ENDS STRIKING PASTORATE IN LONDON BY STINGING ATTACK ON THOSE WHO HOARD FOOD

Rev. R. W. Norwood Says He Criticises London as One Friend to Another—Profiteers Who Show Greed While Mothers Starve Are Guilty of Cruelty as Awful as the Kaiser's.

Taking farewell of the congregation of the Cronyn Memorial Church, of which he has been rector for the past five years, and of the city of London, in which he has been one of the most conspicuous pulpit figures during his residence here, Rev. R. W. Norwood last evening sounded a ringing challenge to those who call themselves Christians and to the church. "If you love Jesus, you must manifest it in something practical," he declared. "You must 'feed the lambs and the sheep.' If you love Jesus, you must show it in thankfulness and service.

"The real door of the house not made with hands, through which those who love the Lord must enter, has written above it the legend, 'His servants shall serve Him.' The lesson which the risen Lord taught in the early morning on the shores of Galilee when he said to Peter, 'If ye love me, feed my lambs, feed my sheep,' was the lesson that he who is most faithful to the infinite Father is a good provider."

Denounces Profiteers.

Continuing, Mr. Norwood scathingly denounced those who cry, "Lord, Lord," yet let fellow beings suffer for lack of necessities; the profiteers who store up food in order to send up prices and enrich themselves at the expense of the very lives of men, women and little children; the church which fails to make vigorous protest; the authority that allows such injustice to be done.

"What are you and I doing for the world? What has the church done in all the nineteen hundred years since Jesus himself gave this simple test for discipleship, 'Let your love be known by doing.'" cried the preacher, adding, "There is one with us tonight who never fails to keep His tryst, 'wherever two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst.' What have we to say to Him about the way we have measured up to the test? What of the bursting of shells over Belgium, the shattering shock of the bombardment of the shores of England, the cry of the outraged women and girls of Belgium? Think you that these things are worse in His sight than a little baby, dirty and dying for lack of nourishment and a mother far gone in the city of London for the lack of the bare needs of life?

Food Stored, Mothers Die.

"What have you and I been doing, and what has the church been doing? I call witness to storing up of eggs and butter for profit by bargainings while mothers are undernourished and little ones have unfed bodies. Ministers have in their congregations me contributing to their support who are guilty of such profiteering, yet fail to call to account these members who are guilty of cruelty as awful as any conceivable damnable deeds of the kaiser.

"How can the lambs be fed while there are ravening wolves in their midst and few voices cry out in protest against the sham, the stupidity, the disloyalty of it all?

"What is the interpretation of the vision of John on Patmos the vision of the city coming out of God to earth? Simply that the result of the gospel of Jesus must be a new political economy. Let the men of London today combine and say to the businessman: 'The children must be fed; you must not stop the mouths of the mothers. Open the doors of the storage houses, put an end to the speculation in wheat.'

Is We Feeding the Lambs?

"Though a man built up the biggest busines in the city, his place in the church were one of filthiness unless he were faithfully feeding the little lambs and the best beloved sheep of the Good Shepherd.

"It is blasphemy to pray for the cleansing and healing of souls while trying to keep bodies dirty and undernourished. The church will never really manifest Jesus until it sees that people are fed and clothed, have decent houses in which to live, and until disease is stamped out."

Referring to the five years which he has been in London, the preacher regretted that in looking at the work of the churches, following reports of sermons, reading the newspapers to get an idea of the practical application of the gospel the churches were making, he had not found them measuring up to the one true test of the Master.

So far as the future of the church is concerned and the possibility of the realization of a dream of a united Christendom, "Church union can never come about by reconciliation so far as doctrines, theories and creeds are concerned," was his view. "The unity of Christendom must be on an economic foundation. Church union will be impossible until doctors and ministers see in the resurrection of Jesus a new economy, until the church realizes that in order to manifest Jesus it must go forth into the world and feed the lambs and the sheep and feed the body first.

Grudging Service a Sin.

