CHARGE WITNESSES EAVESDROP AT TRIAL

though she was not anxious to come to Sarnia to do so.

At this juncture, counsel for the defence, directed witness to look towards the jury, as it appeared to them she was being coached as to what to say by certain persons seated at or near prosecution tables.

Wore Peaked Cap.

McMullen, Mrs. Hunt continued, wore a peaked cap.

Attorney McEvoy questioned witness if she had seen the "display of rifles" ini the hands of provincial police at the Wyoming preliminary hearing.

"Yes," was the reply.

"And that's the way they administer justice," stated counsel.

H. A. Williams of Watford, garage owner, testified that two strangers came into his place of business about 1 p.m. Oct. 20 and purchased a set of chains. He indicated McMullen as one of the men. They returned a few minutes later, witness related to purchase a windshield cleaner.

Cross-examined, witness stated he could not remember ever seeing counsel (John M. McEvoy) in his garage.

"Will you swear I was not there within the past three months," persisted counsel, "with a Chevrolet Baby Grand?"

"No," replied Williams.

The latter stated the men drove up in a McLaughlin Six machine, but was uncertain whether there were others seated in the car.

Detectives showed him photos of the men a week ago, he said, and although they did not say they were the alleged bank robbers, he "had an idea" they were.

He saw their pictures in the London Advertiser a day or two previous to the time he saw them in the Lambton county jail.

"What have you got to conceal about this matter?" questioned counsel, sharply, as witness did not respond to his questions quickly. "They went with you to the jail?"

Witness replied that he was accompanied by Inspector Gadsen, Officer Atkins, and a man named Jones.

"Where does this man Jones live?" thundered counsel for defense.

"I do not know," was the reply.

"Are you sure he does not live in London, speak out loud, don't be afraid," persisted Attorney McEvoy.

"I don't know," replied witness.

"Was Jones driving the car," interjected His Honor Judge A. Taylor at this juncture.

"No," replied Williams. The latter believed that McMullen wore an overcoat when he entered his store, but he was not sure about his companion. The man he saw did not wear a moustache.

Robert Auld of Warwick Township stated that the day of the robbery he took his machine to the Williams garage in Watford to have it repaired.

Identifies Prisoner.

He remembered seeing a McLaughlin special machine in the village that day standing near the Watford postoffice. Shortly after 1 p.m. he noticed four men standing by its side, one of whom was now in the prisoner's dock.

Witness stated that he first saw the alleged bandit standing by the Sterling Bank. He heard him say later to his companions, "It's no use here, boys, let's go on."

Then they left the town, he added.

Cross-examined Auld said he became suspicious when he heard one of the four speak to those with him about, "Let's go on."

At this juncture at the instigation of Attorney Newton, John M. McEvoy complained to Judge Taylor that a certain spectator was standing at the door of the court, listening to the evidence, and then reporting the same to Provincial Officer Atkins, who in turn was carrying the information to the crown witnesses in their waiting-room.

"Decidedly Wrong."

The bench ruled that if correct, such was "decidedly wrong," and sending for Sheriff Albert Johnson, directed that constables be placed at all doors to prevent any possible eavesdropping.

Witness was positive that McMullen was the man in front of the postoffice, and was equally confident that he was smooth-shaven.

Questioned if it could be proved that the prisoner wore a moustache on the day in question, he could not be the man, Auld first replied: "You will have to prove that first," but ultimately agreed that if proved, McMullen could not possibly be the man.

Another dramatic situation occurred as the witness completed his testimony and stepped from the witness box. Barring his exit, Attorney Norman Newton served him with subpoenaes as a witness for the defence in the case of William Ayres, George Anderson and John Yohn.

CLAIM ALIBI "AIR TIGHT."

SARNIA, June 14.—Declaring that Alpheus McKay had changed his story of the Wyoming bank robbery from that submitted at the prelminary hearings at Wyoming and Sarnia, John M. McEvoy of London, defending Edward A. McMullen, one of four London men charged with robbing that institution of $11,000 in October last, at the general sessions of the peace here this afternoon, was so insistent in his cross-examination that the witness in question finally shouted in the crowded courtroom that the evidence obtained by stenographers at the former trials must be "written down wrong."

While but two witnesses of any importance have testified since the trial opened at 9:30 today, with his honor Judge A. E. Taylor presiding, it can readily be concluded that counsel for the defence intend to wage a bitter fight for acquittal.

For two hours and a half did Attorney McEvoy cross-examine Harry S. Lambert, manager of the Wyoming branch of the Bank of Toronto, while Alpheus McKay, undertaker in the same community, was on the stand continuously from 4 p.m. until court adjourned at 5:30 p.m.

