THE DEAD PRESIDENT

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF HIS LAST HOUR ON EARTH.

A Feeling of General and Widespread Sympathy—Preparations for the Funeral—Movements of President Arthur—Canadian Flags at the Half-Mast—The Post Mortem Examination.

All conversation on the streets yesterday all turned on the death of President Garfield, so the news despatches this morning deal with the same absorbing subject almost to the exclusion of everything else. It would seem as if the whole world stood still for a day, all thought and all interest being centred on the sad tragedy which opened at Washington and closed at Long Branch. In the United States there is grief for the death of the president and deep sympathy for his bereaved family. In Canada, in England and on the continent of Europe the sympathy is more for the nation than for the family, but everywhere there is a strong feeling that in the death of General Garfield one of the great ones of the earth has passed away. General Arthur has succeeded to the presidency so quietly that the event commands little notice, but there is everywhere a disposition manifested to treat him with the respect due to the first magistrate of a great nation. The remains of the late president will be conveyed to Washington to-day and to Cleveland on Friday. On Monday there will be a public funeral, under direction of the state authorities of Ohio.

HOW HE PASSED AWAY.

A Great Pain in the Heart—Fighting the Grim Enemy to the Last—Wife and Daughter.

The end came very suddenly. The fatal clot in the heart, which is the dread of surgeons in all similar cases, sealed the patient's fate. There was a brief but great pain, and then all was over.

When Bliss was summoned to the sick room Monday night he saw the immediate necessity of raising the president's temperature. "Bring ammonia and mustard instantly," he said. Search was made for the two things that might perhaps have prolonged life a little while, but there was no mustard and no ammonia there. A messenger ran across the darkened lawn to the Elberon hotel, a hundred and fifty yards away. He stumbled up the porch of the hotel almost exhausted and in breathless haste, and waited for the medicaments to be got. Warren Young meantime galloped at headlong speed to the camp, almost half a mile away, for mustard and ammonia, while those in the room stood breathless. There was not a word to say, there was only one thing to do; it could not be done. Alone among many who loved him, helpless in presence of his archenemy, even amid all his friends and surrounded by all the appliances that modern science could conjure up, except the two simplest that were needed, the great soul of the chief went forth into darkness. "Oh, how it hurts here," the president said once more. Then with uneasy motion he seemed to try to turn over, and drawing one long breath that was almost a gasp his tortured lungs refused their service, the heart was stilled, and the life was gone. The only treatment given was hypodermic injection of brandy by Agnew, assisted by Boynton. There was absolutely no scene. Everyone present knew death had come quickly, and without pain. When it became evident he was dead, Mrs. Rockwell placed her arm around Mrs. Garfield and led her quietly from the room. She uttered no word. One by one the spectators left the scene, the doctors only remaining in the room.

THE IMMEDIATE CAUSE OF DEATH.

Dr. Bliss attributes death to neuralgia of the heart, which caused the formation of a blood clot there by preventing proper circulation of the blood. The president's remarks to Swain, who was with him when he awoke from his sleep, were: "Oh, Swain, what a pain," placing his hand on his heart. "Can't you do something for me, oh Swain?" At this time Mrs. Garfield had been out of the room about fifteen minutes and had retired for the night. Previous to going to his own room Bliss conferred with Mrs. Garfield on the general condition of the president, and she expressed the opinion that her husband was not weary, and had awakened feeling comfortable, and experienced little or no pain. It was about ten minutes past ten o'clock, said Bliss, that the president awakened and complained of a severe pain on his heart. The doctor referred to the fact that the former attending surgeons on the case had been called to attend the autopsy, and Dr. Curtis of Washington had been selected to do the cutting.

AROUND THE DEATH-BED.

Among those present when the president breathed his last were Drs. Bliss and Agnew, Mrs. Garfield and her daughter Mollie, Colonel Rockwell, C. O. Rockwell, General Swain, Boynton, Mrs. and Miss Rockwell and Brown. Mrs. Garfield sat in a chair shaking convulsively, and with tears pouring down her cheeks, but uttering no sound. After a while she arose, and taking hold of her dead husband's arm, smoothed it up and down. Mollie threw herself on her father's shoulder on the other side of the bed and sobbed as if her heart would break. The president's death was as complete a surprise to the doctors and attendants as to the outside public. At 10 o'clock, just before closing the cottage for the night, the family had sent a despatch to Garfield's boys at Williams' college countermanding a previous despatch which summoned them to Long Branch. Mr. MacVeagh was the first member of the cabinet to get the news. He was in bed when the darkness across the lawn from his cottage to Francklyn cottage, followed by his wife. The first despatch of sympathy they received came from Arthur.

