SATURDAY EVENING, JUNE 6.

The City Election.

The result of yesterday's vote in this City shows the wisdom of having placed a respectable candidate on the ticket with Mr. Wedderburn, instead of listening to the counsels of those unscrupulous party wire-pullers who did their level best to have a man selected solely on account of his supposed "popularity with the boys" and then announced their readiness to reopen the nominations for the purpose of getting Mr. Keans off the ticket. We declared, at the time, that the principles for which the contest was to be professedly waged would be disgraced by the selection of any man who was not a fitting representative of them, and demanded a respectable candidate. That demand was complied with when Mr. Keans was placed on the ticket, and the electors have shown that, when a public question is at issue, that they do not require to be fed on personal-popularity-pap, but may be safely trusted to vote for men solely on account of their ability, character and political principles. The vote thrown for Mr. Keans, considering that it was a triangular contest in which Mr, Wedderburn's success was conceded by everybody from the start, is unprecedented in St. John, and shows conclusively that, if there had been two opposition candidates, Mr. Wedderburn would have led his so-called unpopular colleague by but very few votes. Mr. Marshall's whole canvass was directed against Mr. Keans, ballots issued in his interest coupled his name with Mr Wedderburn's, and yet Mr. Keans was only one hundred and sixty-seven votes behind Mr. Wedderburn. Mr. Marshall's canvass against Mr. Keans was solely on account of the conviction that Mr. Wedderburn was sure. Some of the oldest local politicians were offering to bet, while the ballots were being counted, that Wedderburn would lead Keans 500, and any amount of money would have been staked on his leading 200, 300 or 400. The result shows that they were all at fault, and that they had a new lesson to learn in regard to this constituency—the lesson that people do not always vote on personal grounds, or that they do not need to be fawned on by really able men who are properly presented to them as standard bearers of their political principles. We hope this lesson will be remembered, so that, for all time to come, the mere personal popularity that is obtained from being hail-fellow-well-met with everybody may not be deemed the only qualification required by a candidate.

Somebody accounts for the greatness of the majorities given for the Government candidates by saying that the people were made to believe that their free schools were somehow in danger of being overthrown. The assertion is true, as far as it goes. The people believed that the free schools would be endangered by the defeat of the Government, feared that the free-school professions of the opposition candidates were false, and sunk all personal preferences, society affiliations, by-road and bridge grievances and local preferences in behalf of the whole ticket. Nothing less potent than such an idea could have secured such a result. The idea, therefore, that people desire to go back to the old educational system, that they are tired of taxation for an expensive educational system, has been effectually exploded. They have declared, also, that they do not want the system cheapened by banishing advanced studies from the schools. Mr. Marshall's decisive defeat shows that the greatest majority are ready to be taxed for Greek and Latin tuition in the public schools They have followed all the precedents furnished by the neighboring Republic, where States are continually increasing educational endowments, and cities and towns are constantly taxing themselves more for the support of schools than the law requires.

Repeal is dead and buried for all time. Separate Schools can be obtained only by strategy or as a favor, never by open warfare.

Next week there will be elections in five Counties—in Gloucester on Monday, in Queens on Wednesday, and in Northumberland, Charlotte and Albert on Saturday. These Counties return fourteen members, and the Government party count on electing ten of them, Gloucester being already lost and two seats being allowed for probabilities of defeat in other Counties.

Dr. Vail's Suicide.

At the inquest on the remains of Dr. W. E. Vail, Jr., of Sussex, Oliver Friars gave the following testimony:

I went into the office of the deceased and spoke to him of the noise he was making. He clinched me as if wanting to wrestle. I evaded him, telling him he was the best man. He then shut the doors and locked them, and I think put the keys in his pocket, and said, now you have got to stay with me an hour or two. He proposed we should take a drink, and brought out a bottle of gin. I drank and think deceased did the same. He then sat down on the floor, pulled his rifle towards him and said: "I can't go to England this year, but I will go to Canada and beat them." He put his hand out and took from his desk a package of cartridges, undid them, put one in the rifle and the rest in his pocket, and began pointing his rifle round. I warned him of the old adage, that it might go off even if not loaded. He then lay on his back again. It was between daylight and dark—about half-past eight. I bent down and took the cartridge out. He heard the click, rose up and said "What are you doing; that is loaded. I said yes. He discovered I had taken the cartridge out. He put another in. He said: "Oliver, if I were to shoot myself would you say good bye." He raised himself up again. I said or was about to say, Doctor Will, look out, when I heard the explosion and his shattered brains striking the wall. I then gave the alarm.

Cross-examined: I had often seen him flourishing with his rifle, but never as on this occasion. Had I have thought he was going to destroy himself, I might have prevented this sad affair. The deceased was what I should call half or two-thirds the worse of liquor. I have no doubt the accused intended to do what he did do.

