DRANK CHLOROFORM.

Arthur Waterman's Deliberate Attempt at Suicide.

Emptied a Half-Ounce Bottle of the Drug —He Had Been Drinking.

One of the most deliberate and sensational attempts at suicide recorded in the city occurred at the corner of York and Ridout streets about 10:30 last night, when Arthur Waterman, a young man 25 years of age and unmarried, drank an ounce of chloroform, while in a frenzy caused by drink.

Waterman is the junior partner in the firm of Simons & Waterman, second-hand furniture dealers, King street, and is an industrious and hard-working fellow. Drink, however, has been a curse to him, and while under its influence he is almost uncontrollable.

Yesterday he was was engaged at the residence of Mr. B. C. McCann, South London, putting up stove pipes. He quit work at 6 o'clock, and Mr. Simons, who lives at the corner of Simcoe and Henry streets, with whom Waterman boarded, watched for his return at the usual hour. But Waterman, instead of going home to tea, went on a spree. He failed to return by 9 o'clock, and Simons, feeling uneasy at his partner's absence, started up town in search of him.

Waterman was found half an hour later at the corner of Talbot and King streets engaged in a war of words with a stranger who, too, had been drinking. Simons and a friend named Frank Mann had to use a great deal of persuasion to get Waterman's consent to withdraw. He was in a rage and wanted to fight—nothing else would satisfy him. Finally he agreed to go, and down King street to Ridout he went, Simons and Mann holding either arm. At the corner of Ridout and York streets Waterman again became boisterous and wanted to free himself. In this he finally succeeded, and as he freed his right arm from the hold of Mr. Simons he dipped his hand into his vest pocket, pulled out a bottle, drank the contents, uttered the words "Good-bye, Nettie," and threw the vial to one side.

Waterman was unconscious in a very short time, and was removed to Dr. Logie's office, near by. The doctor was not at home, and Drs. Fraser and Teasdale were summoned. They administered an emetic, but as the poison had been absorbed it was powerless. A galvanic battery was then applied, and it soon resulted in the respiration being restored.

Waterman was afterwards removed to the hospital, where his recovery will probably be a matter of a few days.

The Nettie mentioned above is a daughter of Mr. Simons, and was on the scene shortly after the suicidal attempt was made. The bottle was recovered and handed to the police. The drug had been secured at a Richmond street store.

Bowers Sentenced.

Closing Session of the Middlesex Assizes.

The Slayer of Wm. Cain Sent to Penitentiary for Five Years.

Mr. McEvoy's Plea for Mercy on Behalf of the Prisoner—Justice Robertson's Remarks in Passing Sentence.

Wednesday Afternoon.

The jury in the Bowers manslaughter case were in their places when Judge Robertson took his seat at 2:30 this afternoon. Bowers, in the dock, wore the same haggard look that has characterized his features since his incarceration on June 24. The spectators filled the seats and chairs around the table, and included Father Connolly, the prisoner's spiritual adviser for eight years past, and Father Tiernan, of this city.

The clerk of the court inquired in the usual way whether or not a verdict had been reached; if so, what? "Guilty, with a recommendation to the greatest degree of mercy," responded the foreman, and the silence pervading the room was deathlike.

Judge Robertson discharged the jury, thanking them and all the petit jurors for their attendance.

Sentence of the court upon the prisoner was then moved by Mr. McDougall.

"Well, I will ask the prisoner what he has to say," said Judge Robertson.

Bowers stood up, and in a broken voice said: "I am guilty in the eyes of the law —but it was simply an accident."

Prisoner's counsel appealed for leniency. Bowers, he said, had a family of seven children depending upon him. He was 53 years of age. "The only point to which I desire to call your attention," said Mr. McEvoy, "is that the prisoner was living in a neighborhood well known as capable of terrorizing any person, and that at the time of the unfortunate accident he was in a high state of excitement and fear. He was afraid he would be murdered in his house, together with his family. He went out of the house simply for fear of having his family maltreated. There is no doubt as to the truth of this. In view of his age and these facts, therefore I would ask you to be as merciful as you can."