Throughout the sermon gleamed a ray of hope and comfort for the followers who during Mr. Norwood's ministry have come to regard him as their friend, guide and shepherd. "God is most revealed in the simple tasks, the trivial daily round, and the highest service that can be rendered to Him is in doing faithfully and in a spirit of gladness the little tasks of every day. Let your love be known in doing," was his injunction. "If you are a grumbler or render grudging service I fear you have not learned what it is to love Jesus.'"

At the close of the sermon Mr. Norwood briefly and with deep feeling expressed his regret at leaving his congregation and the city of London.

"I regret," he said, "that in a few hours I will no longer be a citizen of London. I have criticized it as only one friend may criticize another. I have criticized conditions in London because I believe London to be one of the finest communities in the whole Dominion and to have possibilities of greatness in both character and achievement. I believe the future of the Dominion of Canada will be materially affected and influenced by the character of the men and women of London."

Encouraged For New Work.

Dwelling upon the pleasant relationship which had existed between himself and congregation, Mr. Norwood referred to the encouragement it gives him to go to his new work with the consciousness of the dear friendships he is leaving behind.

"We are parting just now," he said, "but there will come a turn in the road when we will journey together again as our path leads out among the stars. We have had a great adventure together and found wonderful things of the Lord together. But I want to leave this with you: 'Eye hath not seen nor ear heard nor hath it entered into the heart of man to know the glory of the things which shall be revealed hereafter which God hath prepared for them that love Him.'"

By 6 o'clock last evening throngs of people had gathered in front of the Cronyn Memorial Church, waiting for the doors to be opened. By 6:30 not a seat was unoccupied, and the chairs and benches were filling up, which were placed in the side aisles and transepts. A few minutes later it was necessary to find accommodation in the chancel for scores. Many stood throughout the service, and hundreds were unable to get into the church for the farewell of one of the most brilliant preachers the city of London has known.

Mr. Norwood and family leave this afternoon for their future home in Philadelphia.

MEMORIAL SERVICES FOR LOCAL SOLDIERS LARGELY ATTENDED

Striking Tributes Paid to Young Men Killed in Action.

A memorial service in honor of Pte. Allen Phillips, who was killed in action near Lens on August 21, was held at the Adelaide Street Baptist Church last night.

Rev. J. H. Boyd delivered an excellent sermon, in which he eulogized the character of Pte. Phillips, who was a member of the Adelaide Street Baptist Church and Sunday school. In all departments of the church, Sunday school and young people's organizations he took an active part.

The pastor took his text from Matthew xxv., 23, "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

In speaking of Pte. Phillips Rev. Mr. Boyd dwelt upon his sterling character, the nobility of his life and the heroism of his death.

Pte. Phillips joined the Army Medical Corps, and was attached to the 142nd Battalion when that battalion proceeded overseas. Prior to enlisting he was on the staff of the Royal Bank.

The pulpit was decorated with white and purple asters and the honor roll hung up in front of it. Close to 70 names are now on the roll of the Adelaide Street Baptist Church.

The choir sang "The Christian's Good-Night," and "Peace, Perfect Peace."

Edward Wilmer sang a special solo for the occasion. The church was packed to capacity for the occasion.

For Pte. Morgan.

A service in memory of Pte. William Morgan, recently reported killed in action, was conducted by Rev. W. R. McIntosh last evening at King Street Presbyterian Church. The pastor eulogized the young man, whom, he said, was always a prominent figure in the work of the church.

The minister's sermon was on "Mysteries of Life." He said that when so much grief and tribulation are assailing mankind, an explanation of the mysteries of life and death would be listened to with great interest by relatives of the gallant men who have died for the standards of liberty and justice.

Were life devoid of mystery there would be little joy in living, because the expectation of something worth living for is within all of us. The mysteries surrounding the problems of life and death do not betoken malevolence on the part of the Divine Spirit. Without a certain amount of anticipation for a higher, greater and immortal life material existence would be insipid. When one is killed in action his body is the only portion rendered immune to the pleasures of God. His spirit enters in a capacity foreign to his material existence, to the joys of celestial life. He fathoms the greatest of all God's mysteries, which it is impossible to fathom in this life.

