SIR OLIVER'S REASON

For Recommending the Withdrawal of the New Q. C. Appointments.

CLAIMED TO BE PROVINCIAL PLUMS

The Conservatives will Enter Protests in Many Constituencies.

What The Ottawa Journal Says About the Present Chances of Redeeming Seats—That Poor Ammunition—Mr. Paterson Does Not Yet Know what Constituency He will Represent—Premier Laurier Returns to the Capital—Joe Martin Goes Home without a Portfolio.

Ottawa, July 22.—(Special.)—In connection with the proposed cancellation of the recently-appointed Queen's counsel it may be pointed out that there is more involved than the mere rescinding of the act of the late Government. Students of Ontario politics know well that Sir Oliver Mowat has all along contended that the power to appoint Queen's counsel was vested in the Provincial authorities and not in the Federal authorities, but no action was ever taken to settle the point. The Federal Government has for years been nominating Queen's counsel and a few years ago Sir Oliver did the same and there the matter rested. One of the reasons, therefore, which have led the Minister of Justice to recommend the rescinding of the order in council is the point for which he has all along contended.

Conservatives Will Protest.

It is said that in every constituency in Ontario in which a Liberal was elected by less than 100 majority or so, a protest will be entered by the Conservatives where ground for it can be obtained. The two seats for Ottawa will certainly be protested.

The Journal, speaking of the contemplated policy of the Conservatives, says: "'Cest magnique, perhaps, but certainly ce n'est pas la guerre—and if the protests are made and tried and result in new elections, The Journal will gamble on the prophecy that the Liberal whips will have to quit trying to keep Liberal members in Parliament on the right of the Speaker, for there will not be enough Conservatives left in the House of Commons to occupy more than the front row on the opposite side."

If The Journal is sincere in this expression of opinion, it is evident that somebody cannot read the signs of the times aright.

Poor Ammunition.

In regard to the complaint that the Martini-Henry ammunition of 1896, English issue, has failed to come up to the standard and caused trouble by the base of the shell pulling off the cartridge, it appears this issue of ammunition was imported from England especially for the rifle associations, and comprises half a million rounds. At the Militia Department the information is obtained that this consignment was procured in the usual way through the War Office authorities and must have passed the Imperial Government inspection.

Mr. Paterson Not Yet Knows.

Asked to-day as to the story of his standing for Saskatchewan on Mr. Laurier resigning the same, Mr. Paterson replied definitely that nothing had yet been decided in the matter and it was not certain which seat he would secure.

The Premier Returns.

Mr. Laurier arrived here this afternoon from Montreal. He was preceded by an hour or so by Sir Richard Cartwright, who had been at Caledonia Springs since Friday. Sir Richard leaves for the West to-morrow night and will not return to Ottawa until after his re-election in South Oxford.

Personal and General.

Chief Justice Strong is the only member of the Supreme Court at present in the city. For the first time on record the work of the court is completed up to date and everything is in readiness for the October list.

Mr. Andrew Burrows of Smith's Falls has completed a deal for the shipment of 2000 head of steers for France. There is no embargo on cattle to that country, consequently Canada is capturing a considerable share of trade. Mr. Burrows is also purchasing 5000 sheep for the English market.

Sir Charles H. Tupper arrived from Halifax to-day.

Hon. John F. Wood was in the city to-day.

Senator T. R. McInnis was busy round the departments to-day. He says that British Columbia is determined to have a Cabinet Minister and doubtless expects the position himself.

Joe Martin, ex-M.P., left for Winnipeg to-night via the Soo Line. Joseph is greatly disgusted with his reception by Mr. Laurier and goes home without a portfolio in his possession.

DEATH OF ALLAN PRINGLE.

A CONSERVATINE CONVENTION.

A Few Additional Opinions Regarding Its Advisability in the Near Future—Mr. Ives' View.

Opinion of leading Conservatives regarding the proposition of holding a Conservative convention in the near future, as printed in The World yesterday, was a lively source of conversation among politicians in Toronto and elsewhere yesterday. The World is in receipt of many letters and telegrams in reference to this important question.

Mr. Henry Cargill, M.P., telegraphs from Cargill: "I would not advise holding a convention of the Conservative party until it is known that some of those who consider themselves leaders of that party and who profess so much confidence in them have changed their opinion as to the merits of the question which defeated their own party in the late election.

"H. CARGILL."

Hon. W. B. Ives, late Minister of Trade and Commerce, wires from Sherbrooke: "Think question of calling national convention better be left to decision of members of party recently elected.

