could not avert the blow. In two or three days she died; her form was enchrouded and enclosed in the manner usual at sea, and amid the imposing solemnities of the burial service of the Church of England, committed to the deep. Up to this moment, Dr. Ingraham had done all that man could do; but he now drooped—he was first observed by the captain playing in the manner of a maniac with a string. The captain told him he had better go down in the cabin, and he would probably feel better. He did so but soon returned to the quarter deck, without speaking to any one. The captain told his children to go and speak to him, as it might arouse his attention. One of his little ones said to him, 'Father where is Ma?' 'Where is your Ma?' replied he, 'oh; she is putting on her gaiters, and getting ready to see her sister—we will soon see her now!' The truth flashed with fearful force upon the captain and all others around; they reason with him, too, had fallen. He took his bed, was removed to the Hospital at Staten Island on the arrival of the vessel, and every attention paid to him but without success.

"His three little girls were left at the Hospital, no one there knowing they had any relatives, and were shortly sent to Ward's Island. A vessel arrived at Quarantine, in which was a gentleman who had been desirous of taking a passage into New York, but had to wait for the next packet. On learning the melancholy fate of his family he communicated the intelligence to the sister of Ingraham, (a highly respectable lady named Edwards), to whom the news was sad indeed. Mr. E., her husband, applied for the children, and found them well taken care of, but in the Hospital yet. They have again a home. This is one of the many similar scenes attending passenger life."

EXTEMPORE PREACHING.

The Christian student must often, in the course of his Biblical reading, have been struck with the deep reverence, which Christ himself manifested, and which, He required to be paid by others to that temple of the Jews which was soon to be destroyed. And the inference which naturally follows from his serious manner in this particular is, that we, in like manner, should consider it our duty to evince the most profound respect for those temples—those houses of prayer in our own land which have been set apart and dedicated to the service of a God which shall not pass away, and this shall be no more. Let all, whether clergymen or laymen, who bear the name of Christians believe how they ought to preserve themselves reverently and humbly, of whatever rank or circumstances comparatively worldly in order to enter within the sanctuary of those sacred walls. It is not an question among the thoughtful and reflective, whether it behoves a church with his occupation of mind and heart, those of attention to the service of the day, then if they were in a place of common secular amusement. But it is not of these we would at present speak: the character and manner of public administration is the object of this paper, and it is to be lamented that many preachers by their culpable negligence of their overseeing self conceit, give but too much cause for the lukewarmness or inattention of their hearers.

If there be one position in the whole round of human action which more than another requires cautious preparation and sound wisdom combined with zealous effort, it is that of him who ministers to a congregation from the pulpit. To the pulpit the sin of commission is in danger of greatly exceeding that of omission, and therefore every word that is spoken, from that place, should be the more carefully weighed and considered. A preacher may have much zeal and earnestness, and yet when left to the impetuosity of his ever wrought feelings he may be guilty of saying much that is unsanctioned, and inconsistent, if not contradictory and unsupported by scripture. It is not enough to say that there are some men so collected and experienced, that they can safely permit themselves to deviate at times from the wide field of christian truth, because no human being however talented, can safely be trusted with a message so important as the preacher brings, without a written document before him to which he can refer. The only rational exercise therefore is to have the sermon carefully studied, even in the very pulpit, yet—as carefully written out, and then delivered exactly as it has been composed in the closet. Let it be otherwise,—let the discourse, or any part of it be left to the impulse of the moment, and how will the preacher justify himself, who in the moment of embarrassment or of excitement, mislead and confounds confiding hearers by the expression of sentiments or by language which deliberate study would have avoided! Yet where is the extemporaneous preacher, who has not on various occasions been guilty of expressions or modes of expression at which his audience have started, and which he himself would have avoided, had the more deliberate judgement he is brought into play. In the Church of England the rule is, for the Clergyman to write his sermon, and it is understood that he shall preach it as written, so that his Diocesan may at any time ascertain his doctrines or sentiment by calling, as he has a right to do for any particular discourse, so that he may thereby have any opportunity of judging of its propriety. The natural consequence of this very salutary rule is, that our national Church contains a body of preached divinity which will be sought for in vain among any other body of Christians whatever. Let this wholesome of current written wisdom and truth be stayed in its course, or give place to the stagnant sour mixtures of extempore preaching, and from that hour the living water of divine teaching which has flowed so long uncontaminated through the course of the Lord's House, shall cease to flow, the glory of the Church shall have departed from her, and the future shall only be characterized by a heterogeneous mass of crudities, misconceptions, and bombastic incongruities, which the sober Christian will deplore, and the learned scholar despise. The Church of England stands far above all the religious denominations which surround her in the treasures of divinity and biblical criticism with which she can supply the studious retirement of her pious children. It is not only that the Divine himself can equip himself from the armoury with the panoply necessary for the struggle he must maintain against the wickedness of a world lying in sin; but every humble Christian of whatever rank in life, has it in his power to employ his hours of meditation and solitude,—his moments of grief and despondency in the softening and soothing perusal of times that overflow with sentiments of correction for the proud, that abound in lessons of knowledge and instruction for the ignorant, that are full of argument for the reasoner, conviction for the sceptic, and consolation for every suffering follower of Christ. Such are the advantages—such the blessings which an accumulated body of divinity, chiefly arising from written sermons present to the Christian, all of which would have been lost, if indeed they ever had existed, had extempore preaching prevailed to any extent in the Church. And it may be confidently appealed to the convictions or the experiences of all sorts of Christians among whom extempore preaching is the rule, for the truth of the assertion, that such communities have their divinity chiefly from the Churches, that they are barren of internal biblical resources, and that their own extempore preachers are mainly indebted for such scriptural theology as they do possess to the inexhaustible treasures which they find laid up in the Church archives of the English establishment, without which they would be very poor and barren theologians. The written sermon having thus so many advantages the rejection of it could only have arisen, like standing during prayer, and sitting during the singing of the anthem, from a certain pragmatical, contradictious spirit, which prompts men to slight even in essentials for the mere sake of a difference, and to hold an opposite course, though it be wrong and contrary to their convictions, for the vain and silly purpose of creating a distinction. The written sermon is free to the very fullest extent of what is reasonable and desirable in a public speaker, particularly when the gravity of the subject and the solemnity of the place are considered. It checks extravagant action, coarseness of voice, violence of accent, and useless superfluity of diction. It preserves propriety of arrangement, chastenessof sentiment, and purity of doctrine, all of which, not rare excluding the last, are very often unconsciously violated by an extempore speaker. A written discourse gives full and free scope to argument without confusion and overloading the subject; it admits all necessary learning without the fear of inaccuracy on the one hand, or pedantry on the other: it may be made persuasive without being dictatorial, solemn without being wishing, and attractive without being theatrical.—And there is no faithful minister of Christ, who feels the importance of his mission, and the great necessity of accuracy in the language, and clearness of the statements by which he conveys the words of life to a Christian audience, that requires to hesitate whether he will or will not write his sermon. The written sermon will not prevent such a minister from speaking words of truth and sentiments of saving knowledge to his people, nor will it hinder him from cherishing those purified affections in the hearts of believing hearers, which will lead them to cling more and more closely to their Redeemer, until at last they become one with him in glory.—Toronto Church.

