MARBLE OR DUST?

A child, beside a statue, said to me,
With pretty wisdom very sadly just,
That man is Mr. Lincoln, mamma. He
Was made of marble; we are made of dust."
One flash of passionate sorrow trembled through
The dust of which I had been dimly made,
One fierce, quick wish to be of marble too—
Not something meaner, that must fail and fade.

"To be forever fair and still and cold,"
I faintly thought, with faint tears in my sight;
"To stand thus face to face with Time, and hold
Between us that uncrumbling phalanx of white;

"To see the creature formed a slighter stuff
Waver in little dead leaf whirls away,
Yet know that I could wait and have enough
Of frost and dew, enough of dark and day.

"—— I would be marble? Wherefore? Just to make
The tremors of glad pain that dust must know?—
The grief that settles after some dead kiss?—
The frown that was a smile not long ago?

"Do I forget the stone's long loneliness?—
The dumb impatience all wait watching brings?
The looking with blind eyes, in vague distress,
For Christ's slow Coming and the End of Things?

"No, boy of mine, with your young yellow hair,
Better the dust you scatter with your feet
Than marble, which can see not you are fair—
Than marble, which can see not you are sweet.

"Ay, or than marble which must meet the years
Without my light relief of murmurous breath,
Without the bitter sweetness of my tears—
Without the love which dust must have for Death."

NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

A Memphis paper says of a little girl who died there: "She's jumping the rope with the little angels to-day."

At Paterson, New Jersey, Friday, during a storm of rain, hail, thunder and lightning, two persons were struck by lightning—a man in the street, whose leg was hurt, and a little girl who was so seriously injured that she is not expected to recover.

The extreme popularity of the Prohibitory Liquor law in Vermont was well illustrated in a case before the St. Albans courts last week. About sixty persons, some of them the most respectable citizens of the town, were summoned as witnesses, but they all had to be arrested before they would attend the trial.

The man with the glass eye, who is so often alluded to, has at length arrived in Chicago. He is giving daily exhibitions of second sight in front of the Tribune office, to crowds of idlers. By putting a little apparatus which contains a reflecting glass to his eye he is enabled to see behind him, and comments on the street scenes in his rear, much to the amusement of his audience.

At Seymour, Ind., Friday, two brothers named Fleetwood, were convicted of the murder of a little German boy a year ago, and sentenced to the penitentiary for life. The evidence showed that they enticed the little boy into a field, beat out his brains with a club, cut his throat, and threw the body into a creek. The object of the murder was the robbery of two dollars from the child.

An eccentric old fellow named Rix Rude died in Connecticut last week. Although the owner of a large farm, he could never be persuaded to sell any of his farm products, and in the barn there is a quantity of hay fifty-five years old, which met with a ready sale at a recent auction. He was very accurate in all his dealings, and at one time walked two miles to procure exact change when only a cent was required to close the bargain.

Is it a phonetic fact that women talk faster than men? And if so, is this to be attributed to a more sensitive organization, and to women's intuitive method of reasoning? We observe in a newspaper what professes to be statistical information upon the subject. Mrs. Burnham, it is said, talked at St. Louis in a platform lecture, not one of the curtain kind, for fifty-five minutes, and the report of what the lady said filled three columns and one-half of The Democrat—a very columnar speech. Mr. Wendell Phillips, when he last appeared in St. Louis, talked two hours, and, in report, filled four columns and a half; and Mr. Beecher, in the same time, enunciated five columns.

Shameful as the South Carolina scandal is, there is an element of the grotesque in it. Gov. Moses, accused of stealing the public funds, is sought by a Sheriff with a writ of arrest and "an unpleasant duty to perform." To him the Governor replies that he thought as much. He refuses to be arrested and orders out the military. Thereupon, the Moses mansion, as it is styled in the dispatches, is surrounded by State troops (colored) who guard all approaches. Finally, finding this seclusion irksome, Gov. Moses consents to give bail, but he will surrender only to the Coroner, never to the Sheriff. Like Brooks, of Arkansas, he is choice about the person to whom he gives up his dignity. No wonder that the report concludes by saying that there is great excitement and "business is paralyzed." The whole proceeding has a fine flavor of Central American politics about it.

A special from Brownsville, Texas, dated Friday, says that there is a terrible state of affairs in that section. Judge Doherty reports that there is less security for persons or property between the Neuces and Rio Grande than heretofore. In Neuces and Live Oak counties the ranches have been deserted by old frontiersmen. They will send affidavits to Gen. Steele substantiating their statements, including the account of murders and robberies, and ask for authority to organize and protect themselves. The number of raiders is greater than previously, and if they steal fewer cattle than before it is because there are fewer left to steal. The Mexicans have been crossing over cattle at Los Conchas for the last three days. Twenty-four miles above they have fired on the citizens from the Mexican side of the river. Judge Doherty left for Neuces this evening for the purpose of procuring evidence to justify military action. The raiders have crossed over eight hundred head of cattle. The commander at Matamoras has been asked to send a force to capture them. We shall be forced to fight in self-defence as there is no safety for an American outside a town. They are determined to drive us out of the country, such is the opinion of our clearest-headed men.

GENERAL.

With kerosene at twenty cents a gallon, why should a person take the trouble to commit suicide?

Considerate.—This man knew what he was about. He lived in the country, and in buying an axe the other day he was particular to select the smallest one he could find. An acquaintance asked him why he did so, and he replied: "Well, my wife isn't enjoying very good health, and if I get a heavier one I'm afraid she won't be able to cut wood."

We overheard a queer thing the other day from the lips of two little girls not over nine years old. Each of them had a baby in her arms, when the elder of the two said to her companion, "Sally, can you tell a tip-top lie?" "You bet. Why?" said the other, "Why, you take your baby and I'll take mine, and we'll go round begging. You tell people we are widows."