"Who was the man with the checkered coat who persisted in stepping over Manager Lambert as he lay on the floor of his office?"

Fails To Remember.

Answering this question, McKay declared emphatically that although he was down on his knees in the same room he did not remember seeing any other bandit than McMullen despite the manager's testimony to the contrary.

Reading extracts from McKay's evidence at the Sarnia preliminary hearing, Attorney McEvoy questioned him if he had not stated that Miss Vera MacIntosh, clerk in the bank, was escorted by a bandit into the manager's office and compelled to lie on the floor.

After a lengthy argument between the witness and counsel during which the latter accused McKay repeatedly of attempting to evade direct answers to his questions, the witness finally declared that his former statements must have been taken down incorrectly.

"I don't know whether she was brought in or not," the undertaker said. "I didn't see her, I just heard a bandit tell her to get down on the floor."

At the Wyoming hearing, Attorney McEvoy pointed out, Miss MacIntosh declared that she fled into the office in fright and got down upon her own initiative.

Repeating in effect what he related at the former hearings, McKay again pointed out McMullen as the man who entered the bank the afternoon of the robbery.

Cross-examined, he stated he had heard nothing about persons being "plugged or drilled."

"Did you have an introduction to Mrs. Koehler?" he was asked.

"No sir, I did not."

"Were you talking to her?"

"Oh, yes, once at the tea table."

"Who was entertaining you that day?"

Didn't Ask Introduction.

"Nobody," retorted the witness, vehemently protesting again that he didn't know Mrs. Koehler, had not desired an introduction, and "hadn't said much to her."

Witness was similarly emphatic in insisting that he had not been assisted by detectives in effecting his identification of the prisoners, and another jangle occurred with the defence counsel, when the latter held that his evidence conflicted with his testimony at Wyoming, that he had seen only one unmasked bandit.

Once again McKay charged deliberately that the evidence had been taken down wrong.

Mounting to the witness stand at 11 a.m. Harry S. Lambert related the story of the hold-up along similar lines to his tale at Wyoming and Sarnia. During a gruelling two hours or more of cross-examination, however, Lambert stated that he had no recollection of a $500 check being cashed the day following the robbery for H. B. Gadsden, inspector for the United States Trust Company.

When the inquiry resumed in the afternoon Lambert stated that without consulting the records he could not tell who occupied the teller's position before the present one, Taylor.

Answering Attorney McEvoy, he insisted that he had done everything in his power to apprehend the bandits after he himself escaped from the vault.

Questioned why he had not made better use of the telephone, he stated that he did call up London, Sarnia, Windsor and Toronto.

During his debate with defence counsel he declared, however, that "he could have pulled a gun on the bandits if he felt so inclined, as he had one in his desk."

Indicating, as already anticipated by The Advertiser, that the defence intends to strive to prove that McMullen possessed a moustache for several years preceding and several months after the robbery, considerable emphasis was directed toward Lambert's evidence that the alleged bandit was clean shaven.

Could Not Be Man.

Witness, after persistent questioning, admitted in effect that if it could be conclusively shown that he wore a moustache at that time then he could hardly be the man.

Seemingly losing his temper at this juncture, Lambert volunteered "You're giving more evidence than I am."

"I trust I am," shot back Attorney McEvoy.

After persistent cross-examination, Lambert admitted that he drove in a car throughout the country when officers showed photos of the prisoners to various witnesses, including Miss Dean of Warwick.

He would not admit, however that the latter had first selected as one of the bandits Carmen Mitchell.

"You differ with her," persisted Attorney McEvoy.

"Yes, she's wrong," he replied.

Miss Dean is the witness who admitted to Norman Newton, counsel for the prisoners, other than McMullen, that she had been in error as Mr. McEvoy claimed.

Relating his trip to London to view the suspects, Lambert stated that he had "Heard of the mysterious Mrs. Koehler." He was familiar with her story in a general way, he said, before he saw the prisoners.

He explained that he stayed at the Iroquois Hotel while a Pinkerton operative, named Faulkner, went out to see if he could locate the men. This was prior to their arrest. They did not see them on the street, however, he added.

"Then the police, on the strength of the Koehler woman's story, took a chance and arrested them anyhow," suggested Attorney McEvoy.

"Yes, I guess so."

Met Mrs. Koehler.

Describing his visit at the London jail, Lambert could not tell how the prisoners there were dressed. He did not know the difference between civilian and prison attire. He said he saw Mrs. Koehler walking with Faulkner in London, but was not introduced until the following day, when he met her at the Iroquois Hotel.

