CALLS ASQUITH'S ACTION AN INSULT TO CATHOLICS

Rev. Fr. Sprankling Thus Refers to Refusal to allow the Host to be Carried in Yesterday's Procession-What A Roman Catholic Organ Says About the Eucharistic Congress.

Rome, Sept. 14.—The Correspendica Roma, a Catholic organ, published the following communication, which evidently is inspired by the Vatican, concerning the carrying of the Host in the Eucharistic procession in London yesterday: The procession did not occur. Although regretting this omission, we wish to point out, and we appreciate the liberty and respect which surrounded the Eucharistic Congress under the shadow of the British flag. It has been said that the procession could not be allowed, as such processions are forbidden by a law passed in the Sixteenth Century. This is not a serious matter, as everybody knows that such a law like similar laws, became automatically obsolete through religious liberty granted later to British subjects.

A few Protestant societies, were merely the proverbial fly trying to drag the coach. Had the fly been alone the anti-Eucharistic coach of the sixteenth century would never have left the museum of religious persecution. What moved it was the efficacious intervention of certain politicians who depicted the procession as a manifestation disagreeable to the French "bloc" and thus hurtful to the interests of the Anglo-French entente, as to see the French prelates participate in London in this procession, an act which would send them to a prison in their sweet French country, would have given umbrage to Paris. For the same reason, the words of the Pope to the French Pilgrims on Monday were taken advantage of, the enemies of the church pretending that the pontiff had praised British liberty for the purpose of punishing at the pillory the small tyrants of Paris. These same persons urged the British government not to be the tool of the Vatican. The trouble is that in Monday's impromptu speech the Pope merely paraphrased the words of Archbishop Aix, the leader of the pilgrimage, who himself compared British liberty with what he termed French tyranny. Thus the Popes words were distorted, first in Paris, and then in London.

Nevertheless, the Eucharistic Congress remains a glorious memory for the Catholic world, as well as a proof of British liberty and hospitality. The omission of the procession will serve to show to the public from which quarters come directly or indirectly all sectarian declarations against the Catholic Church."

London, Sept. 14.—It is evident that the Catholics, because of the refusal to permit the Host to be carried in the procession yesterday, consider that they have been badly treated. Father Sprankling, administrator of St. George's Catholic Cathedral in this city, in all the masses yesterday referred to Premier Asquith's action as one that would go down to posterity as an insult to millions of Catholics.

Cardinal Vannutelli, in an interview, after the procession said: "It has been an admirable affirmation of faith and sympathy which will not easily be forgotten by those who witnessed it. The remonstrations of sympathy came spontaneously, and were well accepted by all non-Catholics, who, by their demeanor, protested against the attempts of the artificially conducted, to foment hostility against our pacific reunion. If those who solicited and obtained the prohibition to the carrying of the Sacrament intended to inspire the faithful with greater enthusiasm they can boast that they have succeeded even beyond their expectations."

The London morning papers in their editorials, take the line in most cases of careful avoidance of anything calculated to fan the flames of the controversary, and they consider "alls well that ends well." Nor is there any attempt to make political capital of the incident, beyond some expressions of regret at the delay in making the government's views known. Several of the papers frankly call for the repeal of the obsolete laws which caused the trouble and strongly deprecate the fanatical attitude of the Protestant societies.

The Daily Telegraph strongly denounces the weakness of the government and its irresolution, and its subsceptibility to the clamor of a few extremists. It congratulates the Catholics on the calmness and dignity with which they bore the bitter disappointment. Some of the government organs greatly regret that the premier yielded to fanatics instead of boldly declining to interfere.

The Times in an editorial says that the government blundered conspicuously in the Eucharistic affair, and that hardly ever has there been correspondence in which the British prime minister was seen to such disadvantage. A recurrence of these difficulties, says the Times, cannot be safely permitted and the time seems to have arrived for the advisability of putting all religious bodies on terms of equality.

EXHIBITION CROWDS ARE ALREADY POURING IN AND MANY VISIT FAIR GROUNDS

As Far as a Complete Show is Concerned Today Marks the Real Opening of the Exhibition---Everything is in Shape Now---Cattle and Poultry Shows are Largest for Years.

Today marks the real opening of the exhibition so far as a complete show is concerned. All exhibits are now complete and the noise and bustle of the opening night are things of the past.

The weather in the early morning created some uneasiness but as it cleared and the sun came out the grounds assumed an appearance of great activity.

The live stock exhibits are now complete. All the cattle pens are filled, extra pens are being built along the southern side of the grounds for the overflow in the sheep classes which could not be accommodated in the regular space.

