THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N.S., JUNE 21, 1918.

Editorial Brevities.

Hon. F. B. Carvell's announcement that Canada must raise a war loan of five hundred million dollars this year to meet war obligations, is a warning to every individual to save and prepare to subscribe to the limit.

Canada's net debt on the first of June was $1,144,235,627, an increase in the year of $315,441,868. Every Canadian who keeps these figures in mind will understand why it is necessary to save money for the big war loan of this fall.

....

One of many articles turned in for conversion into money for war purposes in the United States was a 'magnificent $5,000 prize cup,' presented by the Kaiser for American competition. The assayer reported it a typical German gift—gilded pewter worth about forty dollars.

....

The work of placing the fountain at the corner of Main Street and Willow avenue has been completed in a very creditable manner. The conditions on and around the town property in that vicinity, however, might be greatly improved by the putting forth of a special effort.

....

Whatever differences of opinion exist to-day as to the relative merits of the Borden and Laurier naval policies, there must be unanimous agreement that the true naval policy for Canada is the construction of merchant shipping. A true patriot is every man who helps increase the country's carrying tonnage.

....

Canada's new system of license control of dealers in food stuffs involves over 80,000 retail establishments and about 23,500 wholesalers. Of the total number of retailers there are 30,000 groceries; 16,000 butchers, 50,000 public eating places; 5,000 bakers; 2,000 fish dealers; 4,500 fruit and vegetable dealers and 4,000 produce dealers.

Many young women throughout the Province are applying to the Secretary of Industries and Immigration for employment on farms. These young woman describe themselves as strong and healthy and eager to help. Any farmer who could utilize the services of one or two of these girls should apply immediately either to the Local Labour Exchange or direct to the office of Industries and Immigration, 197 Hollis Street, Halifax.

Fishing and Canoeing in Algonquin Park, The Record of a Cruise on the Kawartha Lakes, Bear Hunting on Peace River, On the Trail of Ogurse, A Day on the Bras D'Or Lakes, are some of the contents of the June issue of Rod and Gun now on the news stands. The Guns and Ammunition department this month is of special interest containing as it does a carefully written and practical artical by one who has been 'over there' on Sharpshooting in the Trenches. Every prospective soldier should read this article for it tells the soldier how to shoot to kill, and this is what it is needed if we are to win the war. There are other articles in this section worthy of note and the Fishing Notes section is up to its usual standard. Rod and Gun, the magazine of outdoor life in Canada, is published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, at Woodstock, Ont.

Dr. Trotter.

Many friends throughout Canada will have read with deep regret of the death at his home in Toronto of Dr. Thomas Trotter. For the past two or three years Dr. Trotter has been an invalid, and the death of his son, Lieutenant Bernard Trotter, who was killed in France, was a great sorrow. Dr. Trotter, who was an Englishman by birth, was one of the most scholarly men attached to the Baptist denomination in Canada. He occupied the presidential chair of Acadia College, Wolfville, and later was at McMaster University, Toronto, until failing health forced his retirement. A man of fine character, of great learning and of a cheerfulness that was in itself an inspiration, Dr Trotter made a deep impression on all who came in contact with him. His lectures and sermons were standards in the beauty of their English and in the broad expression of thought.

CANADA needs her men in field and factory.

No one can afford to be too sick to work. Kidney trouble often keeps men ailing around the house, but

A Word to Farmers.

The farmers of Canada will very shortly have to undertake the harvest work with the help of green labor. In this connection they should remember that we are at war. They should adjust the work throughout the farm to suit the new conditions, and they should begin right in their own minds.

The first adjustment necessary is to change the point of view from one of criticism, discouragement, and fault finding with labor conditions, to that of the soldier and war worker, and realize that we are going through a crisis, the most serious the world has ever witnessed, without any exaggeration whatsoever.

There used to be talk among farmers derogatory to the city man and other inexperienced laborers who sometimes sought employment temporarily on the farm. Such talk is out of place now, with the Germans sixty mile from Paris and every available man in Britain and France fighting not only to save his own country but this country as well. Such Canadian farmers forget that they themselves have been farmers all their lives and in war time they can't expect to secure men volunteering from the cities with an experience in farm work equal to their own. That is an impossibility. But it is not impossible that farm production of this country be increased, despite the shortage of experienced labor. That this is true is proven by the experience of this country in the manufacture of munitions.

When the war started Canada was absolutely inexperienced, unskilled in, and without the machinery for the manufacture of munitions. But the manufacturers got to work. They studied the problem and they solved it.

Today Canada is turning out millions of dollars worth of shells every month from the largest to the smallest, and the most minute mechanical contrivances in connection with fuses and time charges. Canada's record in the manufacture of munitions is one of the surprises of the war. It was not made by Canada saying 'Canada Can't' but by adopting the motto 'Canada Can.' Canada did not refuse to try because of the scarcity of labor but set to work to organize and employed men and girls who had never been inside a factory before. They accomplished the impossible. These inexperienced helpers were speedily taught their parts and the result is shown in the products of munitions from Canadian factories now known all over the world not excepting Germany.