John Ryan, M. D., gave evidence, but no further facts were elicited.

Some other witnesses were examined, after which the jury brought in a verdict that the deceased died by his own act.

Nova Scotia News.

At Bridgewater, on Wednesday, Stanley Dawson, aged three years, died from the effects of having accidentally fallen into a tub of boiling water.

An attempt was made on Thursday last to burn the hay shed at Falmouth belonging to the Windsor and Annapolis Railway, containing at the time about forty tons of hay. The plot failed.

Wednesday morning, James Purcell, branch pilot, accompanied by his son and two other lads, started off from Camperdown to board a steamer, the smoke of which was seen in the distance, and have not yet returned. It is feared that they have met a watery grave.

John Flinn was found dead on the shore of Magaguadavic Lake on Friday last. An accidental discharge of his gun, the contents of which entered his head, was the cause. The wife and family of the deceased reside in Fredericton.

We would be glad to know what Venus thinks of all these preparations for observing her transit. If she is anything of a modest female it must be extremely harrowing to her feelings to be squinted at through spy-glasses from all corners of the earth. Suppose you had a transit, Mrs. Grundy, wouldn't you grumble at that sort of thing?

A recent transaction in the criminal court of Memphis illustrates the spirit of barbarism and lawlessness which yet prevails on some of the Mississippi steamers. Henry Powers, acting captain of the steamer Clarksville, was arraigned for the lynching of a Hebrew named Samuel Buhrman for alleged larceny of jewelry. Some jewelry being missing, Buhrman was suspected, and was swung up three times with a rope to extort a confession. To save his life he said that he had stolen the articles and thrown them overboard. He was then put on the Mississippi shore, his hands tied behind him. Buhrman, who is the son of an insurance agent in Louisville, declares that he made the pretended confession from fear, and was innocent. Powers was held for appearance in the criminal court, and has also been arrested in a civil suit in which $100,000 damages are claimed.

A very eccentric newspaper man named James Johns recently died in Starkboro, Vt. He used to print with his pen and issue occasionally the Autograph and Remarker, and send his edition, which consisted of from one to half a dozen copies, to anybody he pleased. His work was very neatly done; he tried a printing press once, but didn't like it half so well as his pen, and so gave it up. He was very jealous of the fame of his sheet, and had no mercy on the man who said anything against it, or refused to exchange. Among his peculiarities was his abstinence from tea and coffee, and his feeling that he was grossly insulted if they were offered to him. The outrage of urging a man to take a cup of tea when at a friend's table was the subject of many a leader in the Autograph of twenty-five years ago.

The other evening two gentlemen paid a visit to a young lady in San Francisco. When they were about to take their departure one of them mistook an overcoat hanging on the hat rack for his own, and was about to put it on, when he felt something in the outside pocket, which he drew out and which proved to be a revolver. His friend was talking with the young lady and did not notice that the revolver was being handled. Suddenly a loud report reverberated through the house. The young lady fainted and was carried into the parlor by her father, who came from an adjoining room on hearing the report. They at first thought that the young lady was killed, but she revived before the physician came, and complained of her leg hurting her. On examination it turned out that the ball had struck her in the left leg, below the knee, inflicting quite an ugly but not dangerous wound.

An improved or rather newly-invented felted fabric has been brought to great perfection by English manufacturers. In London it sells at prices which make it the rival of woven fabrics for curtains, upholstery, bookbinding, and similar purposes. It can be made to imitate the solidity of Cordova leather, the rich brocaded silks of Lyons, the elegant cretonnes, Mulhouse, the purity and gloss of damask linen, and the magnificent paper of China and Japan. It is, in fact, a species of Japanese paper. It is as durable as any woven fabric, is impermeable, light and warm, and particularly applicable for curtains and quilts, and needs no washing. Its colors never fade, and it is so cheap that elegant curtains three yards long, ready made with bands, sewn and lined, range in price from a dollar to five dollars per pair. It has not yet been manufactured in sufficient quantity to meet the home demand, and therefore is not yet in the American market.

The Paris Figaro makes an amusing sketch of a Parisian reporter. The reporter is found everywhere where news is to be had, names to be mentioned, a scandal to be worked up or a festival to be described. Only this reporter likes to pretend that he goes to these places by reason of curiosity or invitations, and not for professional reasons. So what does he do? He arms his right hand with a microscopic pencil, and, without seeming to do so, he writes upon his left cuff the impressions which are to serve as the canvas for his descriptive arabesques. At first his washerwoman was surprised at the sight of this cuff, covered with hieroglyphics. It was a month before she understood the meaning of the text; then she became accustomed to reading the news of the week and accounts of races, concerts, etc., upon her patron's linen. She was heard to say the other evening, "I read yesterday on the cuff of 'my journalist' that the man with the fork was much better." The next day, having gone for the reporter's linen, she addressed him in this wise: "Your last washing was very interesting, only you do not give quite enough political news."

