ZAM-BUK CURES ARE PERMANENT

When you treat a sore, a cut, or a skin disease with Zam-Buk, you get a cure which is permanent—not mere temporary relief. Is not this what you are looking for? Read what these people say. They have proved Zam-Buk:

Mr. John Evans, of Lawrence St., Halifax, N.S., says:—"I had blood poison in my hand and was nearly driven frantic by the pain. Zam-Buk gave me ease, and quickly cured the terrible sore. Before I used Zam-Buk the sore had partly healed and opened again, but since the cure by Zam-Buk it has never again broken out. It is now two years since Zam-Buk cured me."

Mr. T. M. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, Crier at the High Court of Justice, says:—"I had eczema for twenty-five years. Zam-Buk cured me after everything I had tried during that long period had failed. This was over three years ago. I am still happy to say there has been not the slightest trace of recurrence of the ailment."

Mr. Earle G. Appleby, Big River, Sask., says:—"Zam-Buk cured a bad sore on my heel, which had defied all remedies I had previously tried. This was some months ago. I have had no trouble since. The wound is permanently healed."

Scores of people have written to the Company telling of similar experiences. For skin sores, eczema, cold cracks, ringworm, blood poison, children's sore places, cuts, burns, scalds, piles, ulcers, etc., Zam-Buk is absolutely without equal. 50c. box, all stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse substitutes and harmful imitations. There's nothing "just as good" as Zam-Buk.

Literary Gossip From the Motherland

(Times' Special Correspondence)

London, Oct. 22 — Arnold Bennett must have become terribly modest all of a sudden, for it appears that he recently declined to have his portrait published, in company with those of other male celebrities, in a book provisionally called, "Men of Genius," and gave his consent only when the name of the work was changed to "Men of Mark." The author of this work, who is my authority for this statement, is an internationally famous photographer, Alvin Langdon Coburn, to whose exhibition of camera pictures at the ultra-fashionable Goupil Gallery all the social and literary world of London is now flocking.

After describing his decidedly original methods, he remarked that of all his sitters the one who gave him most trouble so far as getting a successful likeness was concerned, was Robert Bridges, the Poet Laureate.

"I made his portrait in my own studio," said the camera artist to me, "and twenty different plates were unsatisfactory. So I went to Oxford and photographed him in his own library, sitting at the piano. His hair is a little ruffled, just as it was when he had been leaning back in his chair. I never touch my sitters in the way of smoothing their hair or adjusting their ties, or pulling down their collars. Even small things like these might be characteristic."

George Bernard Shaw, Mr. Coburn described as one of the most pleasant surprises of his life.

"Of course, I had read all his books and plays before I met him," he said, "and I expected something quite different from this blue-eyed, fair-haired man, with the simple, kindly, unaffected manner. He was kindness itself to me, and he is always doing a good turn for someone."

Mr. Coburn photographed W. B. Yeats while the poet was chanting one of his own odes, and his portrait of George Moore shows that author drinking in the beauties of a statuette by Rodin. Mr. Chesterton looks, as G. B. Shaw put it in a preface, "a large, abounding, gigantically cherubic person . . . swearing off the plate in the very act of being photographed," while Max Beerbohm has a charming air of wondering serenity.

Some people have "deduced," by the way, from the fact that his present exhibition consists of male portraits only, that the artist is a misogynist, but he laughed when asked if this were a fact, and said that the portraits in question are merely those that compose his renamed "Men of Mark." Mr. Coburn is now, he says, engaged on a similar series called "Wonderful Women," which will contain a particularly striking one of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, and a particularly charming one of Maude Adams.

Writing of Arnold Bennett reminds me that, accompanied by his pretty French wife, he has just quitted this island for Belgium, where he intends to get busy with a new play.

A distinguished French authoress who was lately introduced to one of the most important and least imposing, personally, of the European monarchs, was asked last week what she thought of him. "If I were out fishing and caught him," she replied, "I would put him back."