The result of organization and the willing war-time spirit in Great Britain last year, largely with inexperienced labor on the land, increased her cereal production by 850,000 tons, its potato production by 5,000,000 tons. The cultivated area was increased altogether by 1,000,000 acres. When in 1917, 820,645 men were taken from industrial organizations and placed in the Army the War Office replaced them with 804,000 women, and yet the production of guns was increased 30 per cent, air craft 25 per cent, while the shipping tonnage amounted to 1,165,000 tons additional.

The best recent illustration of what can be done in an emergency when only inexperienced men are available is that of the battle of Picardy, when the fifth army under General Gough was overwhelmed and out numbered. It looked inevitable that the Huns would break through and capture the city of Amiens, which would have meant the interruption of railway communication between Channel ports and Paris, cutting off the British from one of their chief bases of supplies. General Carey, however, saved the situation. He called upon all classes of men behind the lines, whether they were soldiers, cooks, camp followers, railway construction men, Chinese laborers, medical service men, transport men, or whatever they were, and organized them to fill the breach. With these men he succeeded in doing what the 5th Army failed to do—he held the line! With no training in trench warfare, and no fighting organization before that time, General Carey gathered them together, and this nondescript gathering of troops kept the Huns back for six days and nights until reenforcements arrived. General Carey did not say 'I can't use this untrained class of men,' but he set to work without a moment's hesitation to make the best of them, and he succeeded in saving the British army and its allies from a desperate crisis.

Similarily, if the Canadian farmer makes up his mind that these are war times and war measures are necessary there is absolutely no doubt he can utilize to a tremendous advantage the men power and the woman power of the towns, where people are only too willing to go to his assistance if they are organized to do so. He must not expect them to be experienced and to know as much about the details of farm work as he does. It has taken him a life-time to acquire his information. Townspeople have spent their lives at different work, but with his knowledge of farming and his intimate acquaintance with his farm and all its needs he should have the ability to organize inexperienced help and show each helper his or her particular job and how best to accomplish it. A few hours patient teaching in any one particular line of work will very soon enable a greenhorn to 'Carry on,' as they say in the Army. By patience and consideration the farmers of Canada can, without question, effect an organization from green but willing help from town that will not only surprise themselves but will also be of tremendous benefit to the Empire by the increased results of their harvest.

A Privilege and a Duty.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO ENJOY THE ONE AND PERFORM THE OTHER ON REGISTRATION DAY, JUNE 22ND

Saturday, 22nd June, is the date that has been fixed by the Government for the registration of all persons, male and female, of sixteen years and over, resident in Canada. It is a day upon which every Canadian will be afforded an opportunity of re dedicating himself to the greatest cause which ever engaged the attention of mankind. It is a day upon which a free people, strengthend by sacrifice, will reiterate their unalterable determination to endure to the end.

And so Saturday, 22nd June, is to be a day of privilege as well as a day of duty, a day that will go down in history as one of the milestones in Canada's participation in the war.

The Canadian people are a unit in their determination to exert their full strength in the colossal struggle now being waged for the integrity of free institutions. But they will not be in a position to exert their full strength until they know its precise measure in terms of man power. Registration Day will supply this information and so enable the country to work up to its maximum effort.

Paper Candles for Soldiers.

A torch for use by soldiers in the trenches and in their dugouts, a torch so simple that any child can make it, is the invention of Mrs. Edward Gushee, wife of a New York physician. Mrs. Gushee, and a staff of girls and boys are now making these torches by the hundreds, and intend to send them in large quantities to the front, according to the Seattle Post Intelligencer.

To make one of these torches take a newspaper and with a ruler tear it into strips two columns wide. Place six of these strips, one on top of the other or tear six newspapers at once if you find this easier—roll them up leaving a small hole through the centre; tie the roll with cotton string; boil it in paraffin for twenty minutes, and let it cool.

This makes a candle which can be lighted with a match and will burn without smoke for three-quarters of an hour. It gives better light than an ordinary candle, quite enough light for a soldier to read, write or sew by.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Words of Praise for Baby's Own Tablets.

No medicine receives such great praise from thankful mothers as do Baby's Own Tablets. Once a mother has used them for her little ones she will use nothing else. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They regulate the bowels and stomach; drive out constipation and indigestion; cure colds and simple fevers; promote healthful sleep and make teething easy. Concerning them Mrs. Omer LeBlanc, Maddington Falls, Que., writes:—'I am well satisfied with Baby's Own Tablets and will always use them for my little ones.' The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Goodwill is a National Asset.

It is the consensus of the best opinion of this country and across the water that the one big thing that is going to win this war is not merely our strength in the field, but the unity of the people co-operating at home.

The spreading of goodwill in these times of international war is a necessity, socially and in business.

Every bit of good cheer that we can pass on to the other fellow is worth while.

A little extra cheerfulness in our HELLO to a friend on the street—a little more sincerity in our 'Good Morning' to the office boy—an increased cordiality in our letters to our customers. All these will help to alleviate the present depression caused by the blight of international war.

Spread the doctrine of goodwill more this year than ever before. Spread it in every way possible, and so, in some slight measure help to knit closer the unity of feeling and purpose, socially and in business, which must perforce make for greater co-operation, better understanding—and a sure winning of the war.
