WHAT MAKES A MAN.

BY WM. BRYANT.

Not numerous years, nor lengthened life,
Not pretty children a wife;
Not pins and canes and fancy rings,
Not any like trumpery things;
Not wine, cigar nor bottled wine,
Nor liberty with wings to dine,
Not coat nor boots, nor yet a hat,
A dandy vest or trim cravat;
Not houses, land or golden ore,
Nor all the world's wealth in a store,
Not Mr., Rev., Sir, nor Squire,
With titles that the memory tire;
Not ancestry, traced back to Will,
Who went from Normandy to kill;
Not Latin, Greek nor Hebrew lore;
Nor thousand volumes rumbled o'er
Not judge's robe, nor mayor's mace;
Nor crowns that deck the royal race;—
These all untied never can
Avail to make a single man.

A truthful soul, a loving mind,
Full of affection of its kind;
A spirit firm, erect and free;
That never basely bends the knee;
That will not bear a feather's weight
Of slavery's chain, for small or great;
That truly speaks from God within,
And never makes a league with sin;
That snaps the fetters despots make,
And loves truth for its own sake;
That worships God, and him alone,
And bows no where but at his throne;
That trembles at no tyrant's nod,
A soul that fears no one but God;
And thus can smile at curse or ban;
That is the soul that makes a man.

THE CHILD AND THE SUNBEAM.

I saw a youthful mother
Once, on a summer's day,
Set down a smiling infant,
To watch its frolic play.
It gambolled on the flowerets
That deck the carpet o'er,
And seemed with childish wonder
Each object to explore.

A something on the instant
Its glad career arrests,
And earnestly it gazes where
A golden sunbeam rests;
While on the new-found glory
It fixed its wondering eyes,
And trustfully reached forth its hand,
To seize the glittering prize.

And now, its tiny fingers clasp
The treasure rich and rare,
Which, in its baby innocence,
It surely thought was there
But ah! that hand uncloses,
And to its earnest gaze,
Reveals no gem of beauty—
No bright, imprisoned rays!

And then the first of many tears
Fell on that cherub face—
The first sad disappointment
In life's uncertain race!
And thus it has been with us all,
Who its dark game have played,
We've sought to grasp the sunshine,
And only found—the shade!

VARIETY.

Sale of a Slave.—An Incident in New Orleans.—The New Orleans Bulletin of the 20th inst., says:—Passing through the Arcade saloon, we noticed at one of the auction stands a negro girl up for sale, and around a closely packed crowd that appeared to be deeply interested in what was going on, curiously led us to pause and inquire what was the cause of the apparent excitement. The bids were going on in a very spirited manner, and generally at an advance of only five dollars at a bid, and at every bid the eyes of the crowd would quickly turn in the direction whence the bids proceeded, the interest and excitement being, in the meantime, upon the increase. The girl, a bright intelligent mulattress, about fourteen years old, evidently not indifferent to what was transpiring.—There was no moisture in her eyes, but they assumed an expression which indicated that she felt some anxiety in regard to the result of the sale, which is not generally the case. As the bids reached near a thousand dollars, the excitement became intense, and as that figure was called, a spontaneous hiss was heard from one end of the room to the other, followed by a vehement shout of "Turn him out!" "Turn him out!" A rush was made for the door, the hammer had fallen, and the girl also, into the arms of—her mother, who had become her purchaser. The explanation of it all was that the woman had been freed by her owner, and had earned money enough to buy her child, the mulattress in question, and being a very valuable servant, several persons were anxious to obtain her, but all of them, with one exception, had pledged the mother that they would not bid against her, and they honorably kept their faith. It was the conduct of this one, who was bidding against the mother, which so excited and exasperated the crowd on the occasion. The man made good his escape; but fortunately so for him, we think as we heard sundry expressions about "Lynching," &c., as the crowd came back to talk over the matter. The mother was much affected by the joy of having succeeded in retaining possession of her child that she swooned away and was carried out of the saloon. We may add the sale was a succession sale, and was not designed to be anything more than nominal, and nobody intended that the mother should be deprived of her child.

