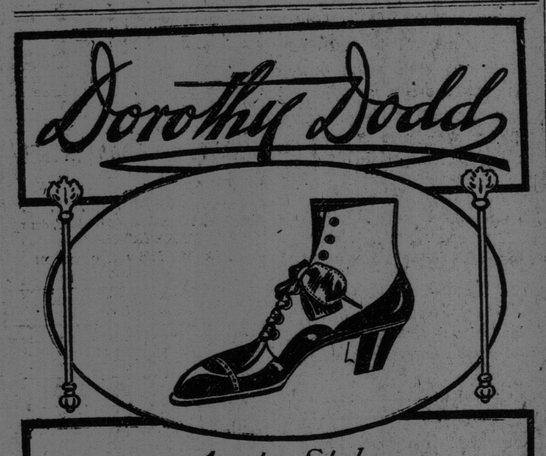
Dorothy Dodd



As to Style

THE Style of the "Dorothy Dodd" Shoe is proverbial. The time was when woman's feet were sacrificed to style. A stylish shoe was expected to be uncomfortable. But then came the "Dorothy Dodd" idea that Style should be one of the chief comforts in a woman's shoe. Simply by following Nature's lines of the feet, the "Dorothy Dodd" was made at once the most stylish as well as the most comfortable of shoes.

SOME OF HANNAH'S THOUGHTS

Editor Times:

"The lightening bug is brilliant,
But it hasnt any mind,
It blunders through existence
With its head-light on behind.

This quotation is my auto-biography in a nutshell. Hannah says the fire-fly is all right. She calls them stars glinting in the meadows and bushes at night. Hannah is practical but she has a sense for the beautiful in scenery,—night or day.

Whatever she says goes with me. She taught school awhile before we came together, and her memory is stored with quotations from the Reader. We were late geting supper last night,—I couldn't find the cows. After milking time Hannah and I were sipping tea and eating cornfritters out at the back porch. Hannah was talking. She said it was mercy that she ever consented to have me for a husband. "If I had any one else to care for me, which is doubtful, I would not be able to write for the papers." She said, she felt proud of me.

"Buckwheat," she exclaimed, "your name expresses more than the maple leaf as a national symbol. It is both beautiful and useful—Two great things in life,—What is more beautiful and musical than a field of buckwheat in bloom and thousands of bees gathering honey from each opening flower? Then think of the millions of buckwheat cakes that are laid as a corner stone to our young and rising generation, the only ceremony being the passing of the molasses jar. Then when these youngsters grow up and go out into the world they move it along. They are leaders as editors, doctors, statesmen, preachers and merchants and what-not."

She then repeated a couplet from the old Reader—Words she often makes use of, by Cowper:

"God made the country,
Man made the town."

I watched my chance and looked to see if it would take—"Hannah you ought to have been the spouse of Laurier or Roosevelt. Your learning and talents would adorn such a position."

She said she knew that long ago, but—"Many a flower is born to blush unseen and waste its fragrance on the desert air."

We went into the kitchen and lit the light. Hannah put a few drops of peppermint on my handkerchief. She always uses peppermint for a scent, she says it smells stronger is cheaper and lasts longer than other scents. Then it is useful, you can take a few drops on sugar for cramps

I was going to tell you all about our marriage and golden wedding but the cows got out of the cowyard into Hannah's cabbage patch, so she made me quit rather abruptly, and so when I got the cows back through the bars and came in the house, Hannah said, It's bed time; take off your boots and get ready for bed." She asked me if the cows did much damage to the cabbages. My Sunday school teacher told me to always tell the truth—like George Washington—so I said, "a few dozen cabbages are now in the cuds of the cows, but they will give more milk in the morning." Hannah is a good wife, but she is subject to brain storms. I generally go to the woodpile or barn till the storm is over. It was night and I had my boots off, so I sat down in the corner "till the clouds rolled by." The way Hannah talked you'd think I'd ate the cabbages. Red headed women are good natured and quick tempered, but they never turn grey and their freckles are always in harmony. Hannah talked so quick I could not take any notes. She illustrated her remarks by flinging things around. I wished I was at the Hague peace conference. I heard the word divorce very often. "All things come to those who only wait." So after a while Hannah said, come away to bed—what are you staying up so late for?" I rubbed some Johnston's liniment on some places and went to bed. Hannah kept on talking after going to bed.

I have been in town over night sometimes and heard the bell and fog horn. They sound as if all the world was dead. So I tried to think it was a little rough outside and would be calm in the morning; so I fell asleep. We took one another for better or worse—it's sometimes worse, often better, like everything else. Anyway Hannah is like a big sunflower, cloud or shine, summer or winter. If your office doors are big enough I want to bring her in when we're down shopping. I'll let you know beforehand, as you had better take one of Hawker's tonics as a bracer.

Yours,
BUCKWHEAT.

COMPLAINS OF CRUELTY

Mrs. James Wells of 125 Sheriff street will sue her husband for a divorce on the ground of cruelty and desertion.

She maintains that her husband has never supported her properly and when he was drunk treated her cruelly. Mrs. Wells alleges that shortly before leaving his home about a month ago he inhumanly beat the eldest child, a girl of seven years old. She adds that, one day during her absence from home, he told a neighbor he would shoot her and the two children if he caught them outside. Mrs. Wells intends having him arrested for cruelty to herself and the children, and if this proves unproductive of better results she will seek divorce.

PRESENTED WITH AN ADDRESS

Rabbi Rabinowitz, who leaves shortly to take charge of a large synagogue in Brooklyn, N. Y., was presented with an address on Tuesday evening by the congregation of the Hazen Avenue synagogue. The address was read by A. S. Hart. It congratulated him on his new appointment, referred to his faithful service here and expressed regret at his departure. The Rabbi made a fitting reply. He will give his farewell lecture in St. John on Sunday, August 18.