At the poultry house, also, carpenters are at work building an addition to the front of the building as there is not enough room inside to care for all the entries.

It is a bewildering noise and clatter that greets the visitors to this part of the big show as the hens, geese ducks and turkeys keep up a constant uproar.

The class of cattle shown this year is far above the average, many very large and wicked looking steers being on exhibition.

Among these exhibits newspaper men will be interested to note that J. Fred Payne, formerly on the staff of the daily Sun has a handsome big bull which weighs above the 400 mark. Mr. Payne now runs a prosperous farm at Oromocto.

Judging from the way the people were pouring into the big building and on the grounds this morning the attendance figures of the last fair will be eclipsed. Trains arriving this morning brought large numbers from outside the city and at noon there was a very big crowd at the fair grounds.

The judging of cut flowers and potted plants was to have been commenced this morning but as the exhibits would not be complete until the afternoon the judging was delayed.

This morning the big tank in front of the grandstand into which the horses will dive at 3 o'clock this afternoon, was filled and everything is now in readiness for this big feature act of the show.

In the machinery hall, several new exhibits were added this morning and all were in operation, making it a place of great interest.

The carriage hall is now completely filled and contains a greater number of handsome equipages than ever before.

The progress of the yacht races on the harbor was followed by many people on the exhibition grounds an excellent view of the course being obtained from the green. The salmon boats looked very pretty as they sailed out toward the island with sails wing and wing before a fair wind.

The yachts which appeared shortly afterward with all canvas set and drawing well were a most interesting sight and hundreds of people watched the boats as they struggled for an advantage.

The Pike commenced operations in earnest about noon today. Every space has been taken and some very interesting attractions may be seen. The Mystic Maze and The Foolish House are two leading features, while in the freak line may be seen the smallest horse in the world, a little coal black animal, weighing only 30 pounds; a baby without arms or legs, and in a big tent to the right on leaving the Pike may be found a man with no legs, but with feet growing from his body. A strong woman, a tatooed man, a mind reader and a magician may also be found in this tent. The usual number of cane rocks, "soak the coon," "Take a chance for a prize for a dime," "Have your picture taken in an automibile," etc, etc., may be found.

Tomorrow morning the judging in the live stock classes will commence. Dr. Standish, who will judge the light horse classes, arrived on Saturday and started work this afternoon. The other judges will arrive on the evening train and all will be kept busy for the balance of the week, as the entries are very numerous and the competition will be keen.

The agricultural and dairy exhibits are now about complete, and these branches of the big show will be features of much interest.

Tonight everything will be running full blast and visitors are advised to secure tickets for the grand stand early, as there will likely a rush for good positions from which to view the grand pyrotechnic display and the diving horses.

Everything augurs well for a most successful attendance if the weather only contiues favorable.

CONFERENCE WITH MINISTER ON HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS

Ald. Elkin Makes Verbal Report on His Trip to Montreal to Look for Floating Elevator--Dr. Pugsley Agrees to Have Government Bear Part of Aboidican Cost.

Ald. Elkin who returned on Saturday from Montreal where he inspected several floating grain elevators with the view of the city acquiring one for use on the west side, made a verbal report this morning at a conference held with the minister of public works, the mayor and Ald. McGoldrick.

Ald. Elkin secured a good deal of detailed information about elevators at Montreal, Boston and New York and he will present a written report at a meeting of the harbor facilities committee to be held tomorrow.

It is understood that while there are several elevators available at Monthreal they were not of the most modern pattern and are not looked upon as a very good investment. At New York or Boston there are several vessels that are comparatively new. These would cost in the vicinity of $35,000 while the older vessels could be purchased for about $6,000 or $7,000.

No action was taken at this morning's meeting, it being left for the harbor committee to decide what should be done.

The matter of dredging at the Sand Point berths was also discussed this morning with G. S. Mayes and the harbor master in attendance. Mr. Mayes contended that he hal completed the work on his contract and this matter was also left for the harbor committee to deal with.

His Worship, the mayor, while driving about the city on Saturday with Hon. Mr. Pugsley and Hon. Sydney Fisher visited among other places the Marsh Bridge and the minister of public works informed the mayor that he would take the responsibility on his department of guaranteeing one-third of the cost of building the aboideau. Steps will be taken to have the work commenced as soon as possible.

MANY INJURED IN TRAIN WRECK TODAY

Chicago Suburban Train and Indianapolis Excursion Train in Collision--One Killed, Five Badly Injured and Twenty-Eight Slightly Hurt.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—One woman was instantly killed, five persons so seriously injured that their death is expected, and twenty eight other passengers were more or less seriously injured in a wreck on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Road early today, at Chesterton, a small town forty miles from Chicago. Shortly after midnight a suburban train from Chicago crashed into the rear end of an excursion train bound for Indianapolis from Chicago over the Lake Erie and Western, while the latter was standing at the station. The rear of the excursion train was badly wrecked.