Extravagance in Dress.—Its effect upon the Market.—In the city of Belgium, extravagance has assumed such alarming proportions, that the ladies themselves have been obliged to combine for the purpose of arresting its disastrous progress. It appears that extravagance had been for some years a source of constraint in families, and it was noticed that no marriages were contracted, as the young men, frightened at the bills that loomed up in the distance, preferred to live in celebacy. The mothers, recognizing the inconvenience of a state of affairs encouraged by themselves, have resolved to bring about a salutary reform; and with this view, they have formed a committee, which meets once a week. They have declared open war with extravagance, and every member announces publicly the retrenchments made in her own household expenses. They say that happy results have already been obtained, and that similar associations are to be formed in the neighbouring towns.—Courrier des Etats Unis.

Earnest Prayer Answered.—It was on a very cold evening, some years since, when a number of young men and women started for the neighboring village of——, in one of the middle States, on a sleighing party, in high glee for the dance and entertainment. A mother sat sad by the earth, as her beloved daughter and sons jumped with joyous step into the sleigh, and soon the sound of the whip and bells was heard in the distance. She proposed to their father (who was looked upon as a patriarch in Isreal) to put the horse to the chaise, and go to her brother's house, and spend the evening in united prayer with his wife and himself, for their children. He denied her not, but took her there at the great risk of their lives, between one two miles, through the deep snow drift. The evening was spent in prayer and supplication, and then this devoted couple returned to their house, at a late hour of night. A few months after this their prayers were fully answered, even beyond their highest expectations. Nearly every member of these two families became the subjects of Devine grace. It was the commencement of a powerful revival religion in that region.—Pres. Banner.

Good Advice.—If you have great talents, industry will improve them; if moderate abilities, industry will supply their deficiencies. Nothing is denied, to well directed labor; nothing is ever to be attained without it.

THE EMPEROR'S HORSE.

BY REV. C. MALAN, D. D.

Dedicated to those who would gather the fruit of holiness without planting the tree of faith.—

The Emperor Napoleon I was reviewing some troops on the Carrousel at Paris, and in giving an order he accidentally threw the bridle over the neck of the horse, which started off at full gallop. At this moment, a common soldier, an active and vigorous young man, rushed from the ranks, and meeting the terrified animal, stopped it by seizing the bridle, which he presented respectfully to the Emperor. "Thank you, Captain," said the chief, who by this single word promoted this private to the rank of captain on the spot. The latter behaved it accordingly, and saluting the Emperor, said, "Of what regiment, sire?" Napoleon, charmed with the faith or belief of the soldier, replied instantly, "Of my guards!" and galloped away.

Now, what will the soldier do? He belongs to those who must see or feel before they will believe, and who, with the apostle Thomas, wait for tangible proofs before they will confide in a testimony. He will say to himself, "A captain of the guards always wears such and such a uniform, but I have only my private's dress—I cannot possibly believe myself a captain!" And necessarily, he will return to the ranks.

But if, contrary, the soldier confides loyally in the words of the Emperor, and starts no unbelieving difficulty as the reality of the fact, if he reasons that the rank of captain of the guards does not result from the uniform he wears, but that, on the contrary, the uniform is the consequence of the rank, to which it adds nothing in reality, being merely its external evidence; if such is the soldier's conviction (and it ought to be if he honours his Emperor) he will not concern himself about his dress, and certainly will not return to the ranks.

And such, in fact, was the conduct of this man. As soon as the Emperor had departed, the soldier laid his musket on the ground, saying "Let who will take it now," and instead of returning to the ranks, he marched straight up to the staff. Upon which one of the generals said, laughing, "What does this fellow want here?" "This fellow," said the soldier, proudly drawing himself up, "is captain of the guards!" "You, my poor fellow," said the general, "are you mad?" "He has said it!" replied the soldier, pointing to the Emperor in the distance. "Pardon me, sir," said the general, saluting him. "I was not aware of it."

Here, you see, was a double display of faith; for, in the first instance, the soldier believed the Emperor upon his bare word, because he "had heard him himself," (as the Samaritans said to Jesus) and afterwards, upon the testimony of the soldier, the general believed the word of the Emperor.

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosever believeth in Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life.—But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through His name.—Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

Work.—"There is," says Carlyle, "a perennial nobleness, and even sacredness in work. Nothing else can elevate manhood, say what you will. In idleness, politics, literature, religion we must work if we would be anything or do anything."

We should have been pleased, says the Sierra Citizen, to see Thomas Carlyle with a buck and saw, trying to elevate and enoble himself by that salutary exercise! What a number of fine things are said about the dignity of labor, yet how few like to work when they can help it!