Mr. McIntosh made a feeling reference to the great sacrifice Pte. Morgan made when he left his wife and three children, the third of whom was not born at the time of his departure overseas. It was a great loss for the widow and children of the brave soldier to suffer, he said, but if there was any consolation in the belief that her husband is better off in a higher world, he would recommend that Mrs. Morgan renounce grief for joy that Pte. Morgan has reaped a fit reward for his great sacrifice.

Lost Two Members.

An impressive service in memory of Pte. Carl A. Byrnes and Pte. H. Telford, who were recently killed in action, was delivered by Rev. Dr. D. L. McCrae at the evening service of the Hamilton Road Presbyterian Church Sunday. Taking his text for Revelations vii.—17, "God shall wipe away all tears from the eyes," as the most appropriate verse with which to give consolation to the bereaved, Dr. McCrae applied the words of Jesus as a consolatory message to the relatives of the two gallant young men who had paid the supreme sacrifice.

He paid tributes to the characters of the dead soldiers, who were at all times followers of God and enthusiastic workers of the Sunday school.

"Millions are in tears because of desolated homes and broken hearts," he said, "and it is hard to realize that these young men who voluntarily sacrificed their lives that the emblem of democracy may forever fly, are living a happier existence in the celestial world than they could ever have hoped to enjoy upon this material planet. However, it is a foregone conclusion that these young soldiers will reap an immortal reward for their services in the work of God at home and abroad. The great trial comes to the bereaved of the young men. The mother or the father of the dead boys in their awful grief think that the dear faces which they so cherished will never grace their eyes again. The sorrow is so overwhelming that they cannot regard their boy's reward as a true thing. However, they must bear up, and believe in the word of God when He said that all sorrows would be forever end in the great beyond."

In conclusion, Mrs. Jeffery Wheable sang: "He Wipes the Tear From Every Eye," after which the Dead March in Saul was played as the congregation stood up.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

COMPLAINS OF CONDUCTOR.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

Allow me to draw your attention to the way some of the conductors on our street cars are helping in the cause of "Safety First" that is posted inside of each car.

I happened to be on a north belt car (the number I was unable to get) at 8 o'clock this evening on Richmond street, going toward Cheapside street. When at about the corner of Piccadilly, I think it was, an old, old lady attempted to board the car. She had no sooner got on the first step when the conductor started the car, which threw the poor old lady to the floor of the car. She was not helped to her feet, but roughly pulled and pushed on to the rear seat of the car, and her parcel, which she had dropped, thrown on to the floor at her feet by the conductor, and when the old lady asked to be put off at the Old People's Home, he simply yelled at her until another lady, who threatened to report the conductor, offered to help the poor old lady to the home, which she did do.

Now, sir, is this sort of thing going to be allowed to continue, and the women's and children's lives to be in danger by such men (who should be in France)? I have seen this same conductor do such a thing before. It was raining very hard at the time. Trusting you will give this a place in your paper, I will sign myself, SAFETY FIRST.

London, Sept. 7, 1917.

A CITY TRADEMARK ON THE PILL.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

Have just finished cutting oats tonight, and having noticed your invitation for farmers to write their side of the situation, am now taking a few minutes to do so. I think Mr. Finn's figures as to what farmers make is a pretty fair average, taken one year with another, and it is time that city dwellers and farmers tried to understand each other's difficulties more clearly. In some quarters the farmer is blamed for the high cost of living.

The farmer is not in a position to make prices to suit himself. Have you ever known of any board of farmers demanding a certain price?

Do you know that the farmer is the only producer that has practically no voice in the selling price of his products? We have to take what is offered, and that regardless of what it costs to produce the article in many instances. We are asked to do our share in winning the war, and everyone is producing and saving all he can. Men can't fight on an empty stomach, and for this more production we are promised the everlasting gratitude of the nation, and that reward in itself is well worth striving for. But how are we farmers going to buy and pay for your high-priced city manufactured goods of which we are large consumers? We reap the gratitude of the city, but it throws us back to the place where we have a beggarly price for what we produce. The city people want ten hours' pay for eight hours' work, and expect the consumers to pay the shot, and expect us to work from daylight till dark, and take no notice of holidays, half holidays that the man in the city never fails to observe, and the reward for us is the everlasting gratitude of the city people.