At the London Hippodrome, where Sir James Barrie's little drama, "Half-an-Hour," is being done, I had as my neighbor, last night, A. E. W. Mason, who apparently greatly enjoyed his friend Barrie's play.

Barrie and Mason are literary chums. They rollick together in Switzerland like two merry schoolboys. Mason spent four years in parliament. Barrie had more sense. Mason has strong dramatic leanings. He was once associated with the Bensons, and he lives in Sir Henry Irving's flat. But Barrie can give him a long start in theatrical success. "The Witness for the Defence," is the biggest thing "A. E. W." has done for the stage. If only he could write a play with the grip of "The Four Feathers!"

Matter of Thirst

Senator Thomas Sterling of South Dakota, expansively smiled the other day when one of the party in a Washington gabfest referred to the traditional thirst of the Indian. He said that he was reminded of a little incident that recently happened in the far west:

A man who had been traveling through the Indian country, according to the senator, met a friend on his return home and was telling him of his experiences on the trip.

"It is simply wonderful," related the man, "how those Indians love whisky. They will make most any sacrifice to get it. One day I met one crossing the plains on a pony and he offered me his bridle for a drink."

"Offered you his bridle?" was the amazed rejoinder of the friend. "You don't really mean it!"

"Yes," responded the other, "and when I refused he offered me the bridle and the saddle and the pony."

"It seems almost incredible," commented the friend. "Of course you accepted a great chance like that."

"Not on your life!" was the emphatic rejoinder of the traveler. "I had only one drink left."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

FINE FRANCO-PRUSSIAN STORY

Historic pictures always contain a particularly pronounced element of interest, and the two-reel Franco-Prussian war story, "The Fugitive at Bay," which is to be concluded at the Star Theatre tonight holds the watcher in closest attention from the beginning to the end. Large crowds saw this fine picture last night, and the marvelous detail, magnificent scenery, and unusually good acting made it actually a masterpiece. The Star's other pictures are: "The Stolen Jewels," a Vitagraph detective story aboard ship, in which Maurice Costello, Clara Kimball Young and other popular stars took part; and a very attractive summer-time picture showing racing yachts off Newport, and water sports generally in the leading American resorts. There will be a new bill of pictures entirely for tomorrow.

STEAMER TURNS TURTLE IN THE LAKE STORM

The gale of Sunday reduced the Port Huron life saving boat house to wreckage and with it went all of the lifeboats in service here. For this reason Captain Plough could not man a boat this afternoon to go to the assistance of the vessel.

"I have no doubt that every man aboard the vessel is drowned," said Captain Thomas Reid. "My men have reported that the steamer is a total wreck that she is turned turtle, and that her stern is completely submerged."

Searching parties from Sarnia are proceeding up the lake shore to a point near where the wreckage was sighted. The shore will be searched in an effort to obtain some trace of the steamer. The vessel lies in about sixty feet of water.

On Lake Superior, Too

Calumet, Mich., Nov. 11—In the face of a fifty mile gale, shifting from northeast to northwest, on Lake Superior last night, fear was expressed for the safety of the crew of twenty-three men aboard a steamer stranded on Gull Rock off Manitou Island. The life saving crew after a three hours' battle with the heavy seas, a stiff wind on shore and a snow storm, failed to get to the steamer last night, principally because they are not equipped with a power boat. Another effort will be made today.

Sault Ste Marie, Mich, Nov. 11—Down bound steamers continue to arrive heavily iced after the fierce storm which is sweeping over the lakes.. The Superior last evening reported a Tomlinson line steamer sunk off Gross Cape Point. Another big steamer still unidentified was reported aground on Point Iroquois last night.

Alpena, Mich. Nov. 11—The steamer Acadian, a 300-foot steel freighter, owned by the Merchants' Mutual Line of Toronto, went hard aground on a reef in Thunder Bay, seven miles off this port on Sunday. Captain Robert McIntyre and his crew are believed to be safe on board.

The wind last night had decreased considerably, and the sea was moderating.

