A great foot-race came off at Buffalo on Wednesday last, for a purse of £1,000, between two whites and eighteen Indians. One of the Indians, named CANADA, won the race, making his ten miles in fifty-five minutes and forty-five seconds. JACKSON, "the American Deer," coming in some six rods behind him. This is said to be the best time on record.

A CALIFORNIA HOUSE.—We noticed, during the week, at the shop of Mr. Edwards, in Herbert street, a small house which he has been preparing for shipment to California. It is really quite a curiosity. We did not take the dimensions, but should estimate them at about twenty by twenty four feet. The peculiarity of it consists in the fact that all its parts are capable of easy and quick separation and union. It may be taken apart in sections, somewhat as the window shutters of our stores are used, each section fitting accurately into its neighbor. When apart it may be so stowed as to take up a very small bulk, and it may be put up in an hour. It is so tight that during our last NE. storm, the inside of it remained perfectly dry. Mr. Edwards has already made several, and has orders for several others. The whole cost is only about $125.—Salem Observer.

A young lady of Boston has accepted an offer of $400 per month to act as book-keeper in a mercantile house in San Francisco.

The ship Leopard, which is about to sail from Boston for San Francisco, takes out several entire families, and a party of single ladies, who are bound for the gold regions.

A number of gentlemen of Rochester have formed a company for the purpose of erecting at San Francisco a hotel, which shall greatly surpass in size and elegance all other establishments of the kind in that place. They design to have the edifice ready to be shipped early in November. It is to accommodate 200 inmates.

It is estimated that 40,000,000 feet of lumber have been shipped from this country to California. At a profit of $50 a thousand, this amount would yield an aggregate profit of $2,000,000. We notice in the Pacific News an advertisement of Riga lumber from the Baltic.

(From the London Times.)

Our age is steadily advancing towards good in much; but in one thing it shamefully goes astray. In its humanity, it is grand—in its lust of gold, most pitiful, most mean. With us the great social sin is poverty—the great incentive to crime the possession of wealth. Not for passion, not in madness, have any of the late murders been committed. Simply, in some cases, to gain a few, a very few, extra pounds, have we seen murderer after murderer lift his guilty hand. Each crime is more revolting than its predecessor—each revelation more degrading to human nature than the last. It was a relief to know in Annette Myer another motive than avarice—sick and sated as the world is with seeing life for ever balanced against money and found wanting, though the scales be filled with only penny pieces.

As a stimulus to this modern vice, the discovery of California threatens to be disastrous to the higher morality of society; and it is with much the same sorrow as we feel in reading the statistics of pestilence, that we hear of tens of thousands flocking out to dig for gold rather than gain their bread in manlier and nobler ways. For there is much to be done yet in the world. There are vast regions of untrodden waste which with industry could be made fruitful fields; and this conquest of man over nature, instead of perplexing the world with fears for the "currency" and mis-givings about the "depreciation of the circulating medium," would give food to the finishing and labor to the unemployed. When such extravagant prices are given for the most ordinary necessaries at San Francisco, we cannot but think how much better it would have been if all the money that has been taken out to California to amass more had been applied to useful purposes at home. As it is, we see but little promise of general advantage in this Californian fascination; and we only hope that men may bring more wisdom thence than they carry thither, and that others may learn from their experience that gold is not the one Good Thing.

INDIA COTTON CULTIVATION.—It will be seen by the following article from the London Morning Chronicle, that the efforts which have been put forth during the last few years to make India a cotton-growing country that might rival the United States, have entirely failed:—

We regret to notice the failure and abandonment of the experiments in cotton cultivation that have been carried on, under Dr. Wight's superintendence, at Madras. This enterprise, which had for its object the production of an article less palpably inferior to the cotton of America than the present badly-picked and indifferent Indian commodity, was zealously, and even lavishly, supported by the local government; but the late failure of a similar experiment in Bengal, after an outlay of about £100,000, had already given fair warning of the probable issue of Dr. Wight's efforts in the sister presidency. Considered as a scientific attempt to improve the cultivation and the mode of cleansing heretofore practised in India, it was undoubtedly interesting and may possibly have already exercised a beneficial influence. But if it was prompted by any hope of restoring cotton to the place it once held in the export trade of India, we are sorry to say that no project could well have been more chimerical. The changes effected in the Indian export trade within the last half century, are far too significant to admit of a doubt on that head. Fifty years ago, India shipped to this country cotton goods to the value of three millions sterling—in fact, it paid its tribute in cotton. At the present time, the process is exactly reversed, and India imports British manufactures of American cotton to the same amount. The causes which have conspired to produce this result were irresistible. In the first place, the inventions of Hargreave and Arkwright soon rendered it far cheaper for the Indian consumer to purchase British fabrics than to weave them himself. In the next place, the capital and mechanical skill which, since the introduction of Whitney's saw gin, in 1793, have been brought to bear by the Americans on the cleansing of the pods, have given their product an excellence which the Indian planter cannot approach. The result has been a depression of the one trade, and an extension of the other, so prodigious that, in the words of Mr. M'Culloch, "there is nothing in the history of industry to compare with it, unless it be the growth of the manufacture in this country."—In 1790, America did not export a single pound. In 1834, she exported as much as all the rest of the world put together. And in 1846, out of 467,856,274lbs. imported into this country, 410,949,993lbs. came from the United States, while only 34,546,143 lbs. were supplied by the East Indies and Ceylon.

Already, opium, indigo, and in a minor degree, sugar, have almost entirely taken the place of cotton among the exports of India. While there is a yearly export of the first of these products to the value of three millions, of the second to upwards of two millions, and of the third to nearly a million and a half, the total value of the cotton exported in 1845, from the three presidencies, does not amount to £60,000. And now the failure of the experiments made by the Governments of Bengal and Madras, with every appliance of skill and capital to ensure success, will at any rate render it extremely dubious whether cotton be fated to resume its rank among the great staples of India.

From the Montreal Transcript, July 22, 1848.

We think it but due to Dr. Wistar that we should add our testimony to numerous others as to the extraordinary merits of his medicine in certain cures, particularly where the patient has complained of pain in the side, or in cases of an asthmatical character.

We are personally acquainted with many persons who have experienced immense relief from the use of this medicine, when laboring under the diseases above mentioned; and as in the changeable climate of Canada these diseases are more than usually common, any medicine calculate to counteract them must be of value.

We are aware that it has a large and still increasing sale, and has been very generally and beneficially used since its introduction into Canada three years ago—and the very fact of its having stood the test of three years' experience is proof of its value.

We are not in the habit of recommending patent medicines unless the benefits conferred by them have come under our own observation; but in the present instance we can recommend WISTAR'S BALSAM of WILD CHERRY, as a medicine worthy of the confidence of the public in diseases of the Chest and Side, and in many cases in this city severe Coughs have yielded to its influence.