OF THE

ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY

Capital, £2,000,000 Sterling.

TRUSTEES.

[illegible]

The Subscriber having been appointed Agent to the above Company for New-Brunswick, begs to announce that he is prepared to receive Proposals for FIRE AND LIFE ASSURANCE. The large Capital of the Company, and the number and influence of its Proprietors, enable it to rank with the most eligible Offices, either in America or Europe, with respect to the advantages offered to the Public.

FIRE BRANCH.

Persons Assured by this Company are not subject to any covenants or calls to make good losses which may happen to themselves or others, nor do they depend on any uncertain and contributory Capital Stock or fund. The Company being an unquestionable security to the Assured in case of Loss or Damage by Fire.

LIFE BRANCH.

In addition to the more customary methods of Insurance, the Company likewise Assures Lives on any of the following contingencies:—

For the term of One Year, Seven Years, or any other definite period.

For the whole continuance of Life.—The Premiums to cease, after a limited number of Annual Payments.

For Two Joint Lives.—The sum assured to be paid on the death of either.

On the longest of Two or Three Lives.—The sum assured to be payable at the death of the last survivor; or,

The Survivorships.—To secure the payment of the sum assured, if a life A die before another life B.

For a sum to be payable at age 60, or at death.

Premiums on Credit.—A portion of the Premiums on Credit. Assurances may be effected in various ways, not enumerated, to meet the convenience of parties.

The important advantages afforded by the Company in the Life Branch will include the following viz:—

The Guarantee of an ample Capital, and Exemption of the Assured from liability of Partnership.

Moderate Premiums.

Large Participation of Profits by the Assured, amounting to Twenty-nine-tenths of the net amount, which may be applied at the option of the party effecting the Assurance:—1st, By the immediate payment of the sum so apportioned.—2nd, By an equivalent increase of the sum assured.

Small Charge for Management.—The expenses of the Office being borne in due proportion by the two Branches.

Prompt Settlement of Claims.

Policies lapsed by non-payment of the Premium may be renewed within three months, by paying the premium with a fine of 10s. per cent., on the production of evidence to the satisfaction of the Directors of the good health of the life assured.

The Company will always be prepared to Purchase the Policies of any Office at their equitable value, or will grant a New Policy in lieu thereof without any further payment of Premium, for a sum to be agreed on.

Extra Premiums suitable to special circumstances will be accepted to enable a party possessing a Policy on the life of another to guard against the possibility of its being vitiated by the Life departing beyond limits, or by any other cause.

Forms Duly authorised for the Payment of Premiums, and the Day on which they respectively Accrue.

Advantages Peculiar to Lives Assured with this Company in St. John, N. B.

I.—RESIDENCE.—Persons assured for the whole term of Life will have permission, without the payment of extra Premiums, to reside in any part of Europe, or in any place in North America to the north of 38 degrees of North Latitude, but not to the westward of the Mississippi River.

II.—VOYAGE.—They will also, if not sea faring Expectants, be allowed, without any extra Premium,

To cross and recross the Atlantic Ocean, in steam or first class sailing vessels;

To pass from any part of Europe to any other or from any part of North America to another within the limits above specified; also,

To pass to and from, but not to reside in any place which shall not be further south than 35 degrees of North Latitude, but not to the westward of the Mississippi River.

Recent Testimonial to the value of Keating's Cough Lozenges.

I can express what I suffered,—coughing, expectorating, and the respiration impeded. Suffice to say, I gradually recovered, without any relapse, except by taking a few boxes of Keating's Cough Lozenges. My lungs were so much affected and the general health so debilitated, that I had but little hopes of recovery.

MAGEE, HATTER.

THE Subscriber would respectfully inform his friends and the public in general, that he has removed a part of his Establishment to 27, North side of King Street, directly opposite Cross Street, and one door below Mr. J. Frost's Shoe Store where he will be found ready to serve the Public with HATS and CAPS of his own Manufacture, made under his inspection, which he feels warranted in saying are equal to any made or sold in this City, as has been proved at the Exhibitons held in this City and Fredericton, and also at Halifax, N. S., from which he received a Certificate of merit under the seal of that Province.

The business will be conducted as formerly at his old Stand, under the management of his Nephew, D. Magee, a practical Hatter; where the Public will always find a good article, and at a reasonable price.
