

THE ANACREONTEA

209

While yet your life is loveliest
With youth's fair hues, to well employ
The golden present's passing joy;
For like this flower, rude time at last
Your beauty's brilliant bloom will blast.