JUNIOR "SUPS" MAY BE TRIED IN LONDON

Important Announcement Made by the Department of Education at Toronto.

In place of having to go to Toronto to try on the supplemental junior matriculation examinations, London pupils will be able to try the examination at the Collegiate Institute here. A memorandum has been sent out to that effect.

The conditions are as follows:

1. The examination will begin Sept. 14.

2. Timetables will be sent to all candidates about Sept. 6.

3. Where local examinations are held the entire cost must be met by candidates at that centre.

4. The fees are: For subject or part of a subject, $2; for two subjects, $4; with a maximum fee of $5.

5. The official statement of marks from the educational department must accompany the application.

6. Application forms can be obtained from the principal of the Collegiate Institute.

7. The candidate will be expected to bear the additional expense of a presiding examiner.

Last year there were some twelve pupils trying this examination, nine of whom passed successfully. It is hardly likely that if these pupils had been compelled to go to Toronto that they would have tried the examination. There will be at least this number trying this year, and the fact that they can write on the examination at the local collegiate will be a great convenience.

Application for this examination should be made before Sept. 1.

INQUEST ADJOURNED

other cars bumping? A.—We didn't hear anything. When our car was struck was the first intimation we had of the accident. I had all I could do to get away. I was in between the cars handing Shirley a gosset.

How Shirley Was Killed.

Q.—Could you tell which end of that train struck you? A.—It moved from the east, and it was from that end it was struck. Shirley was stooping down connecting the air-brake. It went half a car length, after it struck him.

Q.—About how long had you two been doing that kind of work together? A.—About six weeks.

Q.—Were you cautioned when assigned that work to look out for accidents? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What was said in this regard? A.—Only what appears on the rule book. It says always to be on the lookout for danger. No special warning was given us. After our car was struck I went to see if Shirley was clear of the rails on the south side, and when I saw he was, I went to telephone for a doctor and the ambulance. This took a couple of minutes. When I got back he asked for a drink of water.

Q.—Did you notice if he was bleeding when you left? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was he bleeding when you returned A.—Yes, and there was blood around where he was lying.

Q.—Had anything been done to stop the bleeding before the doctor arrived? A.—Yes. Operator Sells and I tied both his legs above the cut.

"Were you in charge of a train going west?" asked Juryman Maker. A.—Yes.

Q.—Were you supposed to help make up the train? A.—We are supposed to report half an hour before the train leaves to the yard office and assist in making up if necessary.

Q.—Are the yardmen responsible for making up the train? A.—Yes; all but coupling the air. It is our duty to see that the air is coupled.

Q.—You were helping because you were late, were you not? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How long was the train? A.—There were about 40 cars when it was made up. We commenced at the rear end and had made three couplings when the accident occurred.

Coupling Cars.

"Was it a part of your duty to couple the cars?" asked one of the jurors. A.—We always do it.

Q.—Were you ordered to do so? A.—No.

Freight Agent Gordon, of the Grand Trunk, then asked:

"You know, do you not, the rule that the car inspector will couple, and that you will only see that it is done. You know that the coupling was not your business?" A.—Yes, sir.

Dr. Stevenson Testifies.

Dr. H. A. Stephenson was then sworn, and reported on the postmortem on the body of Howard Shirley.

After outlining the injuries, the doctor stated that he thought the death was due to hemorrhage and the shock. Mostly to the shock.

The trainmen, who had bound his feet, evidently knew their business.

"They had stopped the bleeding," said the doctor, "as well as we could have done it ourselves. Death was due, I think, to shock; he had really lost very little blood."

Dr. W. J. Stephenson was the next witness.

Q.—You assisted at the postmortem? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Do you agree as to the cause of death? A.—Yes. Shock principally.

Conductor's Evidence.

The next witness was John L. Atkinson, the conductor of the train on which Shirley was employed.

Q.—Whose duty is it to connect the airbrake? A.—The carman's.

