HAIL TO THE NEW EMPEROR.

NICHOLAS II. FORMALLY PROCLAIMED CZAR OF RUSSIA.

The Oath of Allegiance Taken By the Troops and Officials—Messages of Condolence Pouring in From All Nations of the Civilized World—Arrangements for the Funeral.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 2.—Emperor Nicholas II. has issued a proclamation announcing the death of his father. Emperor Alexander III., and continuing:

"May we be consoled by the consciousness that our sorrow is the sorrow of the whole of our beloved people, and may the people not forget that the strength and stability of Holy Russia lies in her unity to us and her unbounded devotion to us. We, however, in this sad and solemn hour, when ascending the ancestral throne of the Russian Empire and the Czardom of Poland and the Grand Duchy of Finland, indissolubly connected therewith, we, in the presence of the Most High, record our solemn vows that we will always make our sole aim the peaceful development of the power and glory of beloved Russia, and the happiness of our faithful subjects."

The proclamation concludes by directing the oath of allegiance to be taken, the same as it was taken to him, Emperor Nicholas II., and the Grand Duke George, who is his lineal successor, until God shall vouchsafe to bless with a son the union into which the Emperor is about to enter with Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt.

The Imperial Heralds, clad in brilliant uniforms, accompanied by trumpeters, announced at 9 o'clock this morning the death of Emperor Alexander III. and the accession to the throne of Emperor Nicholas II. The heralds were escorted by a military guard through the principal streets. The trumpeters would blow three blasts, when the heralds would proclaim the death of the Emperor and the official birth of another. This proclamation was made from every place of vantage on the route taken by the heralds. The accession of Grand Duke Nicholas to the throne is being celebrated by a festival to-day, as is customary. This celebration, according to custom, always precedes the period of mourning, hence the newspapers of to-day's issue appear as usual, without a sign of mourning. The period of mourning will begin to-morrow.

Taking the Oath of Allegiance.

The Senate this morning held a session for the purpose of taking the oath of allegiance to the new Czar. All the members were present and took the oath. The garrison of St. Petersburg paraded this morning with colors and were sworn according to the customary forms.

His Last Hours.

London, Nov. 2.—The Daily News has received from its Yalta correspondent the following official report of Alexander III.'s death: "Czar Alexander's death was a pious, devout and Christian one. He died as only a true man can die, and, in life, he wass inspired with faith, hope and devotion. Some days ago the Czar already felt the approach of death and prepared himself for it as a faithful Christian, but without neglecting the affairs of Government. He took communion on Oct. 9 and 17. During the last night he was sleepless. In the morning he said to the Empress: 'I feel my life drawing to an end. Be composed.' My mind is made up.

"Then he ordered all the members of his family to assemble around him. He asked his confessor to administer the sacrament and took it with pious devotion, repeating the prayer distinctly and in a loud, clear voice. The Czar was sitting in an armchair and did not for a moment lose consciousness. After the liturgy, the Czar sent for Father Ivan and prayed with him. Half an hour later he asked Father Ivan to come again, and he repeated with him the prayers for the dying. He then received extreme unction. Father Ivan remained present till the Czar died. At 2 o'clock the Czar's pulse increased and his eyes got brighter. A quarter of an hour later he let fall his head and delivered his soul to the grace of the Almighty, bequeathing to his people the blessings of peace."

Britain's Sympathy.

London, Nov. 2.—Callers at the Russian Embassy this morning are signing black-edged sheets, instead of the ordinary plain ones. St. James and Buckingham Palaces and Marlborough House present a sombre appearance, the blinds of all three being drawn. Prayers were said in the Russian Embassy at 9 o'clock this morning. The flags of the Embassy were at half-mast. Telegrams of condolence are flowing into the Embassy from all parts of the country.

The Duchess of York arrived in London dressed in deep black. The Duke of York will represent the Queen in making visits of condolence. The court will go into full mourning for two weeks, and for a fortnight thereafter will be in half mourning.

Lord Rosebery had an interview with M. Staal, Russian Ambassador, to-day.

The Queen has commanded Lord Kimberley to instruct the British Ambassador at St. Petersburg to express Her Majesty's heartfelt sorrow and sympathy, which is shared by all classes of her subjects.

