The use of Hall's Hair Renewer promotes the growth of the hair, and restores its natural color and beauty, frees the scalp of dandruff, tetter, and all impurities.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH sale, in the Curler's rink, Chatham, was postponed on Thursday last on account of the rain, but it took place on Friday and was very successful. The rink looked well, in the decorations made for the occasion. The display of fancy work, the refreshments and the tea provided were all excellent and the attention bestowed upon patrons made them feel quite at home. About $200 were realized.

YACHT SOLD.—Mr. D. W. Ward has sold his yacht, Calypso, which was advertised in the ADVANCE, to Mr. H. E. Palmer of Oak Point, on the St. John river, in Kings County. Mr. Ward has had the trim craft placed on a car and it was shipped to Gibson yesterday, where the new owner will take delivery of it. Mr. Palmer has secured a fast and most comfortable boat—one of the best of the Miramichi fleet.

TOOTHACHE, that bane of humanity, is instantly relieved, by rubbing freely on the gum around the diseased tooth, some of Dr. Manning's German remedy, the universal pain cure. Sold by all druggists.

A DELICATE OPERATION:—On Saturday morning last, Dr. Murray MacLaren of St. John, assisted by Drs. J. S. and J. B. Benson, performed a surgical operation for appendicitis upon Mr. D. T. Johnstone, and found an abscess intervening between the outer incision made and the vermiform appendix. The operation dealt with the abscess, but did not include the removal of the appendix. It, however, reached the immediate cause of Mr. Johnstone's illness, and we are glad to hear that he is now doing well. His many friends hope to soon hear of his restoration to good health.

MACKEREL AND BLUEBERRIES:—A Richibucto correspondent says:—

The principal buyers of mackerel here are Geo. Robertson, Henry O'Leary and W. S. Loggie. Robertson ships to Boston in barrels, O'Leary cans at Richibucto and Point Sapin and Kouchibouguais gully. Robertson averages per week about 7,000 mackeral.

A. & R. Loggie took 5 tons of blueberries on Saturday which was the first day they bought. They will average from ½ to 1 ton per day and ship by rail to Black Brook to their canning establishment. They pay 1½ cents per lb. and ship in barrels and boxes.

GUESSING FOR THE OAK TABLE AT WARD'S SHOE STORE.—For some time past a jar containing about 3½ lbs. of beans was exhibited at Ward's shoe store and everybody that bought a dollar's worth had the privilege of a guess marked on a piece of paper and deposited in a sealed case. Last evening it was opened and the beans counted. Total beans in bottle was 6557. The nearest guess and the one that took the prize, an oak table, was by James Preston, Escuminac, 6555. James Jardine next, 6554, and Geo. McFarland 6540. Some guesses were as low as 1000 and as high as 22,000. Some five or six at 10,000. Beans in a jar are very deceptive. [World.

PHONOGRAPHIC:—In a late number of the Phonetic Journal, a magazine published in England, and devoted to the propagation of the Isaac Pitman system of shorthand, we find in the list of new members of the Phonetic Society, the names of Misses Maggie McKendy, S. E. McNaught, Lottie Kain and Mrs. W. C. Winslow. These ladies, together with Misses Lizzie Keary, Maggie Campbell, and Nellie O'Keeffe, whose names appear in an earlier number, have been pursuing the study of phonography under the Sisters of the Hotel Dieu Convent, Chatham. The last three named underwent an examination, in May, for 2nd class diplomas, and the first four in June. All succeeded in obtaining the diploma worked for, which entitles them to admission into the Phonetic Society. The advantage to those on the North Shore who wish to have this important acquirement, of having so well equipped and efficient an institution as that of Hotel Dieu to learn in, is obviously great.

An Ideal Foreman.

The ADVANCE always follows its graduates with interest, after they have severed their connection with it, and it can in most cases, do so with pride. In the article from the Inland Printer, of Chicago, entitled "An Ideal foreman," which is in another column, one of our most creditable young men receives complimentary notice, which we know to be entirely deserved. From the time Mr. Flett entered the ADVANCE office as a mere boy, until he left it, his conduct was that of one who was determined to succeed by close application to his duties and an eye on those of his fellow workman, which denoted an ambition to get at the top in the business he had undertaken to learn. He rose rapidly as an employee of this office and reached the foremanship, but found, the position too circumscribed for his aspirations. Like his other friends here we are proud of his success and glad to know that he retains pleasant recollections of the office and employ in which he began his deserved and successful business career.