HAS SHE ARMS FOR CUBA?

A Mysterious Vessel in the Gulf of St. Lawrence Being Watched by the Canadian Authorities.

Ottawa, July 23.—(Special.)—The possibility of the territorial waters of Canada being made the scene of Cuban filibustering operations has led to the issue of an important order by the admiralty enjoining strict compliance with the terms of the Foreign Enlistment Act and prohibiting the issue of clearances by Canadian customs officers to vessels destined for Cuba.

At the present time there is a strange vessel under surveillance in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. She has been hovering off the coast for some time and suspicion has been aroused that she is desirous of transhipping a cargo of arms and ammunition to some vessel destined for Cuba.

If a vessel enters at the customs with arms and munitions of war on board the cargo is liable to be seized, unless permission to import is first obtained from the Minister of Customs. Another clause in the act provides that the Governor-in-Council may prohibit the exportation of arms, ammunition, etc., from Canada, so that attempted transhipment in Canadian waters would also render the vessel liable to seizure.

SURGEON-MAJOR F. J. DOYLE.

He is Now on His Way Back to India After Visiting Ireland—An Interesting Conversation.

Surgeon-Major F. J. Doyle of the British Indian army, registered at the Queen's last evening. He is connected with the First Regiment of Native Infantry stationed in Deccan, a little west of Bombay, a section of which corps is now participating in the Soudan expedition. The Surgeon-Major has been home to Ireland, and is now en route to India via the C.P.R. and the C.P. steamships.

To The World he spoke highly of the native troops, saying they made good soldiers and that there was no danger of there ever being another Sepoy rebellion. He also said that since England had completed her system of railways throughout Northern India and through the Khyber Pass, Russia stood a poor show of capturing Britain's eastern empire. Troops could now be easily massed on the Afghan frontier to meet any assault the Northern Bear might make.

ON A SNAP VOTE.

Did the Irish Members Defeat a Clause in the Imperial Government's Irish Land Bill?

London, July 22.—The House of Commons to-day proceeded with the consideration of the Irish Land Bill. Clause 24 of the measure provides that advances under the Purchase Acts shall consist of money and not of guaranteed land stock. When this clause was reached Sir Thos. Esmonde, anti-Parnellite member for the West Division of Kerry, moved that advances should consist of guaranteed land stock and not of money. The Irish landlords joined the Nationalists in support of Sir Thomas Esmonde's motion, and it was carried by a vote of 99 to 86. This vote against the Government was received with frantic cheers from the Irish members. Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Treasury, withdrew the clause altogether.

New York, July 22.—Nicola Tesla, the electrical expert and engineer, was shown to-day the published statement which was telegraphed from Buffalo, to the effect that he had discovered a method for successfully transmitting electricity long distances, and, being asked as to the truth of it, replied: "Yes, I did state that electricity can be transmitted long distances upon a commercial basis over a distance of at least 500 miles. I will stake my reputation and my life upon it. I only qualify it by adding that the amount of power transmitted must be quite considerable."

No Protest in West Toronto.

It is pretty well settled that there will be no protest of Messrs. Clarke and Osler's election in West Toronto. When Mr. Preston called a meeting of his supporters in Wardell's Hall, with a view to unseating the big pair, some tall talking was done, but it turns out that the talk was all wind. The Liberals can't find anything tangible to go on in appealing to the courts.

A FIGHT WITH SMUGGLERS.

Chief Officer Phoran of Sydney Knocked Senseless by Contrabandists

HE CAUGHT WHILE LANDING LIQUOR.

How His Team of Horses Were Driven Over the Steep Precipice

And Dashed to Death on the Rocks Below—His Wagon was Thrown Into a Lake—The Officer Afterwards Sends for Aid and the Vessel is Seized and Towed to Sydney—Smuggling Still Pays Between St. Pierre and Canada—The Controller of Customs Takes Action.

Ottawa, July 22.—(Special.)—The Controller of Customs had to deal with an important whisky seizure case today, based on a report made to the department by Chief Preventive Officer J. Phoren of Sydney, one of the coolest heads in the service.

On Wednesday, July 8, Phoren grew suspicious of the movements of a small schooner hovering off Low Point, at the eastern entrance to the Sydney roadstead. In the evening he crossed the harbor, and hiring a team, drove to the nearest landing place east from the Point, timing his trip so as to arrive on the scene after dusk.

