Music and Drama

THE GRAND.

The pantomine, practically an unknown variety of entertainment on the American continent, though a Christmas time institution in the Old Land, won the hearts of Brantford theatre goers last evening when before a large audience the spectacular production of "Aladdin" was given by a large and talented cast. The costuming and scenery of the production are of exceptional beauty and effectiveness, while every individual performer was admirably adapted for his or her part. The performance contains a large number of topical and local allusions, but all were taken in good part by the large audience present. The tableau in the last act, representing the allied nations, was particularly effective and striking.

SHE REBELS AT APPLE SAUCE.

To what point is the motion picture star expected to set aside her personal prejudices and dislikes for her career? Though she wears unbecoming costumes to fit certain historic periods without a murmur, should she be expected to eat food before the camera at which her palate rebels? That is the delicate question which had to be faced by Louise Huff the other day when she was requested to play the role of "Jane" in the adaptation of Booth Tarkington's novel "Seventeen."

Those who have read the book will remember that Jane's chief claims to fame are her unlimited capacity for apple sauce and sugar on buttered bread, and her peculiar ability to walk in a manner described by the author as "stummick out of joint." Miss Huff did not in the least mind the contortions necessary to obtain the effect of a dislocated abdomen, but she did rebel, heart, soul and palate at the prospect of spending six weeks of her life eating apple sauce.

If there is any one so-called edible for which her interior positively has an insurmountable antipathy, it is apple sauce, which is connected in her mind with every child's disease which she ever had. Miss Huff's childhood is not so far behind her that she has completely forgiven these illnesses, and she has never been able to overcome her prejudice against apple sauce. To add to her misery, she would be forced to register a continuous longing for more apple sauce as the picture progressed, and she figured that by the time the photoplay had been completed, she would be too ill for words.

So she will play Lola, the baby-talk lady instead, leaving the apple sauce to some other Jane.

ADMIRAL DEWEY LEAVES THE DECK

guns of Cavite he found the Spanish fleet of seven cruisers, five gunboats and two torpedo boats. As he was about to commence action he discovered that Rear-Admiral von Deidrichs, who was in Manila Bay with a much superior force, had allowed two of his vessels to come between the American and Spanish fleets.

As soon as he reached Manila Bay, and before the German war vessels threatened to hold up the engagement, he called upon von Deidrichs. He referred to the large German force and the limited German interests in the Philippines in the manner of a polite inquiry.

The German Threat.

"I am here by order of the Kaiser, sir," replied von Deidrichs.

What might have been von Diedrichs' intentions are not known, bet the Commander of the British fleet signalled to the Commanders of the German vessels to clear away or he would open fire. The vessels moved off. Dewey's fleet totally destroyed the Spanish vessels without the loss of a single man.

Dewey was promoted to Rear-Admiral on receipt of the news, and thanked by a resolution of Congress. In 1899 he became an Admiral of the United States Navy and a member of the United States Philippine Commission.

"It has been a rule that wherever a British and American ship meet their officers and crews fraternize. Exchange of visits, which are ceremonial where other navies are concerned, become friendly calls," says Dewey in his autobiography.

A deputation of five Doukhobors were assured by Hon. Arthur Meighen that no interference with the privileges enjoyed by the Doukhobors was intended in the National Service movement.

Stanley Kurrow was arrested at Ottawa on a complaint laid by a compatriot of his, George Koski, also of Hamilton, who alleges that Kurrow ran away with his wife and year-old baby four months ago.

The schooner Harry Adams, of Lunenburg, N.S., Captain Fred Acker, laden with fish from Newfoundland for the Mediterranean, was torpedoed in the Bay of Biscay.

The British Government decided some time ago to reduce the imports om paper by one-third and this has now been increased to one-half.

A CLASH

Which Ultimately May Result in a Duel

By Courier Leased Wire.

Petrograd, via London, Jan. 17.—A dramatic clash between M. Protopopoff, minister of the interior, and M. Rodzianko, president of the Duma, is described by The Novoe Vremya. Acording to this story, M. Protopopoff approached M. Rodzianko during the new year's reception at the Tsarskoe Selo and offered his hand in a conciliatory way. The head of the Duma turned away with a curt "never."

The friends of the minister of the interior say that a duel is inevitable, but M. Rodzianko has hitherto not received a challenge.