You may think that the farmers are heartless, but that is not so. We all have relations in the city, and know the H. C. of L. is no myth, but still the pill, if closely examined, bears the city trademark.

In 1913 we had a splendid crop of grain, and as a grain crop it was raised at a loss to the farmer. Why? Because we got less for it than it cost to produce it. The city people set the price, and set it so low that our labor was not rewarded, and it left a bad taste in our mouths. The farmer has so many things to contend with before he is sure of a crop—insect pests, weather conditions, etc.

He plans his work with a view of having his labor rewarded, and is never sure how the result will pan out, and then the man who never raised a crop in his life sets the price, and in many cases buys it, and then sells it for as much more as the first cost, and does it all with his white collar on.

Potatoes are high in price, partly due to weather conditions, and partly due to the fact that the crop of 1914 was a good crop, and the city price setters made the price so low that it took away in a large measure from the farmers to grow potatoes. We drew potatoes and sold them in the spring of 1915 for 40 cents per bag, knowing that the dealer was selling them out at 90 cents per bag, and this condition didn't tend to large acreage in the years that followed.

Meat is dear—quite so. Did you ever consider it takes three or perhaps four years to raise prime beef? How many of the men who cry out at advancing prices would water a cattle beast for 10 cents per day? Not many; and water is cheap—in fact, free; but feed is expensive and feeding cattle have to be fed three times per day seven months per year, and then sold at a cost of not much over 10 cents per day. So you see it is just possible to kill the goose that lays the golden egg, and still have the goose, but headless. You can also set the price too low for the farmers to produce, and in the end he can't always produce at a loss.

What we need is a large infusion of brotherly love—"Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

PTE. WALTER HOWE WHO GAVE HIS LIFE IN CAUSE OF LIBERTY

VISITS CITY AFTER 30 YEARS' ABSENCE

Robert Love of Raton, New Mexico, Sees Many Improvements.

Robert Love of Raton, New Mexico, is visiting in this city, having accompanied his daughter, who will attend a Canadian ladies' college and forward her musical studies, here.

Mr. Love grew up in London, and left here some 30 years ago. He has been located in New Mexico, and has done well there, being proprietor of a flourishing business in the manufacture of carriages, wagons, etc. He sees wonderful improvement and expansion in his old home town, and says there is no place quite like London to stir the home feeling. Mr. Love remarked that when he reads of the achievements of Canadian boys in the war it makes him prouder than ever of his Canadianism. He will spend a few days with friends here and visit the Western Fair before returning to his far southwest home.

NUTTER CLAIMS ON SCHOOL WORK FOUR YEARS OLD

Education Board Likely To Say He Made Plans On Speculation.

LAWS'IT IS PROBABLE

Sketches For Proposed School and Advices Basis of the Architect's Account.

The account of A. E. Nutter, formerly architect for the technical school, has been forwarded to the advisory committee of the board of education, and will probably be dealt with this week. It seems practically certain that a lawsuit will result.

Mr. Nutter asks the board to pay him $6,622.32 for his work for that body. He has received to date $1,203, making the total of his account $7,825.32. That he will be paid that amount is unlikely, as officials say there are no records at the city hall to show that he did the work other than as a speculation.

Dates Back Four Years.

His account dates from 1913. At that time an addition was proposed for the Alexandra School, and he asks $490 for his services on the preliminary work. In 1914 a school was proposed on the Alexandra School grounds, and he prepared sketches on this work for a building to cost $150,000. He wants $2,100 for this. Later, it was thought, the convent grounds on Dundas street would be used as a site, and he prepared sketches for this. Mr. Nutter's bill for this is $1,500. He surveyed various other sites and his account for these is $490.

Wants $412 for Advice.

In connection with the technical school, now in course of construction, he demands $2,406, and a further sum of $412 for advice regarding the heating system, etc. The balance of the account is made up of smaller sums for consultations, etc.

He was paid $1,203 for his work on the present technical school. The committee will go thoroughly into the accounts and report to the board on the matter.
