MOONDYNE.

THE GOLD MINE OF THE VASSE.

Then, too, the strength faded from the limbs and the light from the eyes of Moondyne—and as he sank to the earth, the great Thought that had come to him filled his heart with peace—and he lay unconscious beside the dead.

The sun rose on the desert, but the sleeper did not move. Before the day was an hour old, other forms rapidly crossed the plain—not wanderers, but fierce, skin-clad men, in search of vengeance.

They flung themselves from their horses when they reached the scene; and one, throwing himself upon the body of the sergeant, sprang back with a guttural cry of wrath and disappointment, which was echoed by the savage party.

Next moment, one of the natives, stooping to lay his hand on the heart of the Moondyne, uttered an excited call. The spearmen crowded around, and one poured water from a skin on the face and body of the senseless man.

They raised him to the arms of a strong rider, while another took the reins, and the wild party struck off at a full gallop toward the mountains.

When Moondyne returned to consciousness, many days after his rescue, he was free from pursuit, he had cut forever the bond of the Penal Colony; above him bent the deep eyes and kind faces of the old chief and the sisters, Koro and Tepairu, and around him were the hills that shut in the Valley of the Vasse Gold Mine.

He closed his eyes again and seemed to sleep for a little while. Then he looked up and met the face of Te-manaroa kindly watching him. "I am free!" he only said. Then turning to the sisters: "I am not accursed;" and Koro and Tepairu answered with kind smiles.

THE SANDALWOOD TRADE.

I.

THE MATE OF THE CANTON.

It is midwinter, in a little Lancanshire village on the coast, not far from Liverpool. One quiet main street, crossed by three or four side streets, that lead in the summer days into the sweet meadows and orchards. One of these side streets has only three houses on one side, separated by goodly gardens. The house in the centre is the smallest, but it is extremely neat, and the garden fairly glows with color.

This is the home of Mrs. Walmsley, a widow; and the garden is looked after by herself and her daughter Alice, about sixteen years old. The house on the right of Mrs. Walmsley's belongs to Mr. Draper, the richest man in the village, a retired shopkeeper. The house on the left belongs to Captain Sheridan, a bluff old Irishman, retired from the Navy, and now Inspector of Coast Guards, whose family consists of his son and daughter—Will Sheridan, the son, being just twenty years old.

At the gate of Draper's garden, opening on the street, stands a handsome young man in the uniform of the merchant marine. He is Sam Draper, first officer of the Canton, arrived a few weeks before from China.

"Good-morning, Alice," he says in a cheerful but not a pleasant voice, as Alice Walmsley passes down the road.

Alice stopped and chatted lightly for a minute with her old schoolmate. Draper evidently paid her a compliment, for her cheeks were flushed as she entered her mother's gate, standing near which was young Sheridan, whom she slightly saluted and hurriedly passed, much to his surprise, for their relations were, at least, of the oldest and closest friendship.

"Alice," said Will, in a wondering tone, as the girl passed with her flushed face.

"Well—did you speak?" And she paused and turned her head.

Will Sheridan loved Alice, and she knew it, though no word had been spoken. He had loved her for years in a boy's way, cherishing her memory on his long voyages, for Will, too, was a sailor, as were almost all the young men of the village; but he was soon to leave home for a two years' service on Sam Draper's vessel, and of late his heart had been urging him to speak to Alice.

He was a quiet, thoughtful, manly young fellow, with nothing particular about him, except this strong secret love for the prettiest girl in the village:

"Yes, I spoke," he answered hesitatingly, as if wounded; "but perhaps you haven't time to listen."

"What is it, Will?" she said in a kindlier tone, and smiling, though before she spoke she saw with a side glance that Sam Draper had gone away from the gate.

"O, it isn't anything particular," said Will; "only there's rare skating on the mill-pond, and I was going there this afternoon."

"And—?" queried Alice archly.

"Yes—I wish you would," said Will, earnestly.

"Well, I think I will," she replied, laughingly, "though you haven't told me yet what I am to do."

"Why, go skating with me," said Will, highly pleased; "Sam Draper and his sisters are going, and there will be a crowd from the village. Shall I come for you at three?"

To be Continued.