Three women and two men seriously injured and unconscious, are in the hospital, still unidentified, and their death is possable. Most of the injured persons were from Indianapolis.

MARVEL OF SUSTAINED VITALITY

That marvel of sustained vitality Lord Strathcona, who is nearing his ninties, has, says the Westminster Gazette, just returned from the Quebec festivities, but he will be off again across the Atlantic in October to take part in the centenary of Simon Fraser, the Scottish fur-trader, who was the first to navigate the great salmon river of British Columbia which perpetuates his name and fame. This centennial celebration possesses a strong personal interest for Lord Strathcona, inasmuch as an uncle of his, John Stuart, accompanied Fraser.

BASEBALL PLAYER BECOMES INSANE

New York, Sept. 14.—A special to the Times from Philadelphia says: Sherwood McGee, star left fielder of the Philadelphia Nationals, last night was attacked with acute indigestion. The attack was accompanied by temporary loss of his mental balance. He hurled an ice pitcher at his wife but missed her, striking against the wall in his hotel, and then leaped out of the window before the hotel porters reached him. The crazed baseball player struck the roof of a shed and then rolled to the ground. He was taken to a hospital here. An X-ray examination was made of his left leg which was badly injured. No bones were broken, but the tendons were sprained badly.

KILLED WHILE TRYING TO BOARD MOVING TRAIN

Pittsburg, Sept. 14.—Wallace Wilson was killed, Stanley Digo and Frank Goaria were severely injured, and a dozen others narrowly escaped death last night, when over 100 persons, including the victims, made a wild rush to board a moving train at Fairhaven, Pa., near here, on the Castle Shannon Railway.

TEMPORA MUTANUR.

Professor Lancaster, the distinguished scientist, in addressing his classes one day said that, while he would like to believe that all scientists were impeccable, he was forced by a dream he had experienced to doubt their universal goodness.

In this dream the professor had been carried to the gate of the lower regions, which he was surprised to find, was made of highly-polished marble. Everything within reminded him of a well-appointed club, even to the refreshment which might be obtained at small tables in cosy corners. He resorted to one of these and was promptly served by a dusky attendant who inquired softly, "Ice, sir?"

"Where in the nether world do you get the ice?" said the professor.

"There are many scientific gentlemen here, sir," was the reply.

AN AMUSING CASE IN POLICE COURT TODAY

Unknowingly perhaps but with undoubtedly a good cause for his action, Joseph Marshall, a young negro, who arrived recently from Barbados established a precedent in police court annals this morning, when he caused the arrest of Harry Folkins, aged 35, a Scotchman, and a fellow boarder in the Travelers Home on Water street, the charge being theft of one boot from the home, belonging to the ebony hued youth on Sunday.

Folkins was taken into custody by Special Officer Olive and after consenting to be tried by the magistrate the hearing was commenced in the police court.

Joseph Marshall testified in an unimitable manner, detailing how he left his boot with a Salvation Army officer to be repaired yesterday afternoon, and being unable to find the shoe when the process was finished. "Dis is de man," reasoned the son of Ham, "becuz he's de only one dat left de place. Ah don't think it's no joke to steal a feller's boot an' him have to work dis mawnin, an' have to borry an old boot four sizes too big from de cook. An' its no joke," Joseph continued "for Ah lost a pure diamon' ring among dem fellers an let it go, an' dey tought I wuz easy, but Ah'm goin' to have ma rights yer Lordship."

The officer stated that Folkins told him where the boot was to be found explaining the source of knowledge "as hearing a whisper among the boys" about hiding the boot as a joke under some logs on the D. A. R. pier.

At this point Marshall interjected. "Now what if some feller came along and seen dis good boot dere and took it. Ah paid $3 for dem eight months ago."

Folkins pleaded not guilty and to secure evidence the case was adjourned.

UVIRA WINS IN THE YACHT RACE

St. Andrews Boat and John Frodsham's Mona Carried off Honors in Yacht and Salmon Boat Races Today.

The yacht and salmon boat race was the event of the day in connection with the big fair. The yacht contest was won by the speedy St. Andrews yacht Uvira owned by R. B. Van Horne and the salmon boat race by the Mova, owned by John Frodsham. The harbor presented a pretty sight as the yachts and salmon boats manoeuvered about before the race. There was a stiff northeast wind blowing and the yachts were all carrying reefs. The salmon boats started well bunched there being but little to chose from as they went over the line. As they got off the harbor however the Frodsham boat and the Chinook forged to the front. The race, however, was close over the entire course.