Dr. W. P. Syme's Pain Killer.

No medicine has been discovered that is so happily adapted to be internally as drops to be taken, and yet performs such wonder when applied externally, as a wash, bath, or by friction.

"THIS PAIN KILLER" may be used with a success that will astonish the beholder in such cases as the following:—Distressing Dysentry, Pains in the side and stomach Corns, Cuts and Bruises Cholera, Infantum Bronchites, Healing sores on man or beast.

Children Teething, Raising Blood, Hoarseness, Quinsey in a few hours, Chilblains and frosted feet, Spasms, prevent a Blister from Burns, broken Breasts, Measles, Cramps, burns, scratches or torn Flesh, bites or stings.

In very foul stomachs it may cause vomiting.—So much the better, the stomach will be cleansed and the next dose will settle the complaint.

CERTIFICATES to fill a volume might be published, showing the wonderful effects of the "Pain Killer" but they are too common, and used for articles of no merit. We insert but a few but they are to be depended upon;—

This will certify that I have used the "Pain Killer in my family for headache, toothache, rheumatism, dysentry, &c. and believe it to be a first rate medicine. JOHN P. SMITH.

Manchester, N. H

I have used the "Pain Killer" for burns, and found it applying it immediately, to prevent even a blister. I would recommend it to the confidence of the public. H. A. REEDE.

Editor of the Westfield Standard, Westfield.

I have been selling the Pain Killer for a few months past and find that it gives as good satisfaction as recommended. I have used it in my own family also, and believe it to be one of the best family medicines now in use. J. H. COTT.

Littleton, Mass.

This will certify that I have used the Pain Killer in my family for the last six months, and can safely say that it has proved the best family medicine I have ever used, especially for coughs, colds, burns bruises. I take pleasure in recommending it to the public. JAMES WILLIAMS.

Chloroform Toothache Drops.

It is well known that "CHLOROFORM" has superseded (in a great measure,) the use of Ether as an abatement of pain and is now used by the best Surgeons and Dentists in preference. A Celebrated Chemist, (and one of the first in manufacturers of Chloroform) has discovered that "Chloroform" with other simple preparations, will instantly cure the TOOTHACHE. After testing it in many cases has never failed to give instant relief; there is no possible danger in using it, as it will not injure the sound tooth a particle. All that is necessary in using these drops is to saturate well a bit of cotton or lint, and place it in the cavity of the tooth Relief will be immediate.

None genuine without the signature of Ross & Poole on the wrapper. Sold at No. 19, Tremont row, Boston, and by our appointed agents, S. L. Tilley, W. O. Smith, and J. H. Chipman, st. John, New Brunswick.

OBSTRUCTIONS OF THE LIVER, BILIOUS COMPLAINTS, DR. HALSEY'S GOLD AND SILVER PILLS.—Out of the "thousand and one" disorders which are the means of burrying mankind to their final doom, more than one half arise from obstructions in the liver. This important organ, when in a healthy condition, secretes the bile and blood, but, if unfit to perform its proper functions, excess of bilious matter accumulates—the worn out principle of the blood continues to the circulation, and like a sour but malignant poison, diffuses itself throughout the whole system, finally giving rise to some dreadful malady. It may break out in the form of some dangerous Fever or Liver Complaint, Jaundice or Rheumatism or Scrofula, or some prevailing epidemic; in fine, a morbid state of the liver stomach, and bowels, is the great cause which predisposes the system to every class of diseases.

DR. HALSEY'S GOLD AND SILVER PILLS are known to be the most excellent remedy in the world to bring the liver to the performance of its proper functions, and to cleanse from the stomach and bowels all vicid and putrid matter. When Dr. Halsey's Pills are resorted to when symptoms of sickness or excess of bile are comprehended, a vast amount of suffering would be prevented, and many lives saved, who otherwise, from the use of bad medicines would go prematurely to the grave.

As there are many bad pills in the market, the public should bear in mind that unless Dr. Halsey's signature is on the label of each box, they cannot be genuine, and that they are only for sale by D. G. Kinnear, 21 Dock street and at Dr. Halsey's office No. 2, Cortland street, New York. Price, only 25 cents for the box, containing both the Gold and Silver Pills