Bombardio looked languishingly upon her, and heaved a deep sigh. Then, pressing his hand upon his bosom, with beseeching gaze and with a writhing almost of torture, he exclaimed: "Ah, sweet lady, if this be not true love I feel, what can it be?" "Perhaps," replied the beauty, with utmost innocence of expression, "something bites you."

A little fellow, five or six years old, who had been wearing undershirts much too small for him, was one day, after having been washed, put into a garment as much too large as the others had been too small. Our six-year-old shrugged his shoulders, eyed his shirt, walked around, and finally burst out with: "Ma! I do feel awful lonesome in this shirt."

There is a little anecdote apropos of the low-necked ball-dresses of the present season. "Good evening," says a lady, dressed in the height, or rather the depth of the fashion, to her partner in the german at one of the late Paris balls: "I am tired to death. I am going home to undress myself." "What—any more?" is the partner's answer.

Brignoli is singing at the Italiens, Paris, and the papers guy him sadly. Hear the Figaro: "One sees this tenor who, in opening his large mouth, seems as if he wanted to eat his nose; one hears lamentable sounds of amorous cats, and strange gurglings peel one's ears, and one longs to fly far, very far, into a country where Brignoli never has penetrated, and never will. Oh, Strakosch, thou who art director of Ventadour, deliver us of Brignoli."

Great Britain pays liberally for its protectorate of the Fiji Islands. The King and high chiefs are handsomely pensioned and the fee simple of the lands is not in any way alienated from the ruling chief. The result of this will be a general purchase of the arable lands by British subjects from Australia and a gradual growth of local law among the planters. The whole scheme is a gracious concession to the British colonists in the South Seas, and, whether it be profitable to the Empire or not, it is designed to strengthen the bonds which hold Australasia to the Crown.

London, the less, is the home of a cruel Judge. He has fined a man $20 for beating his mother-in-law, who was remonstrating with him. Is a man to have no pleasure in the world at all? Is he to be debarred from a little enjoyment when he goes home tired and weary with the intention of walloping his wife's mother? Must he ever submit quietly to the remonstrances of his better half's maternal progenitor, and keep his tongue tied and his mouth shut when his meals ain't ready. If this Judge is a married man, we'll wager, a wager that his mother-in-law has gone to the South Sea.—Toronto Sun.

Brazilian gentleman are remarkable for temperance and frugality, and also for natural talent, though they cannot compete with the natives of most countries in industry. They enjoy works on literature and science, but the upper classes spend a most monotonous existence, taking several naps a day, and, in fact, fritter away their lives in endless frivolity. The climate is delicious, but enervating. They have no out-of-door games, no debating clubs, lectures, or appliances which Europeans or Northerners delight in. For this reason young Englishmen sent out as clerks have a dreary unsocial life, and often take refuge in the excitement of dissipation.

The Phrenological Journal for June is an admirable number, and closes the 58th volume of that standard monthly. It contains Dr. Dio Lewis, with a fine portrait; A Parable of the Kingdom, or a New Rendering of the Book of Job; The Late Jacob Knapp, Revivalist Preacher; Miss Caroline S. Brooks, the Western Artist; Bella French, the Poet and Publisher; A Sunday Evening in Water Street, or What a Visitor Saw and Heard; Dudley W. Adams, Master of the National Grange, with Portrait, and a Sketch of the Grange Movement; The Teetotal Muddlement; Our Opportunities; Plant Life in Our Territories; Emil Lowinstien, the Handsome Murderer, etc. Full of spice, of the healthful sort.

Whatever else may be said of English art, it cannot be said that its best specimens are not well paid for. Mr. Smalley writes to the New York Tribune: "I hear of a small water-color drawing by Turner being sold privately not many weeks since for $7,500, and there were two last Saturday, by the same master, which brought at auction $5,275 and $5,775, with six others in the same sale at from $3,000 to $5,000 each. Muller's "Chess Players" sold that day for $20,265—some $500 more than in the great Gillot sale, which was thought to have touched high-water mark, while Turner's "Dunstanborough" reached the sum of $21,525. Millais was getting $10,000 for portraits some years ago.

Rescued from a Wreck.

Captain Kickham, of the ship James Duncan, arrived in this port last week, and reports having encountered on his voyage a succession of frightful gales. On the morning of Saturday, 25th April, at 8 o'clock, in latitude 46.14 N., longitude 48.40 W., he sighted a barque reaching under slight canvass, with a signal of distress flying. About noon the James Duncan was within hailing distance, and found it to be the German barque Kenderduke. She was then 48 days out from Waterford, the last port touched at, with a cargo of empty kerosene casks for New York. The master reported her to be leaking, and the water gaining on them rapidly, as one pump had become crippled and could not be worked. The casks might still have kept her afloat, but they were unfortunately all open. Preparations were accordingly made to receive the crew on board the Duncan, which in such a terrific sea was no easy task. It was accomplished however; the crew, thirteen in number, leaving the sinking ship in their own boats. Captain Kickham succeeded in bringing on some provisions and some clothes of the rescued sailors, also a retriever dog. While the men were being got on board, the ships collided, and a portion of the Duncan's bulwarks on the port side was carried away. The rescued sailors were all safely landed here, whence they were despatched to the Dutch Consul in Halifax.

Too much praise cannot be awarded to Captain Kickham and his gallant crew for their daring and intrepidity in rescuing the lives of the men in such a hurricane as the Captain describes. We trust that the good Captain will not go unrewarded, and that it will be ere long our duty to record some fitting recognition bestowed on him for his gallant act of humanity.—Atown Patriot.
