monday and Wednesday evenings only of next week. More than sixty have taken a forward step in the Christian life.

MURDOCH-GOODGE.

(Hartland Observer.)

A wedding of much local interest took place on April 18, at 1 p. m., in the Methodist church, when Miss Reta Murdoch, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Murdoch, was married to L. C. Goodge of St. John. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thos. Pierce, pastor of the church.

The bridal party entered the church and took their places at the altar to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by the organist, Miss Marion Stevens, who during the solemn and impressive ceremony also played softly a voluntary.

The bride wore a suit of navy blue poiret twill with touches of oriental embroidery, and a navy blue silk hat and black vampire fox furs. She carried an immense bouquet of pink premier roses and looked very charming.

After the ceremony the wedding party left the church while Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played, and repaired to the home of the bride's parents, when a buffet luncheon was served. The Misses Martha and Velma McCollom and Miss Beth Somerville (St. John) assisted in the serving. The living room looked very pretty with many pink and white carnations and other flowers. In the centre of the room was the table, over which was suspended a silver basket containing pink and white flowers. Only the near relatives and a few most intimate friends were the guests.

The church, which was filled with relatives and friends, presented a very pleasing scene with its beautiful floral decorations, which were arranged by C. S. Baker. The ushers were Clinton Clark and Howard Taylor.

The bride received many beautiful presents, including silver, cut glass, linens, etc. Mr. Goodge's office staff presented them with a large, handsome mahogany clock. The grooms' present to the bride was a platinum pin set with diamonds, and to the organist was given a platinum pin set with a single pearl.

The groom is with the Dominion Express Company in St. John and the bride has been for the past four years a valued stenographer in the same office.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodge left on the 3.30 express for a visit to Montreal and other points. A large crowd was at the station to see them off and to tender good wishes and to shower them with confetti.

AN ELEGY IN STONE.

(Boston Herald.)

The Canadian authorities intrusted with the erection at Ottawa of a chapel in memory of the soldiers who died in the world war are planning to give visible expression to a gracious poetic thought. If they succeed in carrying out the intentions apparently indicated by the preparations now being made, they may produce a beautiful elegy in stone. Though the building will stand on Canadian soil and at the seat of the Dominion Government, it will represent in the most direct manner possible the countries in whose defence the soldiers made the supreme sacrifice, and also the mother country under whose flag, with the added maple leaf, they fought and fell.

The principal materials to be worked into place by the builders are being brought across the Atlantic from those countries. From Poitiers, Vienne's chief town, famous in battle and famous also for its cathedral, founded by Queen Eleanor of England nearly 800 years ago, a train load of specially selected stone has been dispatched to Havre, for shipment to Canada by a steamer which is ready to receive it. This stone has been dug from the quarry of Migueles-Lourdines, in the department of the Charente, and the walls of the chapel at Ottawa are to be built entirely of the chiseled blocks from France. Belgium will send the native marble of which the sanctuary is to be constructed, and the pavement of the chapel will be formed of English marble.

In the bringing of these materials together for memorial purposes the architects should surely find lofty inspiration. "In the elder days of art, builders wrought with greatest care," and left behind them things of beauty whose manifestation of the poetic spirit is a joy forever. Now here in our own day is an opportunity for the composition of at least a lyric gem in stone, if not a noble architectural ode.

The Good Influence of Real Comfort

Sometimes a mere man will argue that so long as he is comfortable, it doesn't matter what style of furniture it is. BUT IT DOES MATTER. Restfulness is not only a matter of resting tired bodies, aching muscles and weary bones. Comfort means more than that. It means relaxation for tired brains and nerves; it includes rest for the mind.

The well furnished, beautiful home is the restful home. tl is the home that brings a man back at nightfall, eager and happy in anticipation. It is the home where friends like to come and in which you always feel ready to receive them. It is the home to which your boys and girls will cling rather than one from which they are always eager to get away.