It is one of the most lonely and bleakest spots on the eastern coast, and there sure enough was the schooner at anchor just off the beach, with every indication on board that the smugglers were at work in the vicinity landing her contraband cargo.

Officer Phoran and his assistant left their rig and made for the beach, but they had a desperate gang to deal with. From an ambuscade near by the smugglers poured volleys of stones upon the officers, and Phoran fell in the first round, unconscious from a terrific wound on the forehead. He was dragged to a farmhouse by the officer, rallied in half an hour, and at once telegraphed to North Sydney for assistance. But by the time the steamer arrived the smugglers had landed all the cargo except two small kegs of rum, and stowed it safely away. The schooner was seized and taken in tow to North Sydney, where she lies.

Two days afterwards the officers' team and rig were discovered. The smugglers had driven the horses over a cliff at the seaside, so that they were dashed to death on the rocks below. The wagon they dumped into a lake.

Such was the report of the incident made to the department, acting upon which Hon. Mr. Paterson to-day issued orders to have criminal proceedings instituted at once against several men near Low Point who are suspected of being members of the smuggler crew. The schooner will be sold, but will not fetch much at auction, being an old craft, which the contrabandists probably bought for the purpose, caring little if they lost her so long as they landed her cargo safely.

It is evident from this case that smuggling from the French island of St. Pierre to the coast of Cape Breton has not ceased to be a paying though still a hazardous enterprise. The preventive service along the coast is far more effective than it was 20 years ago, when smuggling whisky and tobacco was quite an industry among the coasters. But, with all the watchfulness of its officers, the customs of Canada is doubtless cheated out of thousands of dollars yearly in loss of revenue through wholesale smuggling from the adjacent French possession on the shores of Newfoundland.

CAUGHT IN THE SQUALL.

Rowboat Adrift on the Lake at the Mercy of the Storm—Alarm as to Occupants' Safety.

There is great anxiety among the summer residents at Victoria Park owing to the peril, if not death, of Miss Jennie Thompson, daughter of one of the park residents, and William Darby, a young man who was visiting the park. Last evening the two were out in a small rowboat, and at 8.30, when a sudden and violent squall came up, were nearly four miles out in the lake. Those on the shore became alarmed on account of a sailboat containing five persons, one of whom was Miss Thompson's sister, the larger party being near the missing boat.

Another boat was sent out, but the sailboat was brought in without difficulty. Then it was seen that the smaller boat was being driven out into the lake, Darby being unable to make headway against the gale, though he made gallant efforts to row to the westward. The squall from the northwest rapidly drove the boat out, and when last seen it was about seven miles from shore and drifting rapidly to the southeast. The rescue party, composed of Messrs. Gardiner, Long, Stansbury and others, followed the disappearing boat for four miles, but found their task hopeless, and were forced to return, finding it difficult to make their way back in the teeth of the gale, the lake being very rough.

The young lady's relatives were distracted, and her mother became seriously ill when informed of her daughter's danger.

A World reporter who made his way to the park at midnight found a group of anxious watchers around a fire on the shore. Nothing had been seen or heard of the imperilled couple, and friends and relatives had almost given up all hope of seeing them again. A party had patrolled the shore for seven miles to the east, but without the slightest result.

It was thought that the boat might have reached Fisherman's Island or the city, but enquiries along the wharves showed that the boat had not come ashore here.

Darby is a clerk in the employ of Sutcliffe & Sons, and lives with his mother at 73 1-2 Shuter-street. Mrs. Darby, when seen this morning, was waiting for her son to come home. When told of his danger she became hysterical and expressed the fear that he was drowned, as she did not think he could manage a boat.

At 3 o'clock this morning a dozen of the searching parties returned, but with no tidings of the missing boat. Beacon fires were burning on the cliffs of Victoria Park, and watching parties were still there. Mrs. Thompson was on the lake front, in company with Beach residents, and was in a very distracted condition. The general impression is that the young people are drowned.

The sermon was preached by Bishop Du Moulin of Niagara, and this being the first discourse delivered by him in the city since his installation as Bishop of Niagara, the congregation included among its members many members of other Anglican churches, and of sister denominations, with whom the Bishop was deservedly popular during his incumbency of St. James'. The musical part of the service was very finally performed by the male choir, which has among its members some good voices, which last night showed to great advantage.

CARL WEDS AN ENGLISH GIRL

The Danish Prince Knew Just Where to Go to Find a Good Wife

AND LINKED HIS LUCK WITH BRITAIN.

Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, Gives Away Another Charming Daughter.