THE TERRIBLE PAIN.

Swain gives this account of the end: The president awoke and I said, "You have had a nice comfortable sleep." He then said, "Oh Swain, this terrible pain," placing his right hand on his breast, about over the region of the heart. I asked him if I could do anything for him. He said "Some water." I went to the other side of the room and poured about an ounce and a half of Poland water into a glass and gave him to drink. He took the glass in his hand, I raising his head as usual, and he drank the water very naturally. I then handed the glass to the colored man Daniel, who came in during the time I was getting the water. Afterwards I took a napkin and wiped his forehead, as he usually perspired on awakening. He then said, "Oh, Swain, this terrible pain; press your hand on it." I laid my hand on his chest. He then threw both hands up to his side and about on a line with his head and exclaimed, "Oh, Swain, can you stop this?" and again "Oh Swain!" I then saw him looking at me with a staring expression. I asked him if he was suffering much pain. Receiving no answer, I repeated the question with a like result. I then concluded he was either dying or was having a severe spasm, and called to Daniel, who was at the door, to tell Bliss and Mrs. Garfield to come in immediately. I glanced at a small clock on the chandelier and saw it was ten minutes past 10 o'clock. Bliss came in within two or three minutes. I told Daniel to bring a lighted candle which habitually sat behind a screen near the door. When the light shone full on his face I saw he was dying. When Bliss came in a moment after I said, "Doctor, have you any stimulants? He seems to be dying." He took hold of his wrist, as if feeling for the pulse, and said, "Yes, he is dying." I then said to Daniel, "Run and arouse the house." At the moment Rockwell came in, when Bliss said "Let us rub his limbs," which we did. In a very few moments Mrs. Garfield came in and said, "What does this mean?" and a moment after exclaimed, "Oh! why am I made to suffer this cruel wrong!" At 10.35 p.m. the sacrifice was completed. He breathed his last calmly and peacefully.

THE POST MORTEM EXAMINATION.

Secondary Hemorrhage of a Mesenteric Artery the Immediate Cause of Death.

ELBERON, Sept. 20.—The following official bulletin was prepared at 11 o'clock tonight by the surgeons who have been in attendance upon the late president: By previous arrangement the post mortem examination of the body of President Garfield was made this afternoon in the presence and with the assistance of Drs. Hamilton, Agnew, Bliss, Barrett, Woodward, Reyburn and Andrew H. Smith of Elberon, and Acting Assistant Surgeon D. S. Lamb of the Army medical museum, Washington. The operation was performed by Dr. Lamb. It was found that the ball, after fracturing the right eleventh rib had passed through the spinal column in front of the spinal canal, fracturing the body of the first lumbar vertebræ, driving a number of small fragments of bone into the adjacent soft parts, and lodging below the pancreas, about two inches and a half to the left of the spine and behind the peritoneum, where it had become completely encysted. The immediate cause of death was a secondary hemorrhage from one of the mesenteric arteries adjoining the track of the ball, the blood rupturing the peritoneum and nearly a pint escaping into the abdominal cavity. This hemorrage is believed to have been caused by the severe pain in the lower part of the chest complained of just before death. The liver was enlarged and fatty, but free from abscesses, nor were any found in any other organ except the left kidney, which contained near its surface a small abscess about a third of an inch in diameter.

In reviewing the history of the case in connection with the autopsy, it is quite evident that the different suppurating surfaces, and especially the fractured spongy tissue of the vertebræ, furnish sufficient explanation of the septic condition which existed. (Signed) D. W. Bliss, J. K. Barnes, J. J. Woodward, R. Reyburn, F. H. Hamilton, D. H. Agnew, A. H. Smith, D. S. Lamb.

THE NEWS ABROAD.

Expressions of Deep Sympathy from all Quarters—The Feeling in England.

In Canada and Great Britain the feeling of sympathy for the American people is universal. All government and public buildings here are displaying flags at half-mast, and the death of Garfield overshadows every other public event.

A PUBLIC ORDER FROM OTTAWA.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, OTTAWA, Sept. 20.—The flags at the citadel, Quebec, Fort Henry, Kingston, and at all other military posts, and also on all government buildings and vessels, will be hoisted to-day half-mast high, and be so maintained on each day from sunrise to sunset until after the funeral of the late president of the United States, General James Garfield. And it is requested by his excellency the governor-general that the flags on all public, municipal and private buildings and on all ships be placed and maintained in like manner from sunrise till sunset during the same period, in token of the sorrow felt by Canada and its people for the calamity which has befallen the great nation with whom the Dominion is connected by so many ties of friendship and of kindred. By command of his excellency, the governor-general.
JOHN A. MACDONALD.