France in Mourning.

Paris, Nov. 2.—The flags on all of the public buildings have been lowered to half-mast, and all of the military and naval officers are wearing mourning emblems, the authorities having ordered a period of general mourning for the Czar. The Cabinet met at 9.30 o'clock this morning for the purpose of framing a message of sympathy to be forwarded to Emperor Nicholas II.

At 11 o'clock the President, wearing the Grand Cordon of the Legion of Honor, together with the Ministers, all in evening dress, went to the chapel, where they were escorted to seats. After the services in the chapel the President and M. Burdeau went to the Pantheon to salute the tomb of the late President Carnot, in conformity with the French custom of visiting the dead on All Souls Day.

President Casimir-Perier received this morning a telegram from the Grand Duke Nicholas, formally notifying him of the death of the Czar and the accession to the throne of Nicholas II. This telegram will be printed in The Journal Officiel to-morrow. Madame Casimir-Perier has wired a message of condolence to the Czarina on behalf of the union of the women of France. The Congress of Ladies Associations for succoring the wounded, sitting at Lyons, adjourned until to-morrow as an evidence of mourning. The inaugural ceremony of the Military Medical School, General Mercier, Minister of War, presiding, was also adjourned. Telegrams of condolence are reaching the Russian Embassy from all towns in France.

The President Notified.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The Department of State has official notice that Nicholas II. has proclaimed himself Emperor of Russia.

President Cleveland has received a personal message from the new Emperor announcing the death of his father and his succession to the throne.

Italy Pays Respect.

Rome, Nov. 2.—Cardinal Rampolla, the Papal Secretary of State, called upon the Russian Minister to the Vatican to-day conveying a message of sympathy from the Pope.

The flags on all the public buildings, including those of the various ministries, are at half mast. King Humbert has ordered the court to observe a period of mourning.

A solemn service will be held in the chapel of the Russian Embassy on Nov. 5, at which the foreign diplomats, the Italian Ministers and other prominent persons will be present. The Russian residents and sojourners in Rome will hold a mourning service in the chapel to-morrow, after which they will take an oath of fidelity to the new Emperor Nicholas II.

The Kaiser's Condolence.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—The Emperor in person called at the Russian Embassy at 11 o'clock this morning and tendered his condolences to the Russian Ambassador, Count Schouvaloff. The Prince of Hesse, all the Prussian Princes and the members of the diplomatic corps in Berlin have called at the Russian Embassy and signed their names to the visitors' list. All the official buildings and many private residences are draped with mourning and flags throughout the city are flying at half mast. The block in Unter Den Linden, facing the Russian Embassy, is constantly crowded with sightseers.

Will Attend the Funeral.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—The Emperor has announced his intention to send Prince Henry of Prussia to St. Petersburg to represent the Kaiser at the funeral of the Czar. There will be requiem services in the chapel of the Russian Embassy here every afternoon, until the funeral of the Czar takes place.

Paris, Nov. 2.—Deputy Calizat has written to M. Burdeau, president of the Chamber of Deputies, proposing that the Chamber send 12 of the members as a committee representing that body at the obsequies of the late Czar Alexander III.

Copenhagen, Nov. 2.—King Christian and Prince Waldemar will attend the funeral of the late Czar. The date of the funeral has not yet been fixed.

THE TALK OF THE WORLD.

The Probable Policy of the New Ruler Is Much Discussed.

London, Nov. 2.—Sir Charles Dilke in an interview this morning says that the late Emperor Alexander III. was a firm maintainer of peace, and his active life was a guarantee of peace, but he regarded the future under the new Emperor as uncertain because unknown.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "The Czar was self-willed, dogged and abrupt, but just. His Majesty abhorred all foreign influence, but especially that of Germany."

Paris, Nov. 2.—The Figaro, under the caption of "The Mourning of France," says: France must lower her flag to half-mast on the day of the funeral of Emperor Alexander III. on every house, not merely on the public buildings. The half-masted flag must be displayed everywhere, as it was last displayed as an emblem of joy, on the occasion of the Franco-Russian fetes. General Saussier, The Figaro says, ought to be deputed by France to attend the Czar's funeral. M. Francois Magnard, editor of The Figaro, writes in a leading article in that paper: "The new Czar is not of the build of his progenitor, nor is he of the build of his uncles. May he be given physical and moral strength to bear the burden of destiny thrust upon his shoulders before his time. The sympathy of the world and the grief of France will help him."