"What we learn with pleasure we never forget."—Alfred Mercier. The following is a case in point. "I paid out hundreds of dollars without receiving any benefit," says Mrs. Emily Rhoads, of McBrides, Mich. "I had female complaints, especially 'dragging-down,' for over six years. Dr. R. V. Pierce's 'Favorite Prescription' did more good than any medicine I ever took. I advise every sick lady to take it." And so do we. It never disappoints its patrons. Druggists sell it.

Boston Produce and Lumber Markets.

[Hatheway & Co.'s Report, Aug. 21st.]

BUTTER.

The market continues very firm on high grades and 21 @ 22c can be more readily obtained for special brands of Western, but buyers are still cautious and will not pay any advance on the bulk of the stock. First and extra firsts are offering freely at 18 @ 20 ℔ ℔, and most of the Western come under that head. Northern creamery is generally held above the views of buyers and 21 @ 22c is only a nominal quotation. The best grades of imitation and ladle packed are a little more inquired for, but prices continue low.

Fine lots of Vermont and New York dairy move off pretty well, but ordinary quality is still slow. For the best Franklin County lots 17½ @ 18c can be obtained, but most of the sales come within the range of 15 @ 17c. We quote:—

Creamery—Northern and Eastern—
Extra	21	22
Extra firsts	19	20
Firsts	17	18
Western Creamery—
Extra	21	..
Extra firsts	18	20
Firsts	16	17
Northern Dairy—
Extra Franklin Co, Vt	17½	18
Extra N Y and Vermont	16½	17
Extra firsts	15	16
Firsts	14	14½
Seconds	12	13
Western Dairy—
Extra firsts	..	..
Firsts	12	13
Seconds	9	11

CHEESE.

The high prices paid in the country have necessitated an advance here, and extras are selling at 8½ @ 9c ℔ ℔. Some holders refuse to sell best stock at 9c, but this is an extreme quotation for large lots. The demand is fair, but buyers respond slowly to the advance. Liverpool quotation advanced 44s on Wednesday, but was down to 43s 6d yesterday. We quote:—

New York, and Vt., extra	8¾	9
do do firsts	8	8½
do do seconds	5	7
Western extra	8¼	8½
do firsts	7	8
Sage, extra	9½	9¾

EGGS.

There is no improvement in the Egg market. Demand continues light and prices are weak. Eastern extras command 17½c ℔ dozen, because they are not many offering, but firsts are not easy to sell at over 15c, and 15½c is an extreme price for best Provincial stock. Canadian are slow at 15 @ 15½c, and Western can be bought at 13 @ 13½c. All kinds shrink heavily. Ice-house stock not wanted. We quote:—

Aroostook Co, firsts	15	15½
Canadian, firsts	14	14½
New Brunswick, firsts	15	15½
Nova Scotia and P. E. I. firsts	15	15½

POTATOES.

There has been a fair trade in potatoes, with sales principally at $2 ℔ bbl. Car stock is beginning to come in, with sales of Rose and Hebrons at 60 @ 70c.

HAY AND STRAW.

There is not much change to note in the Hay market. The demand is moderate, with sales of choice Northern and Eastern at $18 @ $18 50 ℔ ton. Medium grades are quiet at $14 @ $17 ℔ ton. Rye Straw is selling at $15 @ $16 ℔ ton. We quote:—

Northern and Eastern—
Choice, ℔ ton	18 00	18 50

LUMBER.

Eastern has been in fair demand and prices are steady. Spruce and hemlock boards meet with a little better sale. Southern cargoes unchanged, with a fair yard trade. For western hardwoods the market is steadier, the excitement in regard to the failures having subsided and an improved business is expected.

A PLEASING DUTY.—"I feel it my duty to say," writes John Borton of Desert, P. Q., "that Burdock Blood Bitters cured my wife of liver complaint, from which she had been a chronic sufferer. Her distressing, painful symptoms soon gave way, and I can highly recommend the medicine to all suffering as she did."

A DANGEROUS CONDITION.—One of the most dangerous conditions is a neglected kidney complaint. When you suffer from weary aching back, weakness and other urinary troubles, apply to the back a Burdock Porous Plaster, and take Burdock Blood Bitters, the best system regulator known for the Liver, Kidney, Stomach and Bowels.