Resolution of Condolence.

At a regular meeting of the C. M. B. A. Branch No. 130, held August 7th, the following resolutions were adopted.

Moved by Brother John J. Harrington, seconded by Brother M. Power, that

Whereas by the Divine will of Almighty God, a great calamity has befallen our Brother Michael F. Daley, by which his beloved father has been suddenly taken from the bosom of his respected family,

Resolved that we, the members of Branch No. 130 do tender Bro. Daley and the other members of the deceased's family our sincerest sympathy and trust that Our Lord will give them courage to bear up under the great affliction which He in his infinite wisdom has so permitted.

Also Resolved that a copy of these resolutions be given to Bro. Daley and they be published in the Catholic Records Le Courrier des Provinces Maritimes and the MIRAMICHI ADVANCE.

WM. J. LAPLANTE,
Recording Secretary.

Chatham, Y. M. C. A.

A largely attended mass meeting was held in the association rooms last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Steel, and Mr. D. P. MacLachlan gave brief addresses. Professor McCurdy of Toronto being present was called upon and responded in a few interesting remarks. The singing was a helpful feature, Mrs. McLoon sang a solo, and the hymns were heartily sung by the audience.

Next Sunday a meeting for men only will be held.

The workers' training class met last evening. The class is yet awaiting the gift of the study helps asked for last week.

On Monday evening next the regular meeting of the members will be held. An interesting and helpful programme will be provided, including reports, papers with brief discussions, readings and music. Every member of the association is expected to attend.

On Monday evening, 27th inst., Prof. McCurdy, of Toronto University, will give a popular lecture in Y. M. C. A. hall. That the Professor, who is well and favorably known in Chatham, will be greeted with a large audience is a certainty.

The Circus.

Cook & Whitby's circus performed in Chatham on Monday last and attracted a very large crowd from all parts of the country. It was estimated that three or four thousand persons came into the town from outside points alone to enjoy the occasion. The circus train arrived on Sunday afternoon and was a big one, composed of twenty-eight cars, hauled by two engines. A large crowd was attracted to the station to witness the unloading of the cars and the erection of the tents, as well as the feeding and watering of the animals, some of which were brought to the Church street tank for the purpose. The street parade on Monday at 10 a. m., with its numerous fine horses, wagons, animal-cages, animals and curiosities etc., accompanied by three bands and a calliope, was a brilliant affair, which gave a public guarantee that the circus was a good one. And so it proved. At the afternoon performance there were about five thousand people. The main tent was the largest ever seen here. There were two rings in which interesting and some wonderful performances were going on at the same time, besides a large stage between them, which was a third attraction, so that it was impossible for one eye or mind to take in all the features of the entertainment. The aerial double trapeze performance by Clyde and Miss Rose Phillips was, perhaps, the most daring and exciting number of the varied programme, but the triple bar exercises, the balancing by the japs, some of the riding and the racing in the grand hippodrome were first class features. In short, the circus is one of the great institutions of its class now travelling anywhere. The menagerie contained some splendid elephants, camels, lions, tigers, zebras, etc., as well as the usual show of snakes, monkeys and smaller attractions.

A well-organized band of swindlers accompanied the show and were, doubtless, connected with it. The police authorities succeeded in preventing any operations whatever in public, but they could not, of course, hinder greenhorns from being inveigled into private dressing or retiring rooms, where, in a few cases, they were fleeced. Some men, who ought to have more sense than to attempt to beat circus fakirs at their own game could not be restrained from becoming infatuated by the tempting propositions of the thieves, with whom they were, in most cases, induced to believe they were to become partners in fleecing others, the result being, of course, that they soon found themselves stripped of what money they had about them, while they could never succeed in again finding the man who robbed them or the exact place where they had been fooled. We heard of only three cases of swindling of this kind, but in each the man imposed upon are persons who ought to be ashamed of permitting themselves to be victimised.

One of the most barefaced swindles perpetrated was played on Squire Wm. B, Stuart of Neguac, who brought a bear to town to sell to Messrs. Cook and Whitby, or anyone else who would pay about $50 for it. Bears, however, were a drug in the market, but a circus man arranged to give Mr. Stuart $20 for bruin, rather than see him make no sale. Mr. Stuart, sooner than take the bear home again, was induced to hand it over to the man with the $20. Soon after the transaction was consummated and the man had disappeared with the bear Squire Stuart discovered that the $20 bill was one issued by the defunct Prince Edward Island Bank. It is useless to say that neither man nor bear had been found up to the time of the departure of the circus for Doaktown where it was to exhibit on Tuesday, although Mr. Stuart sought them sorrowing, assisted by policemen.

