THE KOZSTA AFFAIR.

Some excitement is likely to grow out of the demand made by Austria on the United States for reparation in the case of Kosta, the Hungarian refugee, who was seized by the Austrian authorities at Smyrna, and subsequently demanded by Com. Ingham, on the ground that he was an American citizen. The demand of Austria receives the sanction of England and France, and has already been made public. To this demand, Mr. Marcy, the United States' Secretary, has replied in a letter of no ordinary ability, stoutly maintaining the right of his Country to protect Kozsta, and justifying the course pursued by Com. Ingham. The result of this affair will no doubt cause considerable sensation on both sides of the Atlantic; and from the facts already elicited, we think that the American Commodore performed a meritorious act in releasing the unfortunate Hungarian from the cruel persecutions of his enemies.

The following is the substance of Secretary Marcy's letter, which has been telegraphed to the Boston journals.—

Kozsta is claimed as an American citizen unlawfully seized by the Austrians. In reply to the demand of Austria that the United States government shall direct Kozsta to be delivered to that government, that it shall disavow the conduct of the American agents in the Smyrna affair, and tender satisfaction for that outrage, Mr. Marcy enters into an analysis of the doctrine of allegiance, and contends that the conflicting laws on that subjet are of a municipal character, and have no controlling operation beyond the territorial limits of the country exacting them; that neither of the parties to the question in dispute has the right to appeal to its own municipal laws to settle the matter in dispute, which occurred in the jurisdiction of a third independent power; that neither the Austrian decrees nor American laws can properly be invoked in this case, but the international law furnished the rules for a correct decision, and by the light from this source shed upon the transaction at Smyrna are its features to be discerned. Kozsta being beyond the jurisdiction of Austria, her laws were entirely inoperative, unless the sultan of Turkey has consented by treaty stipulations to give them vigor within his dominions.

Mr. Marcy, after defining the law of nations, bearing on the subject of allegiance, contends that to surrender political offenders like Kozsta is not a duty, but on the contrary would be a dishonorable subserviency to a foreign power, and an act meriting the reprobation of mankind.

He then refers the Austrian minister to the refusal of Turkey in 1849 to surrender the Hungarian refugees on the demand of Austria and Russia, a refusal which the civilized world justified and commended, and which those two powers eventually acquiesed in, without imputing to Turkey a breach of her duty or a violation of their rights. Kozsta was one of these refugees, and his case was then fully discussed, not only by the parties, but throughout Europe, and decided against the right of Austria to require any extradition, either under the law of nations or by existing treaty stipulations; the justice of this decision was admitted by the rulers, statesmen, and people of every country, and the Sultan commended for the firmness and humanity of his course.

Mr. M. then alludes to the claim put forth by Austria to seize Kozsta by virtue of certain treaties which subjects Austrian subjects in Turkey to consular jurisdiction; he doubts the existence of any such treaties, and gives cogent reasons for so doing.

UNITED STATES.

(From the Halifax Daily Sun.)

The Packet Brig Belle, from Boston, arrived on Tuesday evening. We have Boston papers of Saturday, from which we glean the intelligence following:

"We learn," says the Houston Telegraph of the 16th ult., "that much excitement has been created on the western frontier by a report that the Mexicans were preparing to attack some of the frontier posts.

"The west bank of the Rio Grande is literally lined with troops, and it was supposed not less than 15,000 Mexican troops are now stationed in the towns of the Sierra Madre."

A correspondent of the Matagorda Tribune adds the following as a postscript to a letter, dated San Antonia, August 25:

"I have just learned a piece of war rumor that may be interesting to your readers. Instructions have been received here by the Quartermaster to make immediate preparation for the reception and accomodation of 10,000 United States troops—some say 20,000. This movement has been induced by the warlike attitude of Mexico. Santa Anna is rapidly recruiting his forces, and it is pretty well ascertained, upon good authority, has already a large army in process of organization. We have every reason to believe that the demonstrations are not pacific. Rumor is rife here that he makes the immediate invasion of Texas as a matter of no concealment. The Mexicans here believe the report."