The yacht race was one of the prettiest ever seen. The additions to the fleet of the number of larger craft made the contest especially interesting. The manouvering of the Uvira and Canada, Possum, Viking and Louvima, the big sloops was exciting.

The stiff breeze heeled the boats over and sent spray flying in all directions. The Louvina, however, crossed the line first at the crack of the starting gun and the race was soon on in earnest.

Shortly after the start, however, the St. Andrew's boat took the lead and was ahead when last seen. The finish of the salmon boats was in the following order:

Mona, John Frodsham	1.36.48
Currie Nation, A. Cunningham	1.36.53
Bonnie Jean, S. Ferguson	1.41.00
Wabena, McDonald and Bligurd	1.41.23
Chinook, Church Bros	141.48
Edith Pearl, E. McAllister	1.48.05
Pronto, J. H. Doody	2.00.00
The Clyne and Nellie M. did not finish

The yachts finished as follows:

Uvira, Van Horne	2.06.18
Possum, H. Beverly Robinson	2.17.00
Canada, Fred Heans	2.18.16
Lounina, Likely Bros.	2.25.46
The Queen, Chas. Elwell	2.28.00
Glencairn, Ganong	2.31.33
Vagabond, Merritt	2.35.00
Rena, Williams	2.38.33

The time allowance will be made up tonight, when the result may be changed.

MURDER AND SUICIDE

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 14.—What appears to the authorities of Albany as a murder and suicide occurred early this morning on the Troy road, just outside of Albany. The dead body of Michael J. Both received bullet wounds in the head.

The police believe that following a quarrel, O'Leary shot his wife and then killed himself. On the floor beside O'Leary's body was a 32 calibre revolver. Coroner Baxter, of Watervelt, was called. Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary were married about a year ago.

THE TIMES NEW REPORTER

GIVE 'EM THE HOOK.

Mr. Hiram Hornbeam was perhaps the last man to leave the fair grounds on Saturday evening. He was so deeply interested in the movements of the clown with the megaphone and the unearthly laugh, who ran about the Pike, that he did not until a late hour try to thread the mystic maze. When he at last emerged it was high time for even a gay old sport to run away home.

"I was a little disapp'inted with the show in the amusement hall," said Hiram this morning. "Them fellers talked too long. The managers didn't do their part. Now I was into the opery house one night last winter when they had amatoors on the stage. When any feller come out that couldn't act er sing, the boys up in the gallery 'ud holler: 'Give 'eem the hook!' An' that minit a long stick with a hook on it 'ud be poked out an' the feller yanked off the stage. Why didn't Skinner an' Emerson give some o' them fellers the hook Satu'day night? I wanted to git out an' see the show. An hour's talk is plenty. Give each man just so many minutes to talk, an' then give 'eem the hook."

Hiram is convinced that the present fair is the best he has seen here, and as soon as he has familiarized himself with the Pike will give some attention to the other features. He was somewhat disappointed that Hon. Mr. Fisher did not speak of the Settlement when he referred to the most famous farming sections of the province, and took occasion to ask the minister to go out and see for himself what they raised.

Why them squash I seen down there," said Hiram, "could all he put inside o' one I got in my field an' then leave lots o' room. A turnip rolled down my side hill last week an' went through the side of a shed. I got out of the way just in time. Well, good day."

VON BUELOW SCOUTS IDEA OF A GERMAN WAR WITH ENGLAND

London, Sept. 14.—The Standard this morning prints a long interview with Prince Von Buelow, the German chancellor at Norderney. It deals mainly with the relations between Great Britain and Germany and with Prince Von Buelow's opinion of an article which recently appeared in the British periodicals.

With reference to British apprehensions in the matter of German naval aggression, the chancellor thinks that it would be more excusable if the Germans were apprehensive of being attacked, pointing out that Great Britain has not been invaded since the time of William the Conqueror. Continuing, Prince Von Buelow says: "I can assure you that no one of any sense in Germany dreams of picking a quarrel with England, much less is there any insane idea of invading England. But for Germans there are far more tangible reasons for apprehensions through our exposed geographical position, let alone a dark historical background.

"So far as the idea of Germany's power being a menace to other countries is concerned, Germany, as you well know, is the only one of the great powers which has waged no war during the past thirty-seven years."

The chancellor discussed a great variety of subjects in European politics, but mainly of Academic interest. First he scouted the notion that Germany is aiming to be the greatest naval power in the world, or is likely to within a couple of years challenge British naval superiority.