Northumberland S. S. Convention

Northumberland County Sunday school Convention opened in the Methodist school-room Chatham, at 2 o'clock p. m. on Tuesday Aug. 7th. The opening prayer-service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Geo. Steel, Three other pastors were present, and representatives from seven parishes, at the opening. This was a wider representation than at any previous annual convention, and it increased during the sessions. In the absence of the president a letter was read from him, and vice-president Simon McLeod took the chair.

Parish officers reported the condition of their work, and advance was marked over former years.

Rev. Mr. Stewart led the opening of the second session in St. Andrew's school room, Rev. N. McKay in the chair. Mr. Lucas gave a normal Bible lesson using chart and blackboard, and Rev. Mr. McKay an excellent address on the Home and Sunday school. This was discussed by others.

The third session, in the Methodist school room, was occupied largely with the county secretary's report. It was shown there were 51 schools, of which only 28 are at present evergreen. There are 285 officers and teachers, with 2,175 scholars. Mr. Lucas gave some insight into the exact condition of some schools, on which he asked the county officers to keep eye and heart to help them. He dwelt at some length on the privileges of a county executive. The following were elected for the ensuing year: Miss Edith Shirreff of Chatham, president; D. P. McLachlan, secretary-treasurer. Vice-presidents for parishes: Rev. Geo. S. Steel, Chatham; S. McLeod, Newcastle; Jas. Parks, South Esk; Miss Helen Deyarmond, North Esk; James Dale, Blackville, R. Attridge, Blissfield; Miss Perley, Ludlow; Mrs. T. Flett, Nelson; J. D. Noble, Hardwick; Alex Cameron, Glenelg; Miss A. Simpson, Alnwick.

The following were elected as a central executive with president and secretary: Revs. N. McKay and G. Steel, C. A. Lounsbury, Thos. Clark, Mrs. Salter. Five persons were elected to represent this convention at Fredericton in October. Rev. N. McKay spoke of the benefits of the provincial conventions. At the fourth session Rev. W. Aiken of Newcastle read an excellend paper on The Bible as a Book. Hearty commendation and thanks were expressed.

Rev. G. Steel led a conference on The Duties of Sunday to the Church. Much interest was taken in this. Simon McLeod gave a brief talk on The Sunday School Teacher,

The last session was held in St. John's church, and was presided over by the pastor, Rev. N. McKay. Mr. Clark of Newcastle read a paper on the opportunities of a Sunday school teacher, Mr. Steel spoke on the scriptural ground of teachers' work, and Mr. Lucas followed with a normal lesson. A resolution of grateful recognition of the provincial association, which by its secretary's labors has given much impetus to S. S. work in this county, was carried unanimously. Mr. Lucas spoke on the work through the province. Rev. N. McKay offered some parting counsel, and the convention closed with benediction by Rev. Mr. Stewart.

Ideal Supervision—Wm. Flett.

BY R. J. F.

No position in a large printing office, it may safely be said, requires more discrimination or makes larger drafts upon the patience of the incumbent than that of foreman. It was recently necessary for me to make a call upon the mileage department of the Rand-Avery Supply Company, of Boston Massachusetts, and the system and order prevailing there under the direction of Mr. William Flett was to me singularly impressive of what capable supervision can accomplish. The Rand-Avery Supply Company is devoted exclusively to printing for transportation companies, and is the largest office of this kind in Boston. It is divided into three departments, the job, ticket and mileage, and to the latter I have reference particularly. The scrupulous cleanliness of everything in the department is remarkable. The floor, at the time of my visit, was as clean as if newly washed, all the bright parts of the presses had been polished with emery cloth, and not a particle of grease or ink was noticeable out of place. The windows were polished and bright, the woodwork scrupulously scrubbed and while I was there men were up on step ladders before starting the presses wiping all the shafting and pulleys with waste.