In reference to this, however, the Tribune makes the following plausible observations:

"There remains no question of the fact that he has already raised a large army, and put them in motion for his northern frontier; but that he is preparing for an invasion of the United States is rather too doubtful a suggestion for our credulity. Santa Anna is accorded too much discernment by those who know him for any such erratic movements. He has intestine enemies to contend with, and he is preparing to put their noses to the grindstone, and carrying out the oppressive measures of his own ambition, and indomitable will at the point of the bayonet. The Northern States are suppressing disaffection, and he is determined to teach them obedience. Camargo, Monterey, Matamoras, and other towns adjacent to the lower Rio Grande, are bristling with his bayonets, while higher up, near the Presidio road, a heavy army of 30,000 men is said to be on the march. Our own Government, being apprised of these movements, began to prepare for an emergency. All the troops from the available Indian outposts in the vicinity have been ordered to rendezvous to San Antonio immediately. Several companies had arrived there before we left.—Some twenty companies from the different military stations in the Atlantic States have also been ordered to San Antonio, and it is generally believed that there would be between 6000 and 8000 troops quartered in that city in the course of a few weeks."

Montreal Riot Trials.—Gen. Rowan, acting Governor General of Canada, fearing possible disturbance during the trials at the next criminal term of the Court of Queen's Bench in Montreal, has sent for two hundred pensioners from Quebec.

CHINA.

Some of the books issued by the Chinese insurgents, who have embraced Christian doctrines, prove the remarkable correctness of many of their views, though unhappily there is much error mixed with the truth. In the Digest of their books made by the Rev Dr. Medhurst, are the following prayer, Doxology, and version of the Commandments:—

"I, A. B., kneeling down with a true heart, repent of my sins, and pray the Heavenly Father, the Great God of His abundant mercy, to forgive my former sins of ignorance, in repeatedly breaking the Divine commands, earnestly beseeching Him also to grant me repentance and newness of life, that my soul may go to Heaven, while I from henceforth truly forsake my former ways, abandoning idolatry and all corrupt practices, in obedience to God's commands. I also pray that God would give me His Holy Spirit to change my wicked heart, deliver me from all temptation, and grant me His favor and protection, bestowing upon me food and raiment, and exemption from calamity, peace in this world and glory in the next, through the merits of our Saviour and Elder Brother Jesus, who redeemed us from sin. I also pray that God's will may be done on earth as it is done in Heaven. Amen."

On Sundays the following Doxology is to be said or sung:—

"We praise Thee, O God, our Heavenly Father;

"We praise Jesus, the Saviour of the world;

"We praise the Holy Spirit, the sacred Intelligence;

"We praise the Three Persons, united as one true Spirit."

The above is followed by a verse of a hymn, viz.:—

"The true doctrine is different from the doctrine of the word;

"It saves men's souls and affords the enjoyment of endless bliss;

"The wise receive it at once with joyful exultation;

"And the foolish, when awakened, understand thereby the way to Heaven.

"Our Heavenly Father, of His infinite and incomparable mercy,

"Did not spare his own Son, but sent him down into the world,

"To give his life for the redemption of all our transgressions.

"When men know this and repent of their sins, they may go to Heaven."

Then follow the Ten Commandments:—

1. "Worship the great God.
2. "Do not worship degraved spirits.
3. "Do not take God's name in vain: His name is Jehovah.
4. "On the seventh day is the Sabbath, when you must praise God for His goodness." (Their Sabbath occurs on the same day as our Sunday.)
5. "Honour father and mother.
6. "Do not kill or injure people.
7. "Do not commit adultery or practice any uncleanness." (Under this command opium or foreign tobacco is forbidden.)
8. "Do not steal.
9. "Do not lie.
10. "Do not covet."

FRANCE.

By order of the Prefect of Police, a strange ordinance relative to servants of both sexes has been placarded in all parts of Paris. It declares that all servants, male or female, who are now in service at Paris, or who intend taking service there, must, within the delay of three months—that is from the present time to November 1st—provide themselves with a livret, or book, for their masters to mark down their opinions of their honesty, conduct, time of service, &c., under pain of subjecting themselves to an imprisonment of not more than three months, or not less than a week. This livret, which is to contain their names, age, birth-place, and description, will be delivered, on personal application, at the Prefecture of Police. It is interdicted to all masters to receive into their service any servant who is not provided with such livret. All such servants as do not conform to the prescription of this ordinance are to be expelled from Paris.