Q.—What is the duty of the brakesmen going out? A.—To examine to see that the brakes are all right and help take the numbers.

Q.—How could they be tested if they were uncoupled? A.—They are tested from the engine after it is coupled up.

Q.—It is not the duty of the brakesmen to couple the cars? A.—It is not on the rules, but I have never known of a brakesman being forbidden to connect airbrakes.

Q.—It is not their duty when there is a car inspector in the terminal, when there isn't the brakesmen do it.

Q.—Do you know of any trains being made up when there was not an inspector present? A.—No, sir.

Q.—If you had been in Shirley's place, would you have known that there was a likelihood of these cars being shunted down on them? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Would they have known? A.—Yes.

Q.—It would be dangerous, wouldn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—The rules call for blue lights to protect men working under the cars? A.—Yes.

Q.—Were these blue lights used on that night? A.—No, sir. The brakemen didn't have them. The car men have these lights, but I have never seen any blue lights used when trains were being made up.

Q.—You weren't present at the accident? A.—No, sir.

To a question of one of the jurymen, the witness stated that he had done the same thing as the two brakemen had done many times, and still did it without being reprimanded for doing so.

Q.—Do the rules order you to do it? A.—We are ordered to assist when necessary.

Q.—Was it a violation of the rules for any brakeman to couple the air brakes? A.—No, sir. There is nothing in the rules forbidding it.

Operator's Testimony.

Preston C. Sells, the East End operator, said that he didn't personally know anything of the accident. He had, when advised of the mishap, gone down with Brakeman Prichett 800 feet east of Adelaide street crossing, where Shirley lay. Shirley was lying with his head facing eastward, clear of the rails.

"I asked him how did it happen, and he replied he didn't know. I tied his legs with the assistance of Prichett, and then went back to my work, as I had to do, and didn't see any more of the accident."

At this juncture the inquest was adjourned.

MOTHER INSTINCT NATURALLY STRONG

Kittens Taken in by Monkey Hen Raises Litter of Rabbits.

London, Aug. 26.—A touch of kindness makes the whole world kin, and certainly the instinct for motherhood is so strong in animals that some of them will bring up young which will be ultimately antagonistic to them.

One of the most familiar sights, of course, is the hen which hatches ducks. Far rarer, however, is such a sight as may be seen at the Prince Albert Inn, Guildford, Eng., of a hen which is acting as foster-mother of eight rabbits. The hen showed her partiality for them from the first, with the result that the mother has been ousted from her charge.

So jealous is the old bird that at the approach of anyone she spreads out her wings, and as the rabbits creep beneath them quite as naturally as a brood of chicks, and the rabbits' mother looks on at the proceedings unperturbed.

Another display of animal affection may be seen at the establishment of William Wilson, a well-known Glasgow naturalist. While alterations were in progress two kittens were added to the stock, the mother dying four days later, and it was found necessary to house many of the animals together, a female monkey found opportunity of access to the orphans and promptly carried them off.

Since then the kittens have been fed and cared for by their strange fostermother, with surprising results. The monkey's affection toward her charges is nothing short of wonderful. Should anyone dare to handle them she becomes dangerously incensed, clasping the kittens to her bosom lest she might lose them. A remarkable feature of the case is that the affection is mutual, the kittens being as much attached to the monkey as the monkey to the kittens. If they are removed from her they mew pleadingly till restored, and at the least sign of danger they fly to her.

Jack is the popular favorite of all passengers using Hurstbourne station, L. S. W. R., and any stranger alighting at that station is greeted by him, who sits on the platform with his paw extended. Jack calls at the booking office for the day's cash, which is placed in a bag, which he takes in his mouth and delivers to the guard of the Exeter train on the opposite platform.

There are also two remarkable cases where cats have adopted strange children. One cat is carefully rearing two fox cubs and the other is caring for two squirrels.

There is no greater obstacle in the way of success in life than trusting to something to turn up, instead of going to work and turning up something.