Not a piece of paper is allowed on the floor, each person having a waste basket to put paper in. The paper stock was all cut and labeled on shelves. Racks for forms for press and foundry, all labeled, in their places. The walls and ceiling were newly whitewashed, and the air was pure and clear, which is rare in the average office. I turned to Mr. Flett in surprise, and asked him how he managed to keep things looking so nice and neat. He said he insisted on it, and all the employes took an interest in having it so. He said that he believed in having a place for everything, etc. "Well," said I, "how do you manage to keep your floor looking so white?" He said he had a couple of the boys mop the floor with lye water every Saturday about an hour before closing time, and if any of the men wished to chew tobacco they must provide a box or some other receptacle. Every day the office is swept twice: in the morning and at noon hour. Said Mr. Flett: "I insist on these rules, and see that they are carried out to the letter." I then remarked that I thought the employees would be displeased, and in reply he said: "Here is a sample of it," taking out a handsome gold watch on which was engraved:

Presented to Wm. Flett
by the employees
of the R. A. Supply Co., Mileage Dept.

Mr. Flett is a native of Chatham, New Brunswick, and when a lad was bound out for a term of four years to learn the printing business in the office of the MIRAMICHI ADVANCE of that place. After serving two and one-half years of his time he was freed from his indentures, and given charge of the office. He held the position for a year, until his desire for a larger sphere of action brought him to modern Athens, when he entered the employ of the Rand-Avery Supply Company, where he has been for the past nine years. From the start he was appreciated as a valuable man, and in the spring of 1890 he was appointed to his present position in charge of the mileage department. The testimonial of his employees' regard for him, to which I have already referred, Mr. Flett has a pardonable pride in. It was presented to him last Christmas. Within the watch case is a miniature of Mr. Flett's wife and baby, and the inscription mentioned above. Accompanying the watch and chain was an elegantly designed and illuminated address, the work of the company's artist, the wording being:

DEAR MR. FLETT:

We, the employees of the Mileage Department R. A. S. Co., deeming this a fitting time to show our appreciation of you as our foreman and a sympathetic friend, tender you this slight token as a mark of our esteem and respect. Hoping that the heads of time shall ever point to prosperity for you and the loved ones within its case.

And if God ordains that our paths should be different, we hope that this shall be a gentle reminder of the many pleasant days we have spent together.

With deepest respect,
YOUR EMPLOYEES."

BOSTON, DEC. 24, '93.

Mr. Flett is but twenty-nine years old, and the secret of his success lies in his consideration for his employees without favoritism, and with thorough discipline. The morale of the department, influenced by his personality, is beneficial to the Rand-Avery Supply Company, and to every worker in the establishment.

The Death of Walter Miller.

News of the death of Mr. Walter C. Miller, at Zupanje, Austria, in the latter part of last June, has already been published in the ADVANCE and other papers, but his many friends on the Miramichi have naturally been anxious to have more particulars. These reached us by the last English mail and show that the cause of the sad event was sunstroke. Mr. Miller was at the time manager of a large extract establishment at Zupanje and was every day busily employed in the performance of his duties. It was not known by anybody—even those immediately about him—when he was stricken. The trouble manifested itself gradually in strange delusions, which, however, lasted only a short time. These and other symptoms continued for a period of several days, and affected him two or three times a day. He was not, however, thought to be in danger. On Tuesday night June 28th, Mr. Miller and Mr. W. Standish Lowe, sat up discussing matters for the following day, and parted at twelve, Mr. Miller appearing quite rational at that time. Three hours after—at 3 a. m. on Friday 29th—Mr. Miller went into the private office of the establishment, which was near his bedroom, and spoke to Jacob Rakovac, the night watchman, quite quietly, remarking what a beautiful morning it was. He remained in the office a few minutes and then returned to his bedroom. It is supposed that immediately on his return to his room another sudden attack of brain pressure seized him, as he was found dead in his room at 6.30, the body being quite cold. The doctor was at once sent for and afterwards the chief magistrate, who called a commission of inquiry, which sat nearly the whole day. A post mortem examination of the remains was made by two doctors and a professor of anatomy, and they certified that death resulted from strong pressure of blood on both sides of the brain, caused by sunstroke. All the doctors agreed in the opinion that Mr. Miller's death was a matter of time only, and that nothing could have prevented eventually a fatal result