Judge Robertson, in addressing the prisoner, said that every person convicted of manslaughter was liable to imprisonment for life. The grand jury had taken a most merciful view of the prisoner's case in bringing in a bill of manslaughter, but he (the judge) was sorry it had been done. They had been very strictly charged. From the evidence before the grand jury a verdict of murder should have been returned by them, and the case left to the petit jury to reduce it to manslaughter. However, the action of the grand jury was not to be criticised. He was bound to consider that the jurors had acted conscientiously. They had relieved the court from investigating a charge of murder, as laid down by the crown—and most warrantedly laid, the judge thought. The prisoner had been given a fair trial, and a most patient inquiry was made into all the facts. The prisoner's counsel had done all he could in his behalf, and had sought to bring facts before the court which could not be admitted as evidence. "Your counsel stated that you were living in terror," continued the judge. "You took upon yourself to commit an act which hurried to eternity one of your neighbors, and for that you will have to answer in the hereafter. It is only for me to carry out the law. Fortunately for you, I have discretion in the matter, and I shall give heed to the recommendation of the jury for mercy. I cannot say that there was the slightest provocation for your act. You possessed yourself of that pistol for some unlawful purpose. You must have intended to make use of it when you put it in your pocket. As to the young men—the Cains and John Bennett—I have nothing to say in their favor. They acted in a disgraceful manner. You interfered with them, but you should not have done so—and this is the result. The public must be protected. It is my duty to make the law what it is intended to be—a terror to evil-doers. Fortunately Cain lived long enough to receive the consolation of the good old father who attended on him, and to make a dying statement. The sentence of the court is that you be confined in the Provincial Penitentiary at Kingston for five years."

This completed the docket and the court rose. Judge Robertson opens the Wellington Fall Assizes in Guelph today.

Another old resident of this place passed away on Saturday last in the person of Mrs. Clay. The deceased was trading in London on the previous Saturday, but was taken suddenly ill unto death. Her remains were interred in the village cemetery on Monday last.

Mrs. (Rev.) Thos. Jackson, of Belmont, formerly of this place, who has been the guest of Mrs. (Dr.) Bice for a few days, returned home on Tuesday.

The apple crop of this vicinity seems abundant, judging from the large number of barrels turned out by the coopers of this place, who work very long hours to supply the demand.

R. McDonald, of Chatham. Misses Campbell and Sexsmith and Mr. Evan Connille also contributed towards the success of the evening. The chair was filled in an admirable manner by Mr. H. W. Are a nuisance and we think it behooves publishers to examine the merits of many articles puffed up in their columns. We do not deny that many meritorious remedies are properly to be classed under this heading. Take the hundreds and thousands relieved from severe suffering by the use of Polson's Nerviline; would it not be unreasonable to expect them to condemn that far-famed remedy? Now we know for a fact that Polson's Nerviline is without exception the most powerful, pleasant and certain remedy in the world for pain. It cannot fail, for it goes right to the bottom of pain, penetrates to the nerves, soothes them into quietness and affords prompt and permanent relief.

Why will you allow a cough to lacerate your throat or lungs and run the risk of filling a consumptive's grave, when by the timely use of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive syrup the pain can be allayed and the danger avoided? This Syrup is pleasant to the taste, and unsurpassed for relieving, healing and curing all affections of the throat and lungs, coughs, colds, bronchitis' etc.

NATURE'S TREASURES.

This Summer's Finds by Botanists of London.

An Insectivorous Plant — A New Geranium—Alfa-Alfa Appears—The Chicory Pest—A New Clover—A Birr That Pains.

The botanical section of the Entomological Society has just completed another summer's research among the woods and dales and mossy dells of London and vicinity, and as a result many specimens have been obtained that are foreign to and in cases entirely unknown in the flora of the London district. With the cold weather this section of the society, like many of the plants which its members study, changes somewhat in the winter time, and is known as the microscopical section. When the flowers bloom again and the leaves begin to sprout they will once more be the botanical section. Mr. John A. Balkwell, South London, the treasurer of the society, is chairman of this section and an indefatigable searcher after botanical knowledge. Mr. Wm. T. Clement, B.A., teacher of botany at the Collegiate Institute, and secretary of the section, is also a lover of this branch of study, and accompanies many of his pupils in their rambles through wood and fen, amid nature in all her loveliness. Dr. Hodson, another member of the Collegiate Institute staff, is deeply interested in the study, but has an especial fondness for microscopical research. Prof. J. H. Bowman not only is well posted in all matters botanical but can talk about the finds of the section in an interesting manner. Mr. Wm. E. Saunders, whose father compiled the first flora of this district, while an earnest student of all nature, is much interested in this branch of the study. Inspector Dearness is one—as men who should know will tell you—who knows as much or a little more about the botany of London than any other man. Dr. Stevenson, Mr. Melmoth Althouse and Mr. Samuel Baker, the last two named public school principals, also find the study fascinating.