Some interesting testimony has been taken by the committee of the House of Commons to inquire into and suggest means to prevent the adulteration of food. Mr. Reeves, who has been connected with the tea trade for half a century, said that gypsum and Prussian blue were used to color green tea. He had never heard of any injury resulting from the coloring matter used. It was in his opinion as necessary to mix tea to render it palatable to the consumers in England as it was to fortify wine with brandy. There was no such thing as a natural green tea. He believed that adulteration of tea in England was carried on only to a very small extent, for he thought the tea would not stand it. He did not know of any instances where iron filings were made use of. His experience was that black tea coming from China was perfectly free from adulteration. Another witness said that tea did not grow in China as it was seen in England. The black was partly fermented before it was roasted, and the green tea was not so highly roasted. The Americans now gave a preferance to Japanese teas, which were uncolored.

The Contest Closed.

Another meeting was held in Smith's Hall last evening to hear from the newly elected City members. Dr. W. H. Tuck presided, and Messrs. Keans, Wedderburn, Elder, Willis, King and the chairman spoke. The remarks of all the speakers were well received by the large audience, and mutual congratulations were the order of the evening. The meeting broke up with three cheers for the Queen and three for the chairman. The election just closed was conducted on the most temperate principles of any election ever run in this City and County. During the two days a drunken man was scarcely seen on the streets.

Dramatic Lyceum Theatre.

Miss Eldridge was not greeted last evening with so good a house as her talents deserve. Her acting was much admired. This evening Miss Eldridge will appear as "Olive," and on Monday night Ada Gray will appear in "Article 47," a new and famous drama that has had a long run in the New York theatres. Ada Gray is a very popular actress.

One of our exchanges, speaking of her as Ruth Tredgett in "Charity," says:

The part of Ruth Tredgett, which Miss Ada Gray plays, is exacting in its requirements, and presents opportunities of which few actresses could avail themselves. There is in her assumption a rapidity of action startling to the audience. The idea is the softening and purifying influence of Christian charity upon even the least hopeful material which makes us accord her a great triumph in the conception of the character. Her recklessness of demeanor and expression in the first act are gradually modified, and manner, language, tone and appearance indicate the change which her new life is effecting. In point of force Miss Gray is unmistakably great, and her estimate of effect is excellent.

That Criminal Charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan were at the Police Court this morning to press the charge against John McCormack for criminal assault. Mrs. Vaughan looked unconcerned and quietly chewed gum, and her husband wore a don't-care look. McCormack sat quietly in the dock looking from the corner of his right eye at his prosecutors. The Magistrate asked Mrs. V. if she wished to prosecute McCormack for assault, and on her expressing a desire to do so she and her husband were taken to the private room to state their case. She walked in with a saucy shake of the head and her jaws moving up and down at a rapid rate. Her husband made three quick jumps, and gained the closet. After about two minutes the spectators heard Vaughan and his wife ordered out of the court room. She came out, chewing more rapidly than ever, and he clapped his hat on and got out of the way as soon as possible. The Magistrate came out and dismissed McCormack. Vaughan and McCormack were in the penitentiary together, and Mrs. Vaughan got acquainted with McCormack when she went out to visit her husband. The acquaintance thus so auspiciously begun, ripened to friendship when he was released, and the result was the visit to her on Thursday night. Vaughan was expected to be away for some time, but returned and found his old companion in his room. The position that Mrs. Vaughan occupied, according to her own story, did not confirm her assertion that she had been detained by McCormack against her will.

Another Case of Bronchitis Cured.

RIDGEWATER, N. S., March 2d, 1869

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS.

Dear Sir,—While in Windsor on a visit in December last, I fell in with an old friend—Capt. H. Coffill—and finding him looking so hearty and robust, was led to inquire what had produced the great change, for when I last saw him, two years previous, he was a mere skeleton. He informed me that your very valuable Syrup of Hypophosphites had effected a perfect cure. He persuaded me to try the Syrup for Bronchitis, from which I had suffered much during several years. I purchased one dozen of this Syrup, and have used only three bottles, and my health is now better than it has been for years. Not requiring the balance of the dozen, I sold it to different parties, and now there is a general demand for it from all parts.

Respectfully yours, W. J. NELSON.

Capt. H. Coffill was cured of consumption in 1869 by Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites; his letter was published some time ago.

Academy of Music Theatre.