The sad news was communicated to Mr. Miller's friends in England and those in the country where he died, for he was most highly esteemed, not only by the few British residents of the vicinity, but also by the military and other official people of Zupanje, Vinkovce, Zara, Mitrowitz, Essegg, Graz, Vienna etc. Amongst those who sent telegrams and letters of condolence were the district governor of Zupanje who was at the time at Graz; district governor Balay, Vinkovce; Maj. Gen. Eustace Hill; Dr. Brul, British Consul, Budapest; Prince Schwarzenberg, 12th Lancers; Count Crenneville, do.; Baron Nyay, do.; Baron Pothon do. and some thirty five others. The body was embalmed and the funeral, which was a public demonstration, took place on Tuesday, July 3rd. The room in which the body lay was hung entirely in black, the walls being covered with wreaths of flowers, of which fifty two were sent in by individual friends, families, firms, work people and public bodies. The funeral ceremony took place at 3p. m. and was conducted by the protestant clergyman, assisted by the priest of Zupanje. The order of the funeral procession was as follows:

The cross, carried by Jacob Rakovac
School children
Peasantry
Master Workmen of Zupanje Village
Tradesmen
Factory Workmen
Fire Brigade and Band
Factory hands, carrying wreaths
The Minister, his clerk and Choristers
The hearse—on each side five factory hands and five Fire Brigade men
Chief mourners: Maj General Eustace Hill, Mr W Standish Lowe, Mr Montague Ainslie and Mr F W Hepburn
The Zupanje office staff
The governor of the district
District officials
Friends of the deceased
Foreign representatives
Ladies—Wives of those in the procession
General public

Three thousand persons were present at the interment.

The grave is situated about the middle of the village cemetery and was built of brick lined with cement, the priest himself assisting in the selection of the best site. The embalming of the body and the construction of the grave were done with the view of the possible removal of the body, should Mr. Miller's relatives decide upon that course. No death that has taken place in that part of the country for a long time seems to have been so generally regretted, for Mr. Miller was universally respected for his many fine qualities, both socially and as the head of an important business establishment.

The Late Rev. Father Lawlor's Obsequies.

The funeral of the late Rev. Wm. A. Lawlor took place on Friday morning from the residence of his father, Chatham. The procession formed about nine o'clock, the band of St. Michael's R. C. T. A. Society leading, and playing the Dead March in Saul, followed by members of that society, the C. M. B. A. coming next in their regalia, with clergymen preceding the pall-bearers, Messrs. P. J. Burns and Henry White, of Bathurst, and Messrs. John J. Noonan, Jas. F. Mahar, Warren C. Winslow and Frank Griffin, of Chatham. Amongst the mourners were the father and brothers of the deceased, his uncle, Hon. John Costigan, Secretary of State and others. These were followed by citizens on foot and in carriages, the attendance being very large.

The handsome casket containing the remains was borne by the pallbearers into the pro-cathedral and placed on the catafalque in front of the altar rail, where Pontifical Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Rev. E. S. Murdoch, assisted by Rev. C. A. Finnigan of the Archdiocese of Boston and Rev. F. A. Gagnon, His Lordship Bishop Rogers assisting pontifically. Revs. W. Dixon of Newcastle and L. H. Dugal of St. Basil were masters of ceremonies.

Rev. Michael O'Keeffe delivered the funeral sermon, his text being Wisdom, 4th Chapter and 13th and 14th verses:—

Being made perfect in a short space, he fulfilled a long time; for his soul pleased God; therefore He hastened to bring him out of the midst of iniquity.

The preacher referred to the silence of death as leading the mind to dwell upon the certainty of the universal fate of all, which came in different forms—sometimes after warning, when expected, and sometimes like a thief in the night. Its great lesson was the necessity of preparation for it whenever it might come. We are created for eternity, and this life is one of probation—of preparation. We are here on trial and to make ourselves ready for the life to come. We, who believe in the communion of saints, know we are not separated from one another but that we are in communion with the souls in heaven and in purgatory, and that, finally, we shall enjoy the communion of heaven together. Therefore, death is not so terrible as it appears at first sight, for faith robs it of its terrors.

We have before us an edifying example to comfort us, and we may profitably ponder upon the life which was so short, but full of fruit. We may well say that "in a short space he fulfilled a long time."