It's a very peculiar thing, but such is the case, that among the bogs in the region of London botanists will find in one the flora of this district, while in a neighboring bog the flora of the far north. And migratory birds from the north always seek out the ponds with their native flora. There are two very fruitful sources of new plants in the world of flora—the railway tracks and river beds. Why the former should be so is easily understood, with so much foreign travel in freight and passenger cars.

Mr. Bowman recently discovered something entirely new to this locality—an insectiverous plant—utricularia. Its roots form little traps which hold fast the animalculæ, on the decomposition of which it subsists. Mr. Dearness' recent find of the obnoxious Russian tumbling weed has already been made known through the press. He recently brought down a very rare cream violet from Port Frank. Mr. Bowman found many specimens at Bala, Muskoka, that local botanists consider very rare. This year for the first time alfa-alfa has been found in the city streets. It is a fodder product from Colorado, and has become so much at home as to be discovered in three or four parts of the city at the same time. It has been reported in Canada before, but not in this city. A new geranium has made its appearance—geranium Molle. Mr. Balkwell discovered it and since then it has been found in all directions. It is a very pretty plant and worthy of cultivation. The members of the society notice with apprehension the growth of the chicory plant among the different farms. It promises to become a great pest unless farmers get to know it and weed it out. It was originally planted in the States for the sake of the product, but runs wild here. It is two or three feet high and of straggling growth.

The birr grass or grass birr has appeared for the first time. It is a good deal like the clot birr in appearance but cannot be handled without pain. Mr. Balkwell has discovered a new clover. It is in size and formation like the small white clover but of a bright red color. There is no doubt but what it comes from a foreign country. A new wayside plant—spargula—is also credited to Mr. Balkwell's keen search. A product of the last few years, the new verbena—bracteosa—has lately become very common in the sandy soil of East London. A new blue-colored flower—viper buglos — is fast becoming a pest and painting uncultivated landscapes a bright blue. Its appearance along the railway tracks suggests the route by which it reached this part of the world. President Beadle, of the Toronto Horticultural Society, was in London recently examining its flora to see how much would be good for cultivation as natural flowers. He wanted a specimen of the great fringed gentian, but returned without it. This beautiful flower looks just like a piece of blue sky clipped from the firmament. It is generally to be found around London.

BEATON VS. BRIERLY.

Compromise Verdict in a Notable Libel Suit.

The Plaintiff Secures a Verdict of $1 Damages.

HAMILTON, Oct. 10.—At the Assize Court before Judge Falconbridge this afternoon the libel suit of Beaton vs. Brierly was concluded. This was one of a series of suits brought by Mrs. Elizabeth Beaton, of Burlington, against several newspapers for publishing an article taken from a New York paper in August, 1893, regarding the mysterious disappearance of a wealthy gentleman named Cicero Harrison Case, who was lost overboard from the old Dominion Liner Guyandotte, on a voyage from South Carolina to New York. A woman who claimed to be a daughter of Case was with him on the steamer and she was suspected of knowing more about Case's death than she would divulge.

This woman by the name of Mrs. Oliver disappeared soon after the arrival of the steamer. A reporter of a New York paper started out to hunt her up and claims he recognized in Mrs. Beaton, of Burlington, the same woman who accompanied Case on the steamer, but she denied all connection with him.

Mrs. Beaton filed papers and rested the case in her lawyer's hands. Mr. Brierly defended himself and made an eloquent address in which he stated that he had received the matter from a concern in Toronto, which furnished news all set up, and had it published in the usual way. As soon as he received notice from Mrs. Beaton's solicitor, he made a retraction and published it through the journal.

The jury returned a verdict of $1 and costs for plaintiff. It is understood the verdict was a compromise one, seven of the jurors being strongly in favor of a verdict for the defense.