Port Huron, Mich., Nov. 11—When the tug Sarnia City returned this forenoon, after an all night watch over the big steel freighter which lies upside down in Lake Huron, she brought no additional information as to the identity of the vessel. The name remains far beneath the water, and the waves are still rolling high.

Thirty or Forty Drowned

Captain Reid of the tug returned more firm than ever in his belief that all of the thirty or forty members of the crew must have been drowned.

Captain Plough, in charge of the local life-saving station, left this morning with his crew for the scene of the wreck. Searching parties were also organized to patrol the shore in search of wreckage. Reports indicate that a shifting of cargo, may have been responsible for the accident.

Another Disaster

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 11—Lightship No. 82 carrying a crew of eight persons, and stationed in Lake Erie, off Point Abino, fifteen miles west of this city, is reported lost by incoming vesselmen, and is believed to have foundered during the recent storm.

One of Bryan's Best Stories

In the year after coming to Nebraska, in 1888, I delivered fifty speeches against the republican candidate for governor, and in each one made it clear why he should not be elected.

He was elected however, by the usual majority.

On the following St. Patrick's Day I was to make a short speech and Governor Thayer (whom I had tried to defeat) presided. It was a varied programme, consisting of songs and speeches and vaudeville numbers. It was the first time I had been in the presence of the governor and I wondered whether he felt any resentment toward me for all the work I had done against him.

At last my turn was reached. The governor, having been prompted by another man, arose and said: "The next person on the programme is W. J. Bryan." and as I came forward he stepped toward me, smiled, and extended his hand. I felt greatly pleased that he did not harbor any resentment against me, and grasped his hand warmly as he drew me toward him and whispered: "Quick! Do you speak, sing or dance?"

He had never even heard of me—Collier's Weekly.

CHILD HAD BRONCHITIS

Once people get acquainted with the wonderful control which Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine exerts over bronchitis, whooping cough, croup and colds it is not easy to persuade them that anything else is "just as good." This is why the imitators never get very far.

In 1902, Mrs. Eugene Iler, King street, Truro, N. S., wrote as follows:

"From an infant one of my children was troubled with bronchitis, and the least cold would aggravate the trouble. We could not get anything to help him, and were often greatly alarmed. Hearing of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a treatment for bronchitis, we used it, and are glad to state that it effected a complete cure. If any of the children take a cold or cough I give this medicine, and have never known it to fail to bring relief."

Mrs. Iler now writes that she has since proven this medicine to be a cure for whooping cough, and would not be without it in the house.

CANADA CLASSED WITH SPAIN IN MATTER OF PRISON REFORM

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 11—Dr. W. Bruce Smith, inspector of prisons and charities for Ontario, gave interesting evidence before the commission appointed to investigate conditions at the Kingston penitentiary.

According to him, Canada today is classed with Spain in the matter of prison reform owing to the indifference displayed in the matter of classification of prisoners. All other countries recognize the necessity of keeping, first offenders separate and distinct from the more hardened criminals. There should be a phychoanalysis made of every man. His family record and his clinical history should be charted in much the same manner as that introduced in recent years in Ontario hospitals for the insane.

Punishment is what has been aimed at instead of reformation. The mistake is recognized, but for some reason or other, some one has for years been clogging the wheels of progress in prison reform at Ottawa. The parole system as carried out in Canada is farcical and should be remodelled to comply with the probation systems which have in other countries proved so helpful in reformative work.

SAVE MONEY BY DOING ITS OWN STREET PAVING

Calgary, Alberta, Nov. 11—Figures just prepared show that the Calgary municipal paving plant has laid pavements at approximately twenty-five cents a square yard cheaper than private firms. One hundred and forty thousand square yards of asphalt have been laid by the city plant this year at an average cost of $2.10 a square yard, after allowing for all expenses. The average price paid to private companies during the year for the same work was $2.35, so that the city has made a saving of $35,000.

Next year the programme will likely be extended and much more work done by the city plant.