Last night Mr. Warner played Hamlet to one of the most appreciative audiences, judging from the applause, of the season. His conception of the character, reading, and stage business, differed in many respects from those of other actors who have played the part here. His Hamlet has the merit of not being mystical. Nobody, even though a stranger to Shakespeare, is left in doubt of Hamlet's character and intents, as understood by Mr. Warner. The method in his madness is so plain, the cause of his procrastination so clear, and his real feelings towards Ophelia so transparent, that no one could have failed to understand. Mr. Warner's Hamlet is a clearly-defined perfectly sane man, the reason of whose every act is apparent, and the key-note to whose character is given in the "To be or not to be" passage. Miss Kellogg, as Ophelia, was the ideal personification of love without philosophy and madness without method—being the opposite of her lover in every respect. The managers should put "Hamlet" on again before the close of the season. "Macbeth" will be given to-night. Monday night Mr. Warner appears in his favorite role of Richard III., for his benefit, and the immense success that has attended the Shakesperian revival at the Academy will ensure him a full house.

Declaration Day.

The High Sheriff opened his court at 11 o'clock this forenoon to declare the result of the election for the City and County and City of St. John. There were very few present and the proceedings were void of interest. Geo. E. King, E. Willis, Joseph Coram, H. A. Austin, W. Wedderburn and W. H. A. Keans were declared duly elected to serve in the General Assembly. The Hon. Attorney General then moved a vote of thanks to the High Sheriff and his various officers in the different polling places for the pleasant manner in which the election had been conducted, and the efforts of the officers to make it agreeable to all parties. He paid a high compliment to the Sheriff. The motion was seconded by Mr. Wedderburn and passed unanimously. The company then separated, the elected members not being called on for speeches.

Mrs. McGowan (late of Claremont, Torryburn), now residing in Hazen street, is prepared to receive a few gentlemen as boarders on reasonable terms, and those desiring the comfort of a home cannot do better than secure accommodation with her. The house is beautifully situated.

Shipping Notes.

The Only Son.—It was not the Only Son of Advocate Harbor, but the Only Son of some other port, that was recently dismasted in the Basin of Minas.

Collision.—The schooner Ocean Belle, of this port, from Portland for New York, collided with the schooner Blyth, of Digby, N. S., off Cape Porpoise, on the night of the 3d inst. The former lost mainboom and 10,000 shingles, and the latter lost her bowsprit.

The Valparaiso Trade—The ship Lightning, now at this port, has been chartered to load dry white pine lumber for Valparaiso This is one of the ships built by the late Thomas Hilyard, and has had many encomiums passed upon her. She is 1637 tons register. She made 320 miles in 24 hours during a late passage, which is fast sailing.

The Maud Scammell, Capt. Thomson, also loads for Valparaiso. The cargoes of these two vessels will be furnished by Messrs. E. D. Jewett & Co. here. This business has grown to be a very lucrative and extensive one. Messrs. E. D. Jewett & Co. originated it, and have it almost solely to themselves. Both of these vessels are consigned here to Messrs. Scammell Bros.

Leaking.—The new barkentine Julia Fisher, which sailed from this port for Grenock, returned to port yesterday leaking. The leak was discovered when off Briar Island, and when she came to anchor in the harbor she had five feet of water in her hold. Her deckload is being discharged, where a defective tree-nail is supposed to be. The vessel only leaks when tacking.

Refused a Warrant.

Mary Ann O'Brien, the mistress of a well known house of ill repute in Britain street, applied this morning at the Police Court for a warrant to compel Charles Robbins to show cause why he did, last night, go to her house and do damage to the front door to an amount not exceeding $20. The Magistrate refused a warrant, as there had been a report made to the Chief of Police that the said Mary Ann O'Brien detained a young girl in her house contrary to the desire and wish of her parents, who live in the States. It is said that Robbins is the uncle of the girl, went to demand her, was refused admittance, and broke in the door. O'Brien was charged by the Magistrate with having enticed the girl away from her home in the States and refusing to give her up. The woman denied this, said the girl had been in her house only a week, and that she was brought to the city by her neighbor of the "Tree Elms, with whom she remained some weeks before she took up her residence with her. And she further stated that the uncle of the girl saw her a week ago, and that the girl refused to leave her house and go home with him. She said the man who broke her door was not the girl's uncle, but "another Yankee." The Magistrate directed the Chief of Police to inquire into the affair before he would grant any warrant, and expressed the opinion that any man is justified in breaking open a door to save a relative from leading a life of shame. The girl was in court with O'Brien, and was evidently contented to remain with her.

Portland Police Court.

The business was light this morning.

Margaret Ryan was arrested lying in an alley off Main street, and the police supposed she was drunk. She denied being drunk and, like the father of the American Republic, says "she can't lie." The Magistrate believed her, but to a second charge of vagrancy she could only plead guilty. She said she would like to enjoy fresh air and liberty a little longer before being sent to the penitentiary, but would present herself later in the season. Her novel plea secured her liberty.

Isaac Cowan was charged with abusive language to Patrick McManus. The charge was withdrawn, Mr. Cowan paying costs.

Michael Foley had the same charge to answer, at the suit of William Gantin, and also got off by paying costs.