SYMPATHY FROM ENGLAND.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—The opinion of all classes here is that the event is doubly sad after the gallant struggle for life made by the president. The American exchange is draped in black. Flags in many places of business in the west end of the city are displayed at half-mast. The lord mayor at the Mansion house expressed on behalf of the citizens of London their deepest regret at the news. He said there never was a time when the great English speaking communities were joined in closer bonds.

The queen telegraphed Mrs. Garfield: "Words cannot express the deep sympathy I feel with you at this terrible moment. May God support and comfort you as He alone can." To Mr. Lowell she sent the following: "With deep grief I and my children learn the sad, but not unexpected, news of the fatal termination of the sufferings of the president. His loss is a great misfortune. I have learned with deep sorrow that the president has passed away." The Prince of Wales also telegraphed to Mr. Lowell: "The princess and myself beg you to offer our sincere condolence to Mrs. Garfield."

Earl Granville, secretary of foreign affairs, sent a cable message to Washington requesting the secretary of state to assure Mrs. Garfield and the government of the grief with which the English government received the announcement. Parliament not sitting prevents it from giving a formal expression of the sorrow and sympathy universally felt, which is deepened by the courage and dignity displayed by the sufferer. The news of the president's death was immediately telegraphed to Mr. Gladstone.

Accounts continue to arrive of manifestations of sympathy in the provinces throughout England and Ireland, particularly at Cork, in consequence of its intimate connection with American shipping interests. The bells of Chester cathedral were tolled, also those of some churches in the west end of London. The evening papers publish sympathetic biographies.

A Glasgow despatch says the death of Garfield is the only topic of conversation on the exchange. Flags on public and private buildings and the great American lines are half mast. Similar manifestations of sorrow are reported from Preston, Dundee, Cardiff and elsewhere. The interest taken by the working classes is shown by the way in which they gathered around the placarded announcements in the streets of the great Lancashire towns, the expressions of sympathy were especially noticeable. At Liverpool special editions of the papers published the news with heavy mourning borders. Flags were at half-mast on the town hall and on a large number of public and private buildings, and on the shipping.

Lowell, accompanied by Secretary Fish, visited the city this morning to arrange with prominent Americans for holding a meeting of citizens of the United States. The meeting will probably take place in St. James' hall. The date has not been fixed.

IN THE PAN-METHODIST CONFERENCE, before the commencement of business, Rev. Dr. Jenkins, ex-president of the Wesleyan conference, moved the following resolution: "That this conference, assembled on the last day of its session, has learned with the deepest grief of the decease of President Garfield, and expresses its profound sympathy with the American nation, and especially with Mrs. Garfield, in this great and sorrowful bereavement." Dr. Jenkins reminded the members that on the first day of the conference they had sent across the ocean a message to the wife of the late president, expressing a fervent hope of a speedy recovery of her husband, and on this last day they were going to move a message to the widow of him whom God in His providence has taken away. This deep sorrow would, he felt assured, unite more closely the American and English nations. Rev. Dr. Douglass of Canada seconded the resolution, and alluded in feeling terms to the loss sustained. The resolution was carried amidst deep silence.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—Minister Morton's residence was besieged by hundreds of people this morning, eagerly inquiring for details of Garfield's death.

ON THE CONTINENT.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 20.—The first chamber of the states-general to-day adopted by acclamation a motion calling upon the government to present to the American government expressions of profound sympathy.

THE FUNERAL SERVICES.

First to Washington and Thence to Cleveland—The Official Programme.

The following arrangements for the funeral services have been ordered by the cabinet: The remains of the late president will be removed to Washington by special train on Wednesday, Sept. 21st, leaving Elberon at 10 a.m. On reaching Washington at 4 p.m. detachments from the United States army and from the marines of the navy will be in attendance to perform escort duty. The remains will lie in state in the rotunda of the capitol Thursday and Friday, and be guarded by deputations from the executive departments and officers of the senate and house of representatives. Religious ceremonies will be observed in the rotunda at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon. At 5 o'clock the remains will be transferred to the funeral car and will be removed to Cleveland, Ohio, via the Pennsylvania railroad, arriving there Saturday at 2 p.m. In Cleveland the remains will lie in state until Monday at 2 p. m., and be then interred in Lakeview cemetery. No ceremonies are expected in the cities and towns along the route of the funeral train beyond the tolling of bells. Detailed arrangements for the final sepulture are committed to the municipal authorities of Cleveland under direction of the executive of the state of Ohio. (Signed) JAMES G. BLAINE, secretary of state.

