SENTENCE OF DEATH FOR JOSEPH JESSIMAN

Justice Riddell Passes Judgment on Man Who Killed James Lougheed.

Joseph Jessiman will be hanged Feb. 22, 1912, for the murder of James Lougheed.

The crime was committed on Hayterst. on Aug. 29 last.

The following were the words of Justice Riddell of the assize court, in passing sentence:

"You will be taken back to the place from whence you came, there to be kept in close confinement until Thursday, Feb. 22, 1912, when you will be taken to the place of execution and there be hanged by the neck until you are dead."

Upon being asked if he had anything to say before the sentence was passed, he said: "No, I have nothing to say. I know I did it and that it was forced on me. It was no delusion, and I am satisfied to go out without a word. I have never been a coward, and I will never be a scoundrel."

After receiving the sentence, the prisoner squared his shoulders and with almost a swagger, followed his jailer from the court room. His lordship promised to make a full report to the higher authorities of the evidence produced at the trial, showing that Jessiman was insane at the time of the deed.

CHICAGO "WIDE OPEN."

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Charges that Chicago gamblers kept a fund on hand of $40,000 for use in "easing up public officials," were made by Harry Brolaski, former gambler, before the civil service commission to-day in its investigation into public gambling and other vices.

Brolaski said he came to Chicago last May at the request of Benj. Hyman and other friends, with the intention of investigating gambling and cleaning up the city. He said he found Chicago a wide-open town with gambling controlled by Mont. Tennes, Tom McGinnis and others.

WOOD FOR LATHS.

Within two years the number of kinds of wood used for laths has been doubled. This increase is illustrative of the extent to which lath product is becoming an adjunct to larger wood industries. Small quantities of lumber of odd sizes, slabs and what would otherwise be mill waste, are conserved and used to advantage in this way. The forestry branch of the department of the interior has compiled statistics for 1910 showing that 12 species of wood were used in the production of the eight hundred and fifty-two million pieces of lath produced in 1910, worth one million nine hundred and forty-three thousand dollars.

The first six species in importance were spruce, white pine, cedar, douglas fir, hemlock and balsam, which also are the woods used for some time in the manufacture of laths. The remaining six, jack-pine, red pine, yellow pine, poplar, basswood and larch are the new species increasing in importance. Spruce and white pine laths, the two most important species, show a decrease in 1910 from the year previous, but together form nearly 70 per cent. of the annual output. Some million and a half more pieces of cedar were cut in 1910 than in 1909, and the amount for this species of seventy million pieces made up one-twelfth of the total. Prices ranged from $1.25 for yellow pine to $3.18 per thousand for poplar.

No Need to Hurry.

Theatrical folks love to tell of a western manager, now prominent in the business, who made fame and fortune as proprietor of a small variety house in San Francisco.

The thrifty German had accumulated considerable money, and was about to open a new theatre. Several hours before the first performance the entrance was packed, and the manager in trying to reach the front door became hopelessly imprisoned in the crush.

"Here, here," he yelled, "peeples, peeples, it's me—it's Mr. Warner!"

As no one appeared to take any notice of him, he again yelled at the top of his voice:

"Vait a minutes, peeples. Vat's de use of pooshing lige dis? Take your time—de first two acts is rotten."—San Francisco Star.

Mixed Metaphor in House of Commons

Major Archer Shee's wonderful sentence, "Even the Stygian eloquence of the chancellor of the exchequer has not been able to wash the white elephant entirely," would certainly have to figure in a new budget of "Misfortunes in Metaphor," by Sir Henry Lucy. Irishmen naturally contributed to the selection he gave 30 years ago. There was Mr. O'Connor Power's "Mr. Speaker, sir, the government have let the cat out of the bag, there is nothing to be done but to take the bull by the horns." But two English members gave the collector a double event one night. Alderman Cotton remarked: "At one stage of the negotiations a great European struggle was so imminent that it only required a spark to let slip the dogs of war"; and Mr. Forster began a peroration with "I will, Mr. Speaker, all down by saying——."—London Chronicle.

LUMBER CUT IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

The rapid exploitation of lumber in British Columbia is increasing yearly and almost made this province the equal of Ontario in point of lumber cut for 1910. Statistics of the Dominion lumber cut for 1910, collected by the forestry branch of the department of the interior, state that one billion six hundred and twenty million feet of lumber, worth nearly twenty-five million dollars, was cut in British Columbia in 1910.

As a result of greatly increased cutting in the fir and cedar forests, the total amount cut was more than doubled in one year. In 1909 the British Columbia cut constituted one-fifth of the total; in 1910 the proportion formed by the western province was one-third, and it lacked only forty-five million feet of surpassing the cut in Ontario. Seven important softwoods make up over 99 per cent of the cut in British Columbia—douglas fir, cedar, western yellow pine, tamarack, spruce, hemlock and jackpine. Nearly forty-five per cent. of the total was made up by douglas fir. This species was cut in 1910 to the extent of nearly seven hundred and twenty million feet and had the largest actual increase shown by any species—an increase of nearly two hundred and fifty million feet.

Cedar composed one-fifth of the total and was the second wood in magitude of cut. The three hundred and fifteen million feet of this species cut was an increase of two hundred and seventeen million feet over the 1909 production. The cut of yellow pine amounting to one hundred and eighty-three million feet, was nearly six times as much as the amount cut in 1909 and was sufficient to raise it from fourteenth to sixth place in importance among the lumber producing trees of Canada.