The Soleil praises the peaceful reign of the late Czar.

The German Press.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—The North German Gazette to-day publishes a special mourning edition. In speaking of the dead ruler, The Gazette says: He was a most severe, inflexible and dutiful protector of peace, and considered it his most sacred duty to prevent an outbreak of war in Europe. The candor and royalty of his character established confidence that the peace which Europe now enjoys would be maintained.

The Kreuz Zeitung says: He leaves to his successor a nation which he frightened by his father's terrible end, forced to retrace the roads in which his father had called them to walk. He leaves an army such as a Russian ruler never before could boast, powerful and ready for battle. After years of bad tension he leaves friendly relations with all the states of Europe. Both friend and foe agree that Alexander III. was possessed of all the virtues of a respectable private gentleman, but was little favored by nature. He was a lonely man and passed through life without any real joy. He found no friends among kings.

The Tageblatt says: He was wholly averse to his father's western tendencies, and considered it his highest duty to enlarge the scope of Russia's influence as a nation, and to propagate the Russian Church.

The Cologne Gazette says the new Emperor Nicholas II. has the reputation of being delicate, because he was somewhat weak in his childhood. To-day, The Gazette declares, he is mentally and physically a strong man, who knows exactly what he wants. His sympathies are with Germany more than with France.

The Vossische Zeitung says: At the Czar's bier we will admit that even where His Majesty erred he thought he was doing for the best. He could always be relied upon when passions were raging most wildly to exert his utmost influence to prevent the unchaining of the furies of war.

"The Chains Are Loosened."

Chicago, Nov. 2.—S. F. Adelia Sataecicki, president of the Polish National Alliance of America and the people's party nominee in the ninth senatorial district, who, as president of the alliance, represents about 280 societies in the United States, referred to the death of the Czar as a relief to the people of Russia and Poland especially, and to humanity in general. He considered that now was an opportune time for the new ruler of Russia to turn aside the hatred of millions of Russians and Poles by liberating the unfortunate victims of political oppression from their living tombs in Siberia.

"It may not be Christian-like," he said, "to gloat over the death of any one, but millions of men cannot help but rejoice at the death of this despot. As one who was the cause of sending thousands of human beings to a fate worse than death in that hell upon earth, Siberia, every lover of freedom all the world over must rejoice. It may be that his death means only a change from one despot to another, but every such change must be in the direction of loosing the chains which bear so heavily on the people."

The Czarina Completely Prostrated.

London, Nov. 2.—The Central News has this despatch from its St. Petersburg correspondent: "Despite the nominal celebration of a festival the aspect of the city is sombre and depressing. The theatres and music halls and hundreds of shops are closed. Many public buildings are draped with mourning. Thousands of private citizens have put on black. It is announced that the official period of mourning will last three months.

All despatches received to-day from Livadia agree that the Czar's death was peaceful and apparently painless. The Czarina is completely prostrated. The attacks of hysteria, for which Dr. Hershejewski treated her recently, have returned and threaten to break down her general health, besides inducing paralysis of the feet. Nevertheless the semi-official statement is that she bears up well under her trouble. Her friend and former governess, Mme. Descalle, a Belgian, has been with her throughout the ordeal. Mme. Descalle says that the Czar died in perfect peace, praying audibly with Father Ivan to almost his last breath. She describes the last scene as beautiful and impressive, although agonizing for the Czarina.

The marriage of Emperor Nicholas II. and Princess Alix of Hesse is expected to take place soon after the funeral, as the laws of the Orthodox Greek Church prohibit marriage between Nov. 26 and Jan. 18.

Her Majesty's Sorrow.

A court circular issued this evening says: Her Majesty has received with the deepest concern the sorrowful intelligence of the fatal termination of the illness of the Emperor of Russia. The Queen, who is allied with the Russian Imperial family by so many ties, feels the warmest sympathy with the afflicted Empress and her family, as well as with the young Emperor, who is about to become by marriage Her Majesty's grandson, and for whom the Queen entains sincere affection and regard.