Here the preacher referred to the exemplary boyhood and life of the deceased priest, his noble qualities of heart and mind, his great intellectual gifts, the zeal and assiduity with which he pursued his studies and afterwards worked as a priest for the salvation of souls, his eloquence as a preacher, and withal his modesty and humility. Those who knew him best understood best how saintly was his life. God pleased to take him, in the prime of life, unto Himself, but death has not separated him from those who loved him so dearly; they are still united to him. Holy Church forbids us to pronounce on those who leave this world, but we know from the saintly life of the deceased that if he is not in Heaven he if very near the full enjoyment of its bliss. God has taken him and it is for us to make all preparations to meet him there—to try to copy his virtues, to live in the love of God. He gave up all to God's service, even his life. His parents too made a sacrifice in yielding him up to that service and God was pleased to call him to the sacred office of the priesthood. Let those parents realize the blessed hope that he is now happy; let them think of his entering into eternal life. We celebrate the death—not the birth—of the saints, for when we leave this world we enter the new and better life. Do we wish to die a happy death like his? Let us, then, imitate his virtues, so that we may die a happy death, as he died, and thus meet him in Heaven and sing the praises of Almighty God forever and ever.

After bestowing the blessing, His Lordship, Bishop Rogers, said the occasion was a sad one, but not without its consolations. He could not omit the duty of adding a word to what had been so well said by the preacher, to express his appreciation of one whom they all esteemed so highly, for whom they had hoped so much, but who had been taken by the just judge. In christian obedience and charity they bowed to the will of God who had given the crown of justice which Father Lawlor's exemplary, industrious and zealous life merited. We thank Him for all the mercies He conferred upon him; for manifesting in him the ways of His fatherly providence.

His Lordship next referred to the father and mother of the deceased and the sacrifice they had made in offering him to the priesthood, and the benefit of their example as good members of society; referring next to Father Lawlor's school days and the creditable manner in which he had passed through his preparatory theological studies, receiving at the termination of his course, from the leading professor the encomium of being one of the ablest members of his class. All the professors in the Grand Seminary of Quebec agreed in saying they had no fault, whatever, with him, but every reason to applaud.

Referring to the latter days of his life, His Lordship said his parents knew he was to be taken from them, but they had left nothing undone that loving care and attention could suggest to secure his bodily comfort. It was a consolation to his kind mother to minister to him. God had blessed his parents in his death. In the visits of his pastor, too, he had the supernatural help of the sacraments and there is every reason to believe he went to God. We know God's goodness, and as we hope for eternal life, relying on God's promises we may reasonable hope he has gone to God and received his just reward, basking in the sunshine of Heaven and enjoying the delights of his Redeemer. This joy is consolation in our sorrow. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. This brings us the sense of consolation and gives hope for us all. May we be all as well prepared as he was.

The procession was reformed in front of the pro-Cathedral and proceeded to the grave, the band playing the Dead March in Saul, the priests chanting on the way. At the grave the last rites were performed by Rev. Father Joyner.

In addition to the clergy named as officiating at Mass, the following were present:—Very Rev. T. F. Barry, V. G, Revs. Jos. Pelletier, W. Varrily, W. Morrisey, E. F. Savage (Fredericton), A. J. O'Neal, (St. John), C. D'Amour, M. F. Richard, E. J. Bannon, A. A. Boucher, E. Pattenaude, S. J. Crumley, P. Duffy, Maxime Babineau, J. S. Knight, F. C. P. Campbell and Fidelle Babineau.

The Death of Senator Foley.

In last week's ADVANCE we published a brief notice of the killing of Senator Foley of Nevada—who was a native of Gloucester County in this province—at Reno. A despatch from that place gives the following details:

The shooting down of State Senator M. D. Foley late yesterday afternoon by Mrs Alice Maud Hartley, an artist, created a great sensation, which was increased a half hour later by the death of the victim. The shooting took place in Mrs. Hartley's rooms, on the third floor of the Nevada bank building, but what led to the tragedy is known only to the woman, as Mr. Foley made no ante-mortem statement. Mrs Hartley, who is now in jail, admitted the shooting last evening, but, on the advice of her counsel, refused absolutely to give any reason for her deed other than that she ought to have killed Foley long ago and that he desirved to meet his death at her hands in the public streets.

Mrs. Hartley had her studio and rooms on the third floor of the Nevada bank building. In these rooms she received her friends, among whom was numbered Senator Foley. Her rooms were generally lighted up to a late hour, for she was a great sufferer from asthma and found extreme difficulty in sleeping. She was frequently very irritable and was given to nervous outbursts, but none fancied that these semi-hysterical attacks would ever lead her to commit murder.

