Journalist Dead.

London, April 5.—Geo. W. Smalley died here yesterday.

George Washburn Smalley was born in Norfolk County, Mass., in 1833 and was a graduate in Yale University and of Harvard law school.

For many years he was well known as a journalist and war correspondent.

Prisoners at the Bronx jail at New York rioted and, smashing windows, hurled their food to the street below.

Chancellor

forces; that Russian attacks against the front in East Galicia and Italian attacks against the Isonzo positions had been beaten back. Moreover, he said, the Russians had driven columns against the German lines, but their assaults had broken down before Field Marshal Von Hindenburg and his heroes.

The Chancellor declared that the reports of the enemies of this nation that the German military force had been expended were erroneous, as the Verdun battle has proved, that where preparations are made with great foresight and where the bravery of German troops is called into play one advantage or another is obtained.

The chancellor then expressed the nation's thanks to the soldiers and their leaders.

THE STARVATION PLAN

Discussing attempts which he said were being made to starve Germany, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg continued:

"I understood that in 1915 our enemies would not give up this hope, but I do not understand how cool heads, after the experiences of 1915, can cling to it. Our enemies forget that, thanks to the organizing powers of the whole nation, Germany is equal to the task of distribution of food supplies.

"Our enemies forget that in cases in which there is a real shortage, the German nation is able to make use of moral reserves which enable us to lower our standard of life, which has risen remarkably during the last decade. What would it mean, for instance, if the consumption of meat should temporarily be lowered to the level of the '70s? I should think our adversaries would remember how strong was the German race of those days."

ADMITS DIFFICULTIES.

Conditions of life in Germany were not easy, the chancellor continued, but the difficulties were being met in admirable fashion by the entire nation, especially the poorer classes. The crop reports indicated, he said, that all the winter crops were good, in fact the reports had not been so favorable for many years previously. The harvest of 1915 was the worst of decades; nevertheless the stocks of grain for bread-making not only would be sufficient but provided for a considerable reserve with which to begin the new year.

"We shall not run short of anything in the future, as we have not done in the past," he said.

The chancellor declared it was the intention of Germany's enemies to extend the war to the women and children of this nation by starving them, and that for this purpose Great Britain and her allies have interfered with the trade of neutrals.

"The American note of November 5, 1915, gave an exact description of British violations of the nation's laws" he continued, "but as far as I know, it has not been answered up to this day."

HAVE RIGHT TO DEFEND THEMSELVES

"No fair-minded neutral, no matter whether he favors us or not, can doubt our right to defend ourselves against this war of starvation, which is contrary to international law. No one can ask us to permit our arms of defense to be wrested from our hands. We use them and must use them. We respect legitimate rights of neutral trade and commerce, but we can expect that this be appreciated and that our right way and our duty be recognized—to use all means against this policy of starvation, which is a jeering insult not only to all laws of nations but also to the plainest duties of humanity."

CONDITIONS OF PEACE

The chancellor turned to the subject of eventual conditions of peace after a brief reference to the entrance of Portugal into the war. He pointed out that in his speech of September 9th, he had delivered a speech to enter into discussion of peace, but that then, as now, Germany's enemies declined.

"Let us suppose I suggest to Mr. Asquith to sit down with me at a table and examine the possibilities of peace," he continued, "and Mr. Asquith begins iwth a claim of definitive and complete destruction of Prussia's military power. The conversation would be ended before it began. To these peace conditions only one answer would be left, as this answer our sword must give.

"If our adversaries want to continue the slaughter of human beings and the devastation of Europe their's will be the guilt and we shall stand it as man."

CHANGE IN THE SITUATION.

The Chancellor introduced a personal touch in the following passage:

"When I was last at headquarters I stood with the Emperor at a place to which I had accompanied him one year previously. The Emperor remembered this and deeply moved pointed out the enormous changes that had taken place since that time. Then the Russians were on the ridge of the Carpathians. At Corlice we had just begun to break through the enemy's lines, and Hindenburg's powerful offensive had just been started. Now we are deep in Russia.

"The British and French at that time had attacked Gallipoli and were hoping to arouse the Balkans against us. Now the Bulgarians stand firmly on our side. Then we were engaged in the defensive Champagne battle, and now, at the Emperor's word, resound the cannon in the Verdun battle. Deep gratitude to God, to the army and to the nation filled the Emperor's heart."

NEW DEVICES USED BY HUNS AT VERDUN

Special Bombs, Steel Shields and Asphyxiating Hand Grenades.

"METHODICALLY" WRECKED HOUSES

Germans Come to Grips Behind Gas Cloud and Tear Off Respiratory Masks.

By Special Wire to the Courier.

New Pork, April 5—A special cable to The World from Paris says:

Portable minenwerfer, or minc-throwing engineers; bombs so heavy two men are needed to carry one of them, which are rolled down hill into the enemy's trenches; steel shields behind which soldiers equipped with asphyxiating hand grenades, and attempts to overcome the enemy by getting to close quarters with him, and under a cloud of asphyxiating gas, stripping off his respiratory mask are among the novelties introduced by the Germans in the recent fighting in the Douaumont and Vaux section.

The houses of the western part of the Vaux village, which since has been re-taken by the French were methodically pulverized in the attack last Sunday morning by "mines" hurled into each house at comparatively short range.

At one point, where the Douaumont height slopes sharply downward from the German to the French lines, bombs as big as medicine balls were rolled down hill and exploded against the parapet of the French trenches, ripping open mighty gaps in the earthwork.

GAS CLOUDS.

The testimony concerning the use of asphyxiating hand-grenades and gas clouds comes from a captain in a colonial infantry regiment, who was seriously affected by the gas. Incidentally, his is the first direct evidence that the Germans have used asphyxiating gas in the present phase of the Verdun battle. The captain, who is in hospital at Epernay, told the correspondent:

"We were holding a corner of the wood in the Vaux ravine when, just before dawn, after a terrific bombardment, I smelled the odor of chlorine which warned me the Germans had opened their gas cylinders. I gave the order to don goggles and masks and in a few minutes we were enveloped in opaque clouds.

"The artillery had ceased firing, but among the dense fumes, I distinguished ghostly forms, many of them protected behind steel shields, from the shelter of which they hurled hand bombs which I could see scatter asphyxiating fumes on exploding.

"Despite the barrier fire of our 75's some of these marauders managed to creep into our lines in the brown fog which covered everything. I detected three of them in a communicating trench listening to one of our listening posts.

"The first I finished off with revolver shots, but the second grappled with me, and before I could shake him off the third tore away my mask and goggles, and I fell suffocating to the ground. I recovered consciousness here in the hospital."

Remanded.

By Special Wire to the Courier.

Regina, Sask., April 5—Job Parsons Brown, former chief clerk of the roads branch of the highways department and Edward H. Devline, M.L.A., for Kinistino, were again remanded in the police court this morning, Brown's case until April 11, Devline's until the following day. The prosecution was not ready to proceed in either case.

The name of William Jennings Bryan has been removed from this season's list of Chautauqua speakers.

How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet in ½ glass of water. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

"A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."
