TOLD BY THE ENVELOPE.

Character Disclosed in the Way You Write Your Friend's Address.

Some persons claim that character discloses itself to the observing from the outside of an envelope, and although the assertion seems decidedly far fetched, there is more than a grain of truth in it after all. It all depends, however, on that little clause "to the observing." If one stops an instant to think, a blurred or blotted address suggests that the writer must have a good deal of "don't care" in his make: if the contrary were the case and an accidental blotting of his envelope had occured, it would have been destroyed and a c'ean one taken its place. If letters come habitually blurred and slovenly in their address, it argues a certain slovenliness in character.

If the penmanship is a quick, careless, dashy hand, it suggests that the writer is of a quick, nervous temperament, while if the writing itself is "hurried to slovenliness it disclosed lack of system an individual always in a hurry." A running hand, small and concise, bespeaks the collegiate, accustomed to taking notes at lectures: a round, full hand, a public school education with Spencerian teaching in writing; a very angular up-and-down hand hints at the writers great imitative powers, for that is never natural; a very bold, dashing style argues individuality, and a peculiar hand originality with strength of character, especially if the peculiarity in the chirography is not pleasing.

If it is a labored hand it means one of two things, either lack of practice—perhaps in early education—or a very careful, painstaking individual. If it is, however, a particularly careful, round, even, beautiful hand, it argues vanity, for the writer has evidently been praised for his penmanship and likes praise. If it is neat, pleasing address, believe in the person's good opinion of you, for he does his best in writing you. If it only pleases you because it is conventional, neat and good form, believe in his general good breeding and education, for his writing is like the smile on the face of a society woman. Again, if the chirography be almost illegible never ask the writer to do you a favor; he would not bother himself to be nice to anyone.

As for the envelope itself, if a plain, ordinary affair, it means, not as might be supposed, poverty of purse, but either poverty of cultivation or the filling of so chance a need, and the letter itself will reveal that it is borrowed article and its use a case of it or none at all. If the envelope be pictured or tinted you may doubt the owner's good taste, while if it have a monogram or crest you can be sure it indicates pride or self-esteem. If it be something unique and novel in design, as very long and slender, or very broad and square, look out for the gushing maid—at this season of the year "the summer girl."

Of course the summer girl is extremely particular about her stationery and takes with her the very latest fads or nothing at all; she is prone to fancy something a trifle newer than the conventional cream white heavy or linen paper. Perhaps the very latest thing she can get is the paper in deep heliotrope and blue tones stamped with a clover leaf in one corner, with a finish that gives to the clover the glisten of satin. Accompanying this she must have a sweet grass box to hold the paper, and a dear little pen-wiper in the shape of a clover leaf and made of flannel; the whole thing somehow made to suggest new-mown hay sort of innocence.

If one is simply sighing for tinted paper the shades of pale gray and yellow with the address stamped in silver are the most desirable things to be used, but a good sensible sticking to a good sensible conventionality of paper is highly satisfactory. The address is the only thing that is new stamped upon one's paper by those who study good form in everything, the envelope accompanying it being plain.

A woman who looks after her letter paper and watches that her supply does not exhaust itself and her needs require her to take up with anything pro tem, adds one admirable quality to the list of daintinesses which should make up her individuality. Precise, dainty ways are acquired charms which should not be sneered at.—Chicago Herald.

Provincial Points.

Diphtheria is decimating the inhabitants of Coachman's Cove, Newfoundland.

It is stated that a sale of the property of the Joggins mining association has been made to an English syndicate.

Mrs. Scott-Siddons, who has been spending the summer at Charlottetown, will give a public reading at that place on the 28th inst.

The body of a man supposed to be one of the crew of the missing schooner Richard Thompson was found at Argyle Shore, P. E. I., last Monday.

On Tuesday Norman Proctor, of Louisville, near Moncton, fell from a roof, 30 feet to the ground, receiving internal injuries of a very serious character.

Miss McKenzie, of Moncton, who took a dose of carbolic acid by mistake, a few days ago, is still a great sufferer and it is feared the result will prove fatal.

Clowes Vanwart, M. D., brother of J. A. and W. Vanwart of Fredericton, left yesterday via Rimouski, for London, where he will take an extended course in London university.

The Joggins mining property recently acquired by an English syndicate comprises an area of two square miles. Their mining area is one half mile wide and four miles long. The price paid by the syndicate is understood to be $230-000.

The store of Mr. Gordon Matthews, Elmsdale, P. E. I., was destroyed by fire, with all its contents, on Sunday night last. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary. The loss is estimated at about $2,500. The stock was insured for $800.

Charles Coghlan, the eminent English actor, is at present a resident of Souris, P. E. I., where he has been for some months. He is principally engaged in play writing. His sister Rose Ogghlan, one of the most popular actresses on the stage, is with him. Mr. Coghlan has closed a special engagement to support Mrs. Langtry during November in her great production of "Antony and Cleopatra.

The Circuit Court.

Obstacles to Confederation.

A well informed Newfoundland correspondent of the Charlottetown Examiner writes that paper:—"The great obstacle to Confederation, and, indeed, to all true progress, is the state of education. The government grant is not only divided between Protestants and Roman Catholics but is further split up between the different denominations of Protestants, each receiving a proportionate share. The inevitable result is a low standard of education, and even this is by no means general. I was assured upon good authority that over fifty per cent. of the population (I am positively afraid to give the figures actually given me) cannot write their own name. This practically prevents intelligent discussion of grave political questions and leaves the people at the mercy of the demagogues. Free schools and compulsory education, humanly speaking, would be the salvation of Newfoundland. But between the educational Egypt of today and this promised land there lie as great obstacles as Israel encountered in the desert; nor will the Egyptians and Amalekites be wanting to embarass the steps of the Moses who may attempt to lead the people in this direction.

In Malta.

Rev. D. D. Moore, formerly of the Carmarthen street church, on his way to India, stopped over a day at Malta, concerning which he writes:—"A pleasant day was spent in Malta, after a Mediterranean bath, wandering through the strange streets of Valetta, filled with bazaars and beggars of all kinds. The principal sights are St. John's Church, the fortifications, the Cathedral and Chapels dedicated to the Knights of St. John. The white houses, and streets blazing with heat, the oleanders growing about the squares and throwing the hue of their brilliant flowers against the light stone buildings, reminded me of some of my earliest recollections of Bermuda. It is a motley population—Maltese, Portuguese, Italian, French and English—and conspicuously amongst them are priests, students and Capuchin monks. Fruit, the most tempting is in abundance—grapes, oranges, quinces, apricots and plums, lusciously ripe, for a penny a pound. It is a spot worth visiting.

Police Court.

Patrick Walsh was fined $4 for being drunk on Rodney wharf. Noel Francis in for protection was let go by the chief. Samuel Warwick given in charge by his wife for being drunk and disorderly in their house on Queen street made a deposit of $8.
