AT a meeting of horsemen, held at A. N. Large's Hall last evening, it was resolved that trotting races take place on the Hillsborough ice on Wednesday next, ice permitting. Two races will be held, one for four year olds, and a free for all. As there is a large number of flyers in both classes, good sport may be expected.

THE funeral of the late Mrs. Sullivan, mother of the Hon. W. W. Sullivan, took place on Friday morning last from her late residence at Hope River, and was very largely attended. High Mass was celebrated at St. Ann's Church by the Rev. R. P. McPhee, assisted by Revds. D. F. McDonald, of Souris, and Angus McDonald, of Rustico.

FROM the St. Croix Courier we learn that it is probable that the celebrated trotting stallion "Black Pilot," which made such good showing in the Bangor trotting matches last fall will be brought to St. Stephen. The Courier understands that Mr. J. D. Bonness has offered $3,000 for him, and that the offer is likely to be accepted, and the horse brought to St. Stephen early in March.

At the Annual Meeting of the Diocesan Church Society (Anglican), of this Province, held last week, the following resolution, moved by the Rev. Charles O'Meara, Rector of St. Paul's Church, and seconded by A. B. Warburton Esq., was unanimously adopted:—

"That this society deeply regrets the death, since the last annual meeting, of the Rev. George W. Hodgson, and would tender their warmest sympathy to Mrs. Hodgson and members of his family, and that this society further wishes to express their high appreciation of the varied abilities, the extensive learning, the great eloquence, and the earnest Christian character of the deceased gentleman."

The February Century.

The publishers respectfully call attention to the fact that in the contents of the "midwinter" CENTURY may be found a remarkable variety of subjects of public moment; and an equally remarkable list of names associated with the history, literature, and art of America. If this issue of the magazine has an inhospitable look to foreign contributors, who happen to be wholly and by accident excluded, they may find recompense of courtesy, in the plain speech from forty-five American writers, on "International Copy-right," spoken in the "Open Letters" department, and which is one of the most striking features of the number. Lowell opens the argument against literary theft with a quatrain in the most biting vein of Biglow's humor; epigrams of satire, reason, justice, and exhortation from writers prominent in every branch of letters follow; and Whittier at the end speaks a few words of Quaker scorn of the American attitude to the subject more bellicose than avowed warfare. The leading article in "Topics of the Time" expresses the editorial view of "The Demand of American Authors."

A peculiar interest attaches to General Grant's "Preparing for the Wilderness Campaign." Here he is dealing with his plans for the last grand campaign, extending from the James round to Nashville, Atlanta, and the sea, and which gave the Confederacy the death hug. His method is vivid and anecdotal, and as outspoken regarding the personal aids and drawbacks of his officers as the physical difficulties to be overcome.

"Anecdotes of McClellan's Bravery," by one of his officers who was a companion in arms as far back as the Mexican war, lends additional interest to the war-time portrait of McClellan, which is the frontispiece of the number. Under the laconic title, "Our March against Pope," General Longstreet gives the Confederate view of the Second Bull-Run campaign, with some caustic criticisms and amusing anecdotes. The paper is profusely illustrated, as is also "With Jackson's 'Foot-savairy' at the Second Manassas," by Allen C. Redwood, who describes the humors and hardships of a private. "Antoine Louis Barye," the French sculptor, is the subject of the opening illustrated article, by Henry Eckford, who gives a thoughtful study of the man and his art, as well as anecdote and information.

In fiction there are the opening chapters of Mr. Howell's new story, "The Minister's Charge," the Minister being the Rev. Mr. Sewell, whose acquaintance was made in "The Rise of Silas Lapham;" and the hero a country youth who goes to Boston in search of a literary career, and is undeceived in many things. The fourth part of Mary Hallock Foote's story of Western life, "John Bodewin's Testimony," deals with the motive of a tragedy and abounds in character sketches. The short stories of the number are the first part of a humorous novelette, "The Borrowed Month," by Frank R. Stockton; and a dialect sketch of Georgian life, "An 'Onfortunit Creetur,'" by Mat Crim.

Edmund C. Stedman contributes a notable poem, "Hebe," which name is seen from the illustrations accompanying, to belong to a lioness that played the executioner's part in a lover's revenge. The other poems are by Rose Hawthorne Lathrop, the late Sidney Lanier, and others.

A second part is given of the shrewd observations of an anonymous writer, entitled "Zweibak; or, Notes of a Professional Idle." "Will the Land Become a Desert?" is a question discussed by Joseph E. Chamberlain in a thoughtful essay. In "Open Letters" Bishop Dudley and the Rev. J. H. Hopkins express Episcopalian views in regard to "Christian Union," and H. C. Fuller's comments on the Rev. Lyman Abbott's recent article discussing socialism under the title, "Danger Ahead." A prose sketch of negro humor, "Out on a 'Scargoon,'" by Eva M. De Jarnette, is a feature of Bric-a-Brac.

The territory of Dakota has been admitted a State of the American Union.

Baptiste and Pierre Vandale, two of the prisoners sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary for participation in the North-West Rebellion, have been released by order of the Governor-General. This is believed to be the precursor of a general amnesty to all prisoners at Stoney Mountain.

"I take only one English weekly paper, The Spectator, and one Canadian, The Week, and as a rule I should be puzzled to say which I should miss most." From a letter by Thomas Hughes, author of "Tom Brown's School Days."

The Week,

A CANADIAN JOURNAL OF POLITICS SOCIETY AND LITERATURE.

Published every Thursday, at $3 per year.

Independent in Politics, THE WEEK appeals by a comprehensive Table of Contents to the different tastes which exist within the circle of a cultured home.

An average of fifteen short, crisp Editorials is given in each number upon Canadian, American, and English Politics and Literature.

Amongst the regular Contributors is PROFESSOR GOLDWIN SMITH, and a distinguished public man in London has kindly undertaken to supply regularly an English letter. Paris and Washington Letters will appear at intervals.

In addition there are special contributions from some of the ablest writers in the Dominion and the United States.

THE WEEK

has now entered upon its third year with the most encouraging prospects, and with many new features.

THE MUTUAL Life Insurance Co. of New York.

Assets One Hundred and Five Million Dollars ($105,000,000.)

THE STRONGEST FINANCIAL INSTITUTION IN THE WORLD

Purely mutual, having no Stock-holders to claim any of the profits, the assets and surplus belong to the assurer.

Its ratio of expenses to receipts is less than that of any other Company.

Its dividends to Policy-holders are greater than those of any other Company, and the cost to the insurer is therefore less than in any other Company.