Mayor Kennedy cabled the following message of condolence to the Royal family of Russia:

Toronto, Nov. 2, 1894.

To British Consul,
St. Petersburg, Russia:

The city of Toronto, Canada, tenders to the widow and family of the late lamented Czar of Russia its deep sympathy under the bereavement, which has fallen upon them, occasioned by the decease of the Emperor.

ROW AT BRIDGET'S WAKE.

The Williamses Wanted to Take the Corpse With Them.

New York, Nov. 3.—"This crowd is too mean even for a corpse to be with. I never saw such a wake. Help me with the body, 'Billy,' and we'll take her out. If Bridget was living she'd blush to have her dead body sit in company with such a mean lot."

Mrs. William H. Williams and her inebriated husband thereupon took the coffin and began to carry it away from the wake. That was more than the guests would have, and there was a free fight, which lasted several minutes. The Williams family were eventually ejected and then arrested by three policemen who heard the row.

All hands repaired to the police station and saw the Williams family safely put in cells. Then they returned, replaced the coffin on the trestles and resumed the wake where it had been so rudely interrupted. It broke up very late yesterday morning, but there was no more fighting, although a few satirical remarks were made by friends of the deceased.

The Williams family weren't invited, anyway, it is said. The wake was that of Mrs. Bridget Burke, and it was held at the corner of Manhattan-avenue and Java-street, Greenpoint. She was a washerwoman, 40 years old, far from prosperous, but with a great many friends and relatives, most of whom gathered to do the last honors to her body.

Patrick Keady was the manager of the wake. He has charge of many Greenpoint affairs of this kind, a manager who can direct a wake without friction and send all the guests home with enough to drink, but still in a peaceful mood being a good deal of a rarity. At only one-third of Mr. Keady's wakes are there any fights, and hardly ever is one of them raided by the police, so tactful and diplomatic is he.

When Wake Manager Keady saw the Williams family, he whispered to one of the guests: "They're going to get all the liquor they can, and when it's all gone, they're going to kick up a row because they weren't invited."

The first four rounds of the whisky bottle were partaken of by the Williams', who, however, kept nudging each other, and whispering. But after that Wake Manager Keady, suspecting their good faith, and disliking to divert any more alcohol, gave the order that in passing the bottle the Williams' be skipped.

Patrick Kelly, who sat on Mrs. Williams' left, took the bottle when it came to him, helped himself to a hearty swig, and then pointedly leaned over the Williamses and handed it to Mrs. O'Connell. The Williamses, who sat between Kelly and Mrs. O'Connell, made an ineffectual grab for it, but it eluded them.

Williams rose in hiss wrath and spoke: "Well, I'll be good and well-gormed if this isn't the meanest lot of scarecrows I ever sat with. Did you see that, Annie?"

"Did I?" screamed hiss wife, "and I think I did. Here are we, the best friends the corpsse ever had, and they leave us out of the drinking."

"You waren't invited," put in Wake Manager Keady, "and if you don't like the way the whisky bottle circulates, you can go."

"Did you hear that, Annie?" exclaimed Williams. Then seeing that the fighting blood of the crowd was up, he added: "Let's go. I know where there's a wake on that's better than this. It's twins."

"Where's your manhood, 'Billy?'" sneered his wife. "Go and leave the corpse wi' a crowd like that? Bridget was a decent woman and its her ghost that would haunt us if we left her with such folksess. Let's take herf with us."

Then began the fight, which preceded the arrest of the Williams' family.

SHOT FATHER AND MOTHER.

HORRIBLE DEED OF A BOY IN BUFFALO.

A Crazed Son Calls His Parents Out of Bed and Deliberately Shoots Both—The Mother Died Instantly and the Father Cannot Recover—The Murderer Soon Captured.

Buffalo, Nov. 2.—William Gipp, the 20-year old son of John Gipp, shot and killed his mother and fatally wounded his father early this morning. The crime was without provocation, and the murderer immediately broke away and escaped.