Queen Victoria, the Bride's Grandma, Attends the Ceremonials in the Chapel Royal, Buckingham Palace—Gladstone and Chamberlain Occupied the Same Pew when the Sprigs of Royalty were Made One—It was a Popular Wedding, and the British People Showed Their Good Will.

London, July 22.—Princess Maud of Wales, youngest daughter of the Prince of Wales and granddaughter of Queen Victoria, was married to-day to Prince Charles of Denmark, son of the Crown Prince and grandson of King Christian IX. of Denmark. The ceremony took place in the Chapel Royal, Buckingham Palace. The west end was profusely decorated with flags, flowers, etc., and there was a conspicuous blending of the British and Danish flags. The Life Guards and the Coldstream Guards lined the route from Marlborough House to Buckingham Palace, and crowds of people, mostly ladies, were gathered in the vicinity of the Palace, awaiting the arrival of the procession.

A cavalcade of heralds and equerries escorted the bridegroom, who was accompanied by his parents, the Crown Prince of Denmark and Princess Louise, and his brothers Christian and Harold.

The Prince and Princess of Wales and all of the Queen's children, with their families, were in carriages, except Princess Beatrice of Battenberg and her children, who were absent on account of their mourning for the death of Prince Henry of Battenberg. The Queen passed quietly into the chapel from Buckingham Palace. The ceremony took place at 12.30 o'clock. The weather was sunny and in every way pleasant.

Princess Christian and Harold supported Prince Charles, and the bridesmaids were Princess Victoria of Wales, sister of the bride; and Princesses Ingeberg and Thyra of Denmark, sisters of the bridegroom; Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, Princesses Patricia and Margaret of Connaught, Princess Alice of Albany and Lady Alexandra Duff, daughter of the Duke of Fife and Princess Louise of Wales. The Most Rev. Edward White Benson, Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of all England, officiated, assisted by the Bishops of London and Winchester. The Prince of Wales gave the bride away.

After the ceremony the bridal party and guests partook of luncheon in Buckingham Palace, at the conclusion of which the Royal bridal party, headed by the bride and bridegroom, left the Palace in carriages for Marlborough House. The party left the Palace at 2.45 p.m., and took the route via Piccadilly and St. James-street, both of which were beautifully decorated. All of the houses were draped with flags, bunting, etc., and there was a profusion of flowers. The streets were lined with sightseers and the windows of the clubs and other buildings along the route were filled with people, mostly ladies.

The bridal couple afterwards left Marlborough House for St. Pancras Station, where they took a special train for Wolferton, Norfolk, to take possession of Appleton Hall, which will henceforth be their home.

Among the wedding guests were the members of the Cabinet and the members of the diplomatic corps. Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone occupied the same pew with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain during the ceremony in the Chapel Royal. Vast crowds lined the streets and cheered the bridal procession as it was returning from Buckingham Palace to Marlborough House, the London residence of the Prince of Wales.

Princess Maud's bridal gown is of ivory satin. Royal customs differ from those of plain folk in that they permit a wedding gown to be cut decollete and with short sleeves. About the square decolletage are soft folds of mousseline de soie, delicately entwined with trails of the proper bridal flowers, which are orange blossoms, jessamine and myrtle, with an occasional glossy dark green leaf.

At both front and back the satin of the bodice is drawn in folds to the left side, where it forms a deep ceinture elaborately embroidered in silver and brilliants.

The sleeves are short puffs made of sheerest white chiffon, with lines of the bridal flowers drawn down between them. The skirt is, of course, plain, and hangs in deep, lustrous folds. About the bottom is a deep rouche of chiffon, with the trio of delicate flowers. The train is part of the skirt and is four and a half yards in length. It is fastened at the left side with bouts of chiffon and trains of the fresh flowers.

Another departure from ordinary custom is the wearing of the bridal veil away from the face, as royal brides are privileged to do. It is of rarest old lace, and was very becoming.

BETTER BE PREPARED.

We May Expect Rainy Weather—You'll Need a Waterproof Coat.

So far as the weather is concerned, it may be truly said that there is nothing so certain as uncertainty. Having this in mind, should you not provide for the rain which is to be expected every day? The best way to do this is to go to W. & D. Dineen's and purchase one of the sample waterproof coats now being sold at seventy-fifty and ten dollars. These are the remaining coats of a manufacturer's stock of samples. Every one was made by one of the best English makers; they are perfectly waterproof and odorless. All seams are sewn, and the coats are covered by a guarantee. They will wear well, and at the prices asked are remarkably cheap, being half the prices asked by those who retail the same coats regularly. There is also a fine line of English umbrellas at the big hat store. These are selling at one dollar and ninety cents, though they are regular three-fifty umbrellas. If you are not ready for rough weather drop into Dineens' and you will be fixed for any kind of a storm. Dineens' hat and fur store, King and Yonge-streets.