At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mrs. Hartley sent an urgent summons to the janitor of the building. When he went to her room she gave him a verbal message to Mr. Foley, it was in substance that she wanted to see him on a matter of special importance. Mr. Foley returned answer that he would keep the appointment.

Promptly at 4 o'clock he left his office, which is on the first floor of the bank building, and went up-stairs. That was the last seen of him till a half hour later, when he came staggering down the stairs, suffering from a mortal wound. What passed in the rooms of Mrs. Hartley during this half hour will probably never be known until she gives her testimony. No one was on the third floor at the time except the woman and her victim, but in the offices on the second floor there were several persons. At. 4.30 o'clock Dr. Phillips, whose rooms are directly under Mrs. Hartley's, heard two pistol shots and then a sound of a heavy body falling to the floor. The doctor rushed out into the hall, and, looking up, saw at the head of the staircase Senator Foley, who seemed laboring under great excitement. Mrs. Hartley was following him, but he waved her aside with his hand and shouted in a hoarse voice: "No, no; go back." Foley then descended the flight of stairs like a man who was very weak and uncertain at what moment his strength would collapse. Arrived in the doctor's office he carefully shut the door and then said to Phillips: "Doc, I have been shot and am killed."

The doctor, who tried to encourage him said: "Oh, I guess not." But Foley said slowly, while the extreme pallor of his face added emphasis to his word: "Yes, I am killed."

The wounded man seemed to have reached the limit of his strength, for he collapsed and became unconscious before the doctor could ask him any questions about the shooting. The doctor found that only one bullet had hit Foley, but this entered the navel. Every effort was made to check the hemorrhage, but without effect, and in twenty minutes after his appearance in Dr. Phillips's office, Senator Foley breathed his last.

Mrs. Hartley was arrested and taken to the jail. She was greatly excited, but by strong effort of will mastered her agitation, and when seen she appeared cool and collected. She said: "Upon the advice of my counsel I have decided to say nothing of the circumstances that led up to the shooting. All I can say is that I shot Senator Foley, and I fully intended to do it. I have known him since last October."

To one of the jail officials she was a trifle more communicative. When first brought to the prison she said: "I ought to have done this in public, as he deserved to be shot in the street. I hope he may die of his wounds."

The woman is about 35 years of age and is the widow of H. H. Hartley, better known in California as the "Hermit of Meadow Lake, Nevada county."

A post-mortem examination showed that the bullet which killed Foley entered near the navel and ranged downward. It cut the intestines and completely severed the large femoral artery.

Senator Foley's estate will amount to about $200,000, It was largely reduced by the depreciation of silver and silver-mining property.

SKETCH OF SENATOR FOLEY'S CAREER.

[San Francisco Chronicle.]

Senator M. D. Foley was one of the best known and most popular men of Nevada. He grew up with the State and has been identified with its prosperity and best interests for twenty-five years. He settled in Hamilton, White Pine district, in 1869. He laid the foundation of his wealth about twenty years ago by securing contracts to supply the smelting works at Eureka, Nev., with charcoal. Previous to that he had lived in White Pine, Nev., and there, as a young man, had been engaged in the livery stable business. The Eureka Consolidated had need of a large supply of charcoal for its smelters, and in the supplying of this Mr. Foley grew rich. He got the coal out and did the hauling not only for the smelters of this mine, but also for others at Eureka. He did not speculate in mines and mining stocks, notwithstanding the constant temptation in Nevada to do so, but with the thrift that marked his business life he invested his gains in Eureka real estate. He became a lender of money as soon as he had funds enough to do so, and the mortgages that he held always proved profitable. He was interested for a time in the hardware firm of Remington & Co., of Eureka, it was said, and started a branch of it in Salt Lake City.

On his removal to Reno he became a banker and was one of the leading capitalists of the Bank of Nevada in that city. He had been a senator continuously for twelve years.

Senator Foley's influence in Nevada was always growing. He was a delegate to several national Republican conventions and he had considerable power in Nevada politics. He was in touch with Republicans in this city, as he frequently came to San Francisco, where he has been well known for years. He was tall and robust, with a resolute face and an air of energy. He was in his prime and apparently was destined for a long life.

He was married about ten years ago in Eureka to Miss Griffin, whose father was Wells, Fargo & Co.'s agent in that city. The couple had no children. Mrs. Foley is highly spoken of by people who knew her.