At No. 658 Fulton-street in a little one-story frame house lives John Gipp. That house was the scene of a terrible tragedy at about 1.30 o'clock this morning. The family consisted yesterday of John Gipp, his wife and four children, three boys and one girl. The 20-year-old boy, William, is employed by the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and works nights. About 1.30 o'clock this morning he returned home from his work, and found his mother up and dressed. At that time the neighbors heard the report of a pistol shot, and many of them hastened to the scene of the shooting. It seems that as soon as William entered the house, and without any immediate provocation, he pulled a revolver and aimed it directly at his mother. He fired twice, and one bullet struck her in the head, while the other took effect in her body. She screamed and fell to the floor, dying almost instantly.

The report of the shot and the scream of the woman aroused the family. The father was the first to appear on the scene, and the son fired twice at him, one bullet striking him at the corner of the right eye, near the nose, and the other taking effect in the right breast.

A neighbor heard the shooting, and ran with all speed to the Gipp house. He seized William and grappled with him, but the murderer succeeded in flinging off his captor, and rushed out of doors and over the back fence.

The murderer was arrested at Brockton this afternoon, and taken to Dunkirk, where he is held for the arrival of Buffalo officers. The ante-mortem statement of his father, taken by the coroner, gives no reason for the young man's awful crime, and the cause is a mystery, and must remain so unless the murderer himself decides to explain it.

Charles Schutrum, employed by a car manufacturing company, went into one of the barns of the company to-night and found a young man lying in the haymow. His clothes were bloody and he had no hat. The fellow said his name was Gipp and kept repeating in a foolish way that he wanted his hat. Schutrum led him to the police station. He went quietly enough, but once in the station it took six big men to hold him. He said he had been having a fight with a gang of robbers and had killed 20 of them. Physicians examined him to-night and declare he is suffering from acute mania. He will be committed to an asylum to-morrow.

Trade Prospects Are Not Bright.

New York, Nov. 2.—Bradstreet says business has been fair for drygoods throughout Nova Scotia, but the movement in other lines has been checked by mild weather. In New Brunswick the lobster business is poor this season. Jobbers throughout Ontario continue to order for small lots and the result is a noticeably quiet trade. In Quebec bad weather and the provincial holiday have led into business, although jobbers in groceries report increased distribution. Mid-winter trade prospects are not regarded as bright. The total number of failures reported from Canada this week is 46, as compared with 36 last week, 39 a year ago, 32 two years ago and 43 three years ago. Bank clearings at Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax aggregate $12,972,000, as compared with $20,350,000 last week, and as contrasted with $16,073,000 in the week a year ago.

Ottawa's Debentures Sell Well.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 2.—Ottawa's new issue of debentures has been disposed of by the Finance Committee. The ten-year bonds, $24,298.20 at 4 1-2 per cent., were sold at $102.40, and the 20-year bonds, $26,984 at 4 1-2 per cent., were sold at $104.40. The purchaser in each case was G. A. Stinson, Toronto.

Nocturnal Delight.

The most interesting subject in life to every man is himself. Dynasties may fall, and writers may write inspiring things, but what is that compared to the fact that he requires a sleep producer. Regina, Ontario.

The Postmaster-General has granted the petition which was presented to him for the opening of a new postoffice, to be called Regina, the name that will hereafter designate the locality at the junction of the Kingston and Kennedy-roads. Mr. W. W. Borrowman, who is building a store at Regina, will be postmaster.

Still After Them.

Postoffice Inspector Hopkirk had one of the business men of Attwood fined $10 a few days ago for enclosing money and a note in a parcel. The parcel was addressed to a Toronto party, and was sent as fifth-class mail matter. The Inspector spotted the parcel down the line, and ordered the mail clerk to open it, and in it was found a $5 bill and a note, contrary to the postal laws of Canada, which forbids enclosing writing or money in a parcel.

PHOTOGRAPHERS' OFFICERS.

Much Business Transacted at the Concluding Day's Session.

Yesterday was the last day of the Convention of the Photographic Association of Canada at Victoria Hall. Business commenced with a most interesting talk on backgrounds by Mr. C. Hetherington of Chicago, followed by a criticism of the photos on exhibition by Mr. F. L. Cornell of Albany, N.Y.

The officers were elected for the ensuing year and are as follows:

President—A. M. Cunningham, Hamilton (re-elected).

First Vice-President—A. G. Bittaway, Ottawa.