WAS MATE BRANE'S MOTIVE ROBBERY?

Young Monck, the Passenger, Relates the Story of the Crime.

Only His Revolver Saved Him From Being the Fourth Victim—The Suspected Mate Washed His Bloody Clothing and Wanted to Throw the Bodies Into the Sea—How the Plucky Colored Steward and Monck Chained the Mate, Who Was Attempting to Steer the Craft Towards South America—Is Brane a Crank With a Mania for Murder?

Halifax, July 22.—The intense excitement of yesterday occasioned by the tragic news brought into port by the barque Herbert Fuller, the arrival of the bodies of the three victims and the arrest of all on board, continues to-day. The streets around the police station where those in custody are held are filled with people nearly all the time. The body of the second mate, August Brandburg, will be interred at Campbell Cemetery to-day. The remains of Captain Nash and his wife have been sealed up and await the arrival of the captain's brother, who will be here to-night.

The Magistrate's investigation of the horror, ordered by Examiner Finn, will begin to-day, and the handing over of those involved to the United States authorities will probably occur immediately after.

What Leslie Monck Says.

The story that Leslie Monck, the passenger on the Herbert Fuller, will tell on the stand will be substantially as follows: When Mrs. Nash's scream awoke Monck he realized that something was wrong, and put his clothes on. Then he loaded his revolver and went out in the companion way. He did not see any person as he emerged from his room. Then he took a look in the chart-room and saw the captain lying on the floor, and he also observed blood. He thought that some mishap had befallen the captain, and went forward to call the captain's wife to render assistance to her husband. On reaching the room a horrible and sickening sight met his gaze, as he observed the body of the captain's wife horribly mutilated. It then dawned on him what had happened to the captain, and he hastily proceeded to the second mate's room, only to find that he, too, had been murdered. Monck now trembled with fear, as he did not know what to do or how many of the crew were implicated in the tragedy. At first he started aft, and was about to go on deck, but a second thought struck him that the murderers might be waiting for him to come up and kill him, so he retraced his footsteps and went up the forward companion way. No sooner had he placed his head above than a billet of wood was hurled at him by Mate Brane.

Begged Monck Not to Shoot.

Monck levelled his revolver at him, and the mate begged him not to shoot, but to spare his life. Monck was sus-

She Didn't Know Pupa.

A well-known civil servant at the Parliament buildings, residing on Crawford-street, figured in a remarkable case of mistaken identity recently. For many years he had sported a liberal growth of beard, which was his pride and joy. The other day he had it shaved off and hastened home. Upon arrival at the door he was met by his little daughter, who refused him admittance. He tried to force an entrance, and the little girl began to cry. She finally became overwhelmed with terror, and, her mother being out, she rushed out on the street and told a policeman that a tramp or burglar was robbing their house. The officer hastened to the house, where by this time a crowd had congregated and proceeded to cross-examine the supposed intruder. The latter affirmed that he knew of no intrusion. By this time it began to dawn on the curious spectators that they had been sold, and their snickering caused the arm of the law to tumble to the huge joke. The bystanders hastily dispersed, the policeman sneaked off, and the little one was soon in her father's arms.

The Paper to Advertise in.

A. W. Ross & Co. advertised the prospectus of the California Mining Company in Tuesday's World only, and yesterday's mail brought them a host of enquiries. The World circulates all over Ontario, and is read by everyone in Toronto. It also goes to all the leading men and business houses of the Maritime Provinces and the Northwest. We believe The World's circulation is larger than that of any morning paper in Canada, and not only that, but that the quality or class of people who take it and read it are the most enterprising and progressive people we have.

The World's subscription lists, circulation books, press room, etc., are open to the inspection of anyone.

One of Many Letters.

Toronto World: I have been a regular subscriber of your interesting and independent paper for about 12 years. It is said, "As we read, so we think." But, as The Toronto World reads more nearly like I think on the political questions, especially on the trade question, than any other paper I have read, I have resolved to renew my subscription for another year.

Want to Change Their Name.

One of the stories going about is that the Thomson family are to apply to the Legislature to change their name to Eaton, and that Willie will ask to have his given name changed to Timotheus.