President Arthur, General Grant and his wife, and Chief Justice and Mrs. Waite will accompany the remains as far as Washington. Ex-president Hayes and his wife have been invited to be present on the special train, and it is understood they will meet it on the way after leaving Washington.

GRANDMA GARFIELD.

Breaking the News to Her—She Cannot Believe That it is True.

SALEM, Ohio, Sept. 20.—The news was broken to Grandma Garfield at 9 o'clock this morning. At first she was very much shocked but soon came to and talked calmly. She said "it was probably all for the best." Then she said, "It is not possible my son James is dead. I do not wish to live any longer; I will soon be with him." It is stated that she will not be sent for to go to Long Branch. She is much prostrated and pronounced unable to stand the journey. She will, however, attend the funeral in Cleveland.

THE PRESIDENT'S SUCCESSOR.

General Arthur Greatly Affected by the News—His Movements.

As stated in The World yesterday morning, General Arthur was sworn in as president Monday night. Yesterday he went to Long Branch and was in consultation with the cabinet.

Immediately after the news was received in New York, a reporter visited Arthur's house. A servant at the door informed him that Arthur had received nothing later than the evening bulletin. "The president is dead," said the reporter. At that moment Arthur appeared in the hall. "The president is dead," the reporter repeated to him. "Oh, no; it cannot be, it cannot be. I have heard nothing." "A despatch has just been received," said the reporter. "I hope, my God, I do hope, it is a mistake." Arthur's voice broke at the last words, and his eyes filled with tears. He then retired to a back room, where Elihu Root and Daniel G. Rollins were awaiting him. "They say he is dead," said Arthur; "a despatch has been received at the Sun office." Deep silence ensued. A moment afterward a telegram from the cabinet was received. Arthur broke it open slowly. After reading it he buried his head in his hands and remained in this position a long time.

The Herald says that during the ceremony of taking the oath Arthur evidently was deeply affected. Immediately after he sank into a chair in the room and buried his face in his hands, thoroughly overcome. After a few minutes he arose and went up to the second floor.

President Arthur went to Long Branch yesterday, and was accompanied from the station to MacVeagh's cottage by all the members of the cabinet. As the carriages passed the crowd at the hotel was much excited and several hundred persons followed them to the cottage. The doors were closed, but the crowd continued to increase, and it was found necessary to call out a special guard of soldiers to perform picket duty about the cottage.

Arthur left for New York on a special train in the evening. Grant accompanied him, and both will return in the morning in time to start with the special train conveying the remains of the late president.

NOTIFYING MINISTER LOWELL.

Blaine cabled Lowell as follows: James A. Garfield, president of the United States, died at Elberon, New Jersey, last night at ten minutes before eleven o'clock. For nearly eighty days he suffered great pain, and during the entire period he exhibited extraordinary patience, fortitude and Christian resignation. Sorrow throughout the country is deep and universal; fifty millions of people stand as mourners by his bier. To-day at his residence in the city of New York, Chester A. Arthur, vice-president, took the oath of office as president, to which he acceded by virtue of the constitution. President Arthur has entered upon the discharge of his duties, and you will formally communicate the facts to the British government and transmit this despatch by telegraph to American ministers on the continent for like communication to the governments to which they are respectively accredited.

INFORMING THE CHILDREN.

How the President's Sons Took the News of Their Father's Death.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 20.—The orphaned sons of the president at Mentor were not informed of their father's death till after breakfast this morning. For a time they wept bitterly, but afterwards grew quiet, and bore their affliction with calmness.

THE ASSASSIN.

He Was Much Agitated upon Hearing the News—General Sherman's Letter.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—The gaol warden to-day informed Guiteau of the president's death. The assassin instantly sank down on his bed and appeared much agitated. After remaining in this position a few moments, he rose and paced the floor, muttering something to himself as if praying. He then said he was glad the president had at last been relieved from his sufferings, as he would not have committed the deed if he had known the victim was to suffer as he did.

General Sherman in a letter says: For this man Guiteau I ask no soldier, no citizen to feel one particle of sympathy. On the contrary, could I make my will law, shooting or hanging would be too good for him. But I do ask every soldier and citizen to remember that we profess to be the most loyal nation on earth to the sacred promises of law. There's no merit in obeying an agreeable law, but there's glory and heroism in submitting to an oppressive one.

NOTES.

Over $20,000 was subscribed in New York yesterday to the Garfield fund.