Second Vice-President—Frank Cooper, London.

Third Vice-President—W. F. Johnson, Picton.

Secretary-Treasurer—E. Poole, St. Catharines (re-elected).

The question box was opened and different members of the association replied to the queries it contained. The report of the auditors was then read.

During the afternoon session, a large amount of miscellaneous business was transacted and the names of prize-winners announced.

In the general competition for best 20 photographs, C. S. Cochrane of Hamilton was first, closely followed by Kennedy & Bell, Toronto, E. Poole, St. Catharines; Murray & Son, Brockville; S. P. Jacks, Barrie, and T. J. Barker, Chatham, in the order named.

The employes' prizes for printing were awarded to Lena Curtis, Hamilton, 1; R. Dunn, Brockville, 2, and R. Kennedy, Toronto, 3.

Retouching prizes were awarded to R. Dunn, Brockville, 1, and R. Kennedy, Toronto, 2.

Judges were F. L. Cornell, Albany, N. Y.; J. Fraser Bryce, Toronto, and Frank Cooper, London.

Toronto was selected as the most suitable place in which to hold next year's convention.

LIFE HAD NO FURTHER CHARMS.

Albert Laycock, Aged 21, Takes a Dose of Laudanum.

While in a fit of temporary insanity, Albert Laycock, aged 21, formerly employed as a stenographer in the law office of Mills & Mills, yesterday attempted to commit suicide by taking a dose of laudanum. Laycock boarded at 89 Wilton-avenue, and when the attempt was discovered the police were notified. He was taken to Police Headquarters, where Dr. King administered antidotes and ordered his removal to the General Hospital. This is Laycock's second attempt to end his life, the previous attempt having been made about a year ago.

Found Bones in the Ruins.

Niagara Falls, Nov. 2.—A force of workmen were engaged in excavating around the ramparts of the historic old French fort in this city to-day, overlooking the upper river. The ground which the workmen upturned had not been disturbed in over a century, and in one place two perfect human skeletons and a sabre were found. One of the skulls had a full set of teeth. The bones are believed to be those of the victims of the French and Indian war, relics of which are thick in the locality.

A HOUSEHOLD WORD.

A Name That Is Known As Well As That of Toronto.

Project after project has been put forward "to advertise Toronto." Many schemes have been formulated and several times the Council been approached for money grants. All this time W. & D. Dineen have been advertising their furs and hats, and to-day, when away from home, you speak to a stranger of this city, he says, "Toronto? Oh, yes! That's where Dineen the hatter lies." This reputation has not been achieved simply by advertising, but by keeping an up-to-date stock of hats and selling at moderate prices.

To-day we open up our annex, 6 King-street west, and are showing the latest and best productions of all the leading hatters.

We have a full range of the best lightweight, English-made raincoats from $10. A manufacturer's stock of silk umbrellas, which we placed on sale on Friday, is going quickly, customers speedily recognizing the exceptional value offered. Both our stores, cor. King and Yonge-streets and 254 Yonge-street, will be open until 10.30 to-night.

The Chrysanthemum Show.

About this time of the year we are apt to be necessarily satisfied to look upon the beauties of nature as they are displayed indoors, and the fact reminds one that the Toronto Gardeners' and Florists' Association generally supply something interesting in this way during November. It is therefore an established fact that the above show will be held in the Pavilion on dates 20 to 23, inclusive, giving our readers ample opportunity of feasting on the beautiful during any of these days. The prize lists are now ready and can be had by addressing the secretary.

Morris Was in Berlin.

Berlin News: An embezzler from Springfield, Ohio, who had been judge and postmaster, and for whose apprehension a reward of $900 is offered, was recognized at the Walper House Tuesday evening by a traveler who had formerly lived in Springfield. A Springfield detective had been in Toronto looking for him, but arrived too late.

PORT ARTHUR IS INVESTED.

THE JAPS HAVE COMPLETELY SURROUNDED THE FORTRESS.

The Road to Moukden Is Now Open for Japanese Forces—Expect to Be Within Striking Distance Within a Week—Reported Decisive Victory Won By the Japanese.