H. S. Koehler, husband of the crown's star witness, arrived here this afternoon, and will appear as a witness for the defence.

With a long array of witnesses yet to be called on both sides, it is improbable that McMullen's case will go to the jury before Friday at the earliest.

Following close upon the announcement tonight that an official investigation has been ordered by the attorney-general's department, Toronto, to ascertain if possible whether persons outside of the Lambton County Jail have been smuggling razors and other articles into the four alleged Wyoming bandits, comes the startling information from undisputed crown authority that a member of the legal profession is actually suspected, and that his arrest will be but a matter of hours should any substantial evidence to that effect be adduced.

Denied Use of Razors.

The members of the prosecution freely admitted to The Advertiser early tonight that it had been intended that the four prisoners be brought into court with faces shaved as near as possible as on the day of the robbery, to better enable, presumably, positive identification. For this reason they were denied the use of razors and other shaving material.

Great was the astonishment of the jail attendants, however, when, shortly before the court opened all four suspects were found with close-shaven faces.

A thorough search of their cell walls and ceiling failed to reveal razors, soap, or other necessities for the operation, although it is intimated that other material was located.

Closely questioned, the alleged bandits stated that they had used a piece of glass.

This could not be found, however, and the authorities place little credence in the explanation, suspecting outside assistance.

Meanwhile prisoners have been removed to other cells and extra guards are on duty at the county jail tonight.

As predicted by The Advertiser several days ago, counsel for the defense declared confidently tonight that "air-tight" alibis would be submitted by their clients.

"As an instance," he declared, "two of the men will be able to prove, we believe, that on day of robbery they were between two and three hundred miles from Wyoming."

HEART WOULD BEAT LIKE A TRIP HAMMER

Heart trouble has of late years become very prevalent. Sometimes a pain catches you in the region of the heart, now and then your heart skips beats, palpitates, throbs, or beats with such rapidity and violence you think it is going to burst.

You have weak and dizzy spells, sinking sensations, are nervous, irritable and depressed, and if you attempt to walk upstairs or any distance you get all out of breath.

We know of no remedy that will do so much to make the heart regain strength and vigor, regulate its beat and restore it to a healthy normal condition as will

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. Chadwick, Delhi, Ont., writes:—"I had palpitation of the heart, and the least exercise, such as going upstairs or up a hill, my heart would beat like a trip-hammer and at times I was dizzy-headed and had a sinking sensation as if my time were near.

"A friend suggested I try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, so I procured three boxes, and by the time the first one was used I began to improve. In all I took six boxes, and now although in my 66th year I feel like a young girl; no dizziness or heart-thumping, and can walk miles without fatigue. At time of sickness I weighed 120 lbs., now I weigh 150."

MONTREAL STOCKS

Montreal, June 15—12:30 p.m.—The feature of the stock exchange during the forenoon session was probably the prominence assumed in the trading by Laurentide; this, not so much because of the number of shares traded in, as because of the fact that Laurentide had been in retirement for a considerable time past by comparison with many other issues. The most active stock on the list was Brazilian. Prices for that stock, however, showed very little change. They are nearly 2 points below the high of the other day, and there is no association between fluctuations and prospects.

Outside of the two issues mentioned, Wabasso was the only other stock contributing many shares to the trading of the forenoon. This issue continues strong at yesterday's advance to 80. No price changes of importance took place throughout the list, and the market was almost without feature.

Winnipeg, June 15.—Incendiarism is suspected as the cause of the fire which wiped out the business district of the town of Elma, 55 miles east of Winnipeg, with an estimated loss of $50,000, early yesterday. Three stores, three warehouses and two stables were burned to the ground, and several families were rendered homeless.

Oats—July, 35⅜c; Sept., 37½c.

Chicago, June 15.—Forecasts of cooler weather in the Southwest turned wheat prices downward today after a brief display of strength at the opening. Initial gains were due to continued unfavorable crop conditions for winter wheat, but prospects for cooler temperature acted quickly as more than an offset. Good rains in the spring wheat belt counted also as a bearish factor. The opening, which ranged from ¼c to ¾c higher, was followed by slight further gains, and then by a setback all around to well below yesterday's finish.

Corn followed the changes in wheat, and after opening ⅜c off to ¼c advance, underwent a general sag.

Unfavorable crop reports gave strength to the oats market, which opened 1⅛c to 1¼c to ⅝c higher, later scoring additional gains before beginning to react.
