WITH HER HANDS.

Nellie Barnum's Marvelous Gift of Healing.

Headache and Neuralgia Disappear at the Touch of Her Wet, Cold Fingers.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 5.—There is a girl in this city who can cure headaches, and cure them without a bit of medicine. She just lays her hand on the achee's head, and that settles the whole matter. There is something peculiar about the girl's hands. They are white and shapely and very nice to look at, but to touch—ugh! they're as cold as ice. More than that, they are always dripping wet, these strange hands.

It's an eerie thing to see a handsome, healthy girl lift her hands and let an icy dew fall from the ends of her fingers. She can do that any time she wants to. She is a tall, handsome young woman, who has never been ill in her life. She is rosy-cheeked and bright-eyed, and she isn't the slightest particle like the typical healer.

She works in a big hot factory down town, and she can cure any girl in the place of headache or any kind of pain. She doesn't go through strange evolutions or weird incantations. She just pushes back her sleeves and lays her cold, wet hands on the aching head. The patient feels a queer, creepy, shivery sensation crawling down her back. The cold hands move slowly across the hot forehead of the sufferer, the throbbing pain stops, the nervous twitching of the eyelids ceases and the headache is gone.

"I don't know how I do it," says the young woman with the strange hands, smiling pleasantly. "I am not quite sure that I care to know. If I can cure people of sickness I am very glad."

"How long have you possessed this power?"

"Only recently I met a healer, and he told me I had great power in that way. I tried it at home and I found I could help my sister and her friends. The only thing is, I find, I seem to take the pain from the patient to myself. I don't like that very well."

"And your hands, were they always so strange."

"Always. They are never warm and they are never dry. They drip like this all the time. I have seen several physicians about them. It's rather unpleasant to have them always wet, you know."

"The physicians never explained it very clearly. Some of them said it was nervousness that made my hands drip so. Some of them said it was something abnormal in the glands of the skin. They did not know how to stop it. I am just getting interested in my power. I want to see what I can do. It may not amount to much, after all. It would be a lovely thing to be able to help the suffering, wouldn't it?"

The friends of this interesting young woman are enthusiastic over her gift. "She is too modest about it," said a frail little woman yesterday. "She has a marvelous gift. I have suffered frightfully with neuralgia for months. Nellie has just begun to treat me, and I feel like a different woman.

"How does it feel when she puts her hand on my head? Oh, the hands are very cold and they chill me at first, but afterward the pain goes and I feel as I used to feel before that awful neuralgia came to drive me distracted."

The strangest thing about all this strange affair is that the cures wrought by the girl with the peculiar hands are permanent, or seemingly so. The headache or the neuralgia does not go away simply for the day—it goes away and does not return. The young woman's name is Nellie Barnum, and she is a quiet, modest girl, who hates the smallest shadow of notoriety.

Held Twenty-five Years Without Trial.

WACO, Tex., Sept. 5.—From time to time Texans have railed at the slow-moving wheels of justice in the Northern States. They wondered how prisoners could be detained without trial as long as reported in some of the prisons North, but a case that has just come to light here breaks the record of delayed trials. A. A. Houston was indicted a quarter of a century ago for the murder and robbery of Moses Ogden. At a recent habeas corpus hearing the prisoner was admitted to bail in $2,500. ### Fire Hazard.

Prof. Charles B. Gibson, of Chicago, in his special report to the insurance companies on the "Hazard of Steam Pipes" and upon "Coverings for Steam Pipes," says: "All organic matter, such as hair felt, becomes more or less charred by constant contact with hot steam pipes, even though the temperature be but a little above the boiling point of water; and by steam of 300° F. and above, so thoroughly scorched after a time as to become very fragile and to crumble away rapidly. It is noticeable that the dust formed from this charred material is very combustible and will flash like gunpowder when thrown into the fire. When steam of high temperature is used it is by far the safest to employ a covering wholly incombustible."