London, Nov. 2.—The Japanese Legation has this despatch, dated at Tokyo to-day: The first army, under the command of Marshal Yamagata, has got possession of Fong Fang Chen and has defeated the Chinese, who are fleeing toward Natien-Ling. The second army, under Marshal Oyama, is attacking Kinchow. Both Talien-Wah and Port Arthur are in a critical condition.

The capture of Fong Fang Chen leaves the road to Moukden clear for the Japanese. Marshal Yamagata is expected to be within striking distance of Moukden on Nov. 10. It is believed that the city is held by a very large but untrained and poorly-equipped force.

Second Army Landed.

Yokohama, Nov. 2.—The second Japanese army has landed on the Gulf of Liantung, at a point four days' march from Kinchow and a battle is imminent. It is stated here that the Japanese forces have completely invested Port Arthur, by land and sea, and both armies are being rapidly pushed in the direction of Moukden. It is intended that the Japanese army, under Field Marshal Oyama, shall attack the Chinese at Kinchow, 40 miles northeast of Port Arthur. Gen. Nodzu's advance column in the meanwhile is approaching Fung-Whang, a fortified town on the main road between Wi-Ju and Moukden, to which place all the Chinese forces retreated after vacating their position north of the Yalu River. The Japanese expect to defeat the Chinese at both places and unite their forces in front of Moukden.

Reported Chinese Victory.

Shanghai, Nov. 2.—It is announced in the native papers that the Chinese troops have recaptured Kienlien-Chang, after desperate fighting. The Japanese are said to have been driven out of the place, with a loss of 3000 killed and wounded. Upon good authority it is reported that the Japanese are leaving Port Arthur and its vicinity.

London, Nov. 2.—A despatch to the Central News from Shanghai says that 10,000 additional troops are leaving Wu-Chang for Chin-Kiang, whence they will go over land to Tien-Tsin. This will make 40,000 troops which have been sent to the front by the Viceroy Chang.

WAS NOT CHATELLE.

The Listowel Butcher Never an Inmate of Toronto Asylum.

A report has been in circulation in the city for some days to the effect that Amedee Chattelle, the murderer of Jessie Keith at Listowel, was an inmate of the Central Prison and was transferred to the Toronto Asylum last July.

The World interviewed the prison and asylum authorities yesterday and ascertained that Chattelle was never an inmate of either institution, although it had been at first supposed that he was identical with Jules Caromel, committed from Gananoque in March last for six months on a charge of vagrancy and transferred on July 26 to the asylum from which he was released a few weeks later. Caromel was afforded transportation to Montreal.

Commencement Exercises.

A large and fashionable audience was present last night at the annual commencement exercises of the Jameson-avenue Collegiate Institute. Chairman William Roaf of the Collegiate Institute Board presented the diplomas, and J. D. Webster, B.A., president of the Graduates' Association, Theodore H. Rand, M.A., Chancellor of McMaster University, and Arthur E. McFarlane delivered addresses. The Glee Club and Choral Class gave an excellent rendering of several part songs, and the Misses Tasker, Jewell and Dyke also took part in the program.

At the Court of Revision.

One of the incidents of the proceedings yesterday was the decision of the court accepted the evidence of Mr. H.S. Mara, one of the best known and most reliable valuators in the city. He was there attending to the business of clients, and frequently the members of the board would appeal to him for an opinion as to value of the property before them. The Assessment Commissioner, Mr. Maughan, also stated that he would accept Mr. Mara's valuation, because it was certain to be based on knowledge of property and would be conscientiously given.

Single Tax Association.

Considerable talk was indulged in at the Single Tax meeting last night about the goings-on of the Patrons and the ratepayers. They concluded that they could stand local option in taxation if the other fellows could. Next Friday evening at their annual meeting they will discuss the matter further, and will also listen to an address from Ex-Alderman William M. Hall, on the Hare-Spence system of proportional representation. An actual election (of seven committeemen) will be held to illustrate his remarks. Broadway Hall is the place of meeting.

Crushed Under Wagon Wheels.

Hamilton, Nov. 2.—Dan. Wray of Brockton was drawing in turnips, and his son Frank was with him in the field throwing turnips into the wagon. The little fellow had reached under the wagon for a turnip, and his father, not noticing him, started the horses. One of the hind wheels passed over the boy's abdomen. He will die.