There is no truth in the reported illness of Mrs. Garfield. Bliss says she was very comfortable.

The Philadelphia council has ordered that Independence hall be draped in mourning for six months.

The various departments and the White house will use mourning paper and envelopes for official business for six months.

Rev. P. D. Power, pastor of the Vermont avenue Christian church, of which the president was a member, will preach his funeral discourse.

General Hancock was profoundly moved when informed that the president was dead. He spoke most feelingly of Garfield's noble qualities.

At the executive mansion in Washington yesterday morning, Private Secretary Pruden was arranging the private papers of the deceased president.

DETROIT, Sept. 20.—About half-past one this morning, when abreast this city, the steam barge S. J. Macey, bound up, collided with the schooner Victor, bound down in tow of the tug Jerome, sinking the Victor, which lies abreast the Detroit dry-dock, a little nearer the Canadian shore. Her spars are considerably above water. Passing vessels must keep a good lookout for her, as it is a dangerous obstruction. The Victor was laden with 16,000 bushels of wheat, which she loaded at Port Lambton, Ont.

MILLS' DEAD HORSE.

To the Editor of The Toronto World.

SIR,—In reference to a paragraph which appeared in your issue of Monday last, giving an account of the death of a horse of mine, I beg to state that I was amazed at the audacity of making such a grossly false and libellous statement in your paper. That the horse died from the effects of a spike having ran into his foot is quite true, but that he was in poor condition through want of proper care and feeding is a wicked and cruel falsehood, which can be proved by several witnesses. The horse in question makes the third horse which has died on my hands within the past six weeks, and surely the pecuniary loss is quite enough to have to bear without my chances of earning an honest livelihood being annihilated by the publication of such statements as appeared in your paper. W. MILLS.

THE MAN WITH A GRIEVANCE.

Halton Assizes—He Appears There Again—And is Discomfitted—The Judicature Act.

MILTON, Sept. 20.—The assizes for the county of Halton opened here to-day before Mr. Justice Morrison. The criminal business was nil, and the civil docket contained only two cases—ejectment suits—one of which was speedily terminated by the defendant's name being called three times, and the other was adjourned. His lordship rose from the bench after a short session of twenty-five minutes.

While your correspondent was conversing with some of the jurymen as to the state of the crops, he happened to meet

THE MAN WITH A GRIEVANCE.

This gentle individual is a Mr. Henry Carrick, a well-to-do farmer, advanced in years, living in the township of Trafalgar. The old gentleman's grievance dates from 1860, when he was subjected to an imprisonment of ten days by a county magistrate for trespassing on property and pulling down a fence. The magistrate in question is Mr. H. M. Switzer of the same township, and it is against him that Mr. Carrick has been proceeding in various ways for a long series of assize courts, and through many processes of law, but thus far the old gentleman has not carried his point. He wishes to lay a charge of perjury against the magistrate for some alleged false statements he made in 1876 when giving evidence concerning the trial of 1860. The case of 1876 was one of libel preferred against Mr. Carrick, who had just been exposing the conse of his long-pent grievance in the columns of the Mail. The article was adjudged libellous, and the writer was fined $40. Since that time especially Mr. Carrick has been anxious to have the perjury charge investigated, but he can't succeed in getting it brought before the grand jury. A charge of perjury cannot come directly before the grand jury, but has first to be investigated by a magistrate, and the trouble with the aggrieved man is that he cannot get a magistrate in the county to take up the case. For the past two or three assizes, consequently, he has appeared before the court, asking his lordship for "an order to have the case come before the grand jury." His lordship hasn't the power, and heretofore no such order has been made. [illegible] Mr. Carrick applied to the attorney-general for information. Upon the strength of a communication from the deputy attorney-general Carrick appeared before the court to-day and created the same smiles among the profession that Dr. Stewart of Kingston does when he brings up and argues his case at Osgoode hall. Again his lordship had to refuse the order, and the old man was nonplused once more.

Even were the facts true which Carrick alleges, the crime of perjury could not be proved; and as the facts in the case transpired twenty-one years ago, it is evident that the grievance against the magistrate has got the better of the old man, and that it is likely he will carry the burden to the grave. Your correspondent heard him detail his view of the case on two separate occasions. Each time it took 20 minutes for the old man to deliver himself, and the second speech was an exact reproduction of the first, word for word and letter for letter.

"You are losing your time and money by coming to court so often," said one of the interested listeners.

"As for the time," the old man rejoined, "I don't begrudge it, and as for money I am pretty well fixed, and I'd like to see this
