There should be no "near" satisfaction in footwear. A Shoe either fits or it doesn't. A Shoe that fits can mean a world of pleasure —a Shoe that doesn't means a world of woe.

The After-the-War Language.

By RUTH CAMERON.

A woman who is recently back from "over there" was talking about the children in the schools of Belgium. "They do not teach geography any longer," she said to me, "they can't because it is too dull."

A man who sells general histories told me recently that a great business he was very bad because the one which he had hitherto clung to in the most important part.

What War Has Done to Language.

[illegible]

Who Can Define "Over There"?

[illegible] "over there." Who does not know that it means to "Kill for the Kaiser" or to "Go over the top?"

I suppose such words as "preparedness" and "conservation" were in the dictionary ten years ago, but not with the definite meaning they now have. When the next dictionary is written I think something will have to be added to the definition of these words.

No One New Living Will Ever Forget "A Scrap Of Paper."

One wonders just how many of these words and phrases will stay in the language and how many will prove ephemeral and be forgotten a year or two after that blessed peace for which so many hearts are indeed "weary tonight," has been earned.

I doubt if "a scrap of paper" will ever be forgotten. Certainly not while one human being who has reached the age of reason when that classic was uttered, is alive. I wonder if four words ever did more harm and aroused more feeling against the cause they were supposed to champion than those.

How Many Of These Words Will Get Into The Dictionary.

I fancy "camouflage," that much abused word, has also come to stay and will take a new lease of life once we have given it a good long rest.

"slacker" may get into the dictionary, but I am not sure that it will ever be used again should occasion (Heaven forbid) arise. The reason I doubt this is that there was a different word for that sort of thing in the Civil War. Does anyone, perchance, remember "skedaddler"?

I wonder if any of the marvelous verbs and nouns and adjectives that have been concocted out of the name "Hoover" will by any chance get into the dictionary. As my instinct is this [illegible]

[illegible]

Would the force [illegible]

[illegible]

It seems most unlikely. And if it does it will work a hardship on the Mesopotamians, etc., to have some word which will make them feel that they have not been forgotten.

One Can Never Tell.

Household Notes.

If the cake rises rapidly in the middle like a pyramid and cracks, it is cooking too quickly. A well-cooked cake should be flat on top when done.

Onions and bacon make a good dish, the onions being stewed in salted water till tender, and then put in the oven in a baking dish, with little strips of bacon on top. Bake till tender.

To-day's Tabloid Tale.

By Jay Hunt.

IS MAKES THE WORLD GO ROUND.

Young Holdem Off recent activity through the park, his forehead wrinkled like and unwrinkling like an accordion, as it always did when Holdem Off thought deeply. Except for a dance for and a steady, unpleasant drizzle, it was an almost perfect evening.

"I'll have to decide and take the plunge to-night; that's all there are to it. It simply won't do to wait no longer," the young man thought determinedly.

For the benefit of the many readers who are not already acquainted with Holdem Off's peculiar predicament, we will explain that for many weeks he has been pulled this way and that by the widely varied but equally overwhelming charms of two young women, Ollie Margarine Murphy and Thisbe Pox, until now, maddened by the uncertainty, he has determined to make his choice and let the lucky girl abide by it.

"Of course," he reasoned with himself, "Ollie is a marvelous cook and her scalloped peanuts are fit for a king, not to speak of her twiseled tomatoes Western style or her panned pan-American pancakes—but then Thisbe's china-blue eyes, oh, Thisbe's china-blue eyes! But Ollie makes the most stunning dresses out of scraps of this and that and remnants of nobody knows what—but on the other hand, there's Thisbe's saucy little nose to think of. Then Ollie is naturally thrifty, never wastes a cent and can make a dollar grow where it never grew before—but Thisbe's dimples, hang it all, they'd be awful hard to give up for ever. Ollie or Thisbe? Ollie or Thisbe? Ollie has a wonderful mind—reads Shakespeare and Eleanor Glyn and all those writers, and can entertain a fellow for hours—but Thisbe's giggle! That decides it—she's the perfect wife!"

And he ran all the way to Thisbe's house and proposed and was accepted, and thirteen months later the divorce court judge confessed that she was the cutest little wife that had ever been up before him.

Fullness on the hips is frequently seen among the new skirts.

Blue serge one-piece dresses are liked by all types of women.

Hr. Grace Notes.

Your correspondent would tender his sincere sympathy to all those who had loved ones lost on the ill-fated Florizel.

Our streets are now nearly clear of snow and ice, and carts and carriages are now the order of the day.

Mr. M. Sellars of Bell Island arrived in town yesterday. He leaves this afternoon for Bay de Verde and other settlements in that neighbourhood on business.

Flags were flying from business places yesterday and again to-day in memory of those who were lost on the Florizel.

Should weather permit, a skating carnival will be held in the rink to-morrow (Thursday) evening for the benefit of the W. R. A. This is a worthy object and it is thought a large number will participate.

I must congratulate you on the great work [illegible] Mr. Telegram, on your new printing machine.

CORRESPONDENT.

DON'T GET EXCITED.

We're building up a mighty force, to do some heavy scrappin'; and now and then our work is coarse—mistakes are bound to happen. We haven't made of war a trade, like some bloodthirsty nations; so go get sidetracked and delayed, in handling guns and rations. If, while we arm two million men, that Wilhelm may be blighted, we pull a bonehead now and then, oh, friends don't get excited! Consider that for fifty years we've spent our summers farming; we've slopped our hogs and fed our steers, while war struck kings were arming. We've strung along on peaceful jobs, our barns and silos filling, while Europe mobilized her mobs, and set the fall guys drilling. Here is a thing we all abhor; we thought we'd never shed it; so we are green at making war—perhaps it's too our credit. Oh, we have sandburs on our feet, and hayseed in our tresses, and we have raised a lot of wheat, and tamed the wilderness. And war's a graft entirely strange to us and all our leaders, who spent our lifetime at the grange, a-pushing plows and seeders. So, if we mess around a bit, and cross our wires and blunder, tell me, O critic, while you crit, is it so great a wonder?
